It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE

THOUGH it is hoped that the present edition of the Frogs may be found to contribute to the exegesis and criticism of the play in a sufficient measure to deserve some attention from scholars, its aim is primarily educational. For that reason a few lines or short passages are omitted. Fortunately but little textual innovation is anywhere needed, and the critical notes have been reduced to the smallest workable compass. Such novelties of interpretation or reading as are offered have been presented with as much simplicity as I could command. A paedagogic work, it may be assumed, is no place for encyclopaedic display.

It is now generally recognised that, if classical studies are to retain their due place in liberal culture, it will be necessary to lend to them in their earlier stages something more of human interest than was formerly imparted. The Frogs is a play which from the nature of its contents, the liveliness and variety of its humour, and the comparative ease of its vocabulary, is excellently suited for the reading of sixth-form students and undergraduates. Certainly no comic masterpiece could better serve as an introduction to the study of that form of Greek literature. But while to neglect a rigorous grammatical training is to encourage flaccidity of the mental sinews, grammar must go with reasonable historical comprehension, literary appreciation, and as much mental visualisation as may be possible. The present work, therefore, attempts not only a due consideration of the language, but also exegesis of the play as a live creation of wit and humour presented in an actual theatre, before an actual audience of intelligent and rather critical people.

The question which an editor presumably asks himself is, "what should I have liked to be told—or what would it have been desirable for me to be told—when I was myself at the educational stage for which this book is intended?" and that query he can only meet to the best of his judgment. It is in answer to this question that the sections of the Introduction dealing with comic metre and language have been included.

The matters there contained are of course familiar to all advanced scholars, and may be regarded as elementary. But average experience would probably confess that they have often been picked up later in life than they ought. That they should be known by all students who approach Aristophanes is undeniable; but it is equally undeniable that many of them are commonly not then known. Had I been aware of any place accessible to the average student in which they were set forth with due brevity, this book would have been content with a reference thereto.

The section of the Introduction dealing with the Mysteries is reprinted with very slight alterations from the Classical Review, where the argument that the Lesser, and not the Greater, Mysteries are concerned was accepted by the high authority of Dr. Jane Harrison. It is hoped that the clarification of the turbid arrangement at vv. 1437 (= 1442) sqq. may find a measure of approval, and that some consideration may be merited by such interpretative suggestions as are made at vv. 1202 sqq., 185-187, 194, 308, 320, 377, 607, 653 sq., 657, 684 sq., 708 sqq., 750 sqq., 791, 875 sqq., 903 sqq., 906, 965, 1133, and elsewhere.

In preparing the book I have necessarily derived help from the work of Thiersch, Fritzsche, Koch, Blaydes, van Leeuwen, and Merry. I have also found profit in Prof. Murray's translation of the play, Rutherford's Scholia Aristophanica, and Mr. Starkie's edition of the Wasps. I regret that I could not see the work of Mr. Rogers till my own was printing. Had the late Mr. R. A. Neil lived to edit the Frogs there would probably have been no real room for anything further for the next generation.

INTRODUCTION

A. DATE AND MOTIVES OF THE PLAY

THE Frogs of Aristophanes was produced at the Lenaea (i.e. early in February) of the year 405 B.C. and won the first prize on that occasion. Phrynichus was second with his Musae and Plato third with a Cleophon.

Apart from the primary purpose of the play as an entertainment for the theatre-going public, it possesses other aims usual with the Old Comedy. The comic drama of the fifth century assumes as within its province the caustic treatment of all kinds of social, political and artistic questions of the hour. This it does with no merely humorous intention, although it goes without saying that the manner of presentation must always seek the true aim of comedy, which, according to Aristotle, is τὸ γέλοισιν, or the presentation of τὸ αἰσχροπρὸν (in its wide sense) on the ludicrous side. With the Old Comedy the laughter of the audience (τὸ θέατρον) is, however, not solely an end in itself; it is provoked by ridicule applied as one of the most potent of social correctives. There is of course in this, as in any other, comedy a proportion of what is simply good-natured banter, which commentators are apt to interpret too literally ; but for the most part the ridicule, sarcasms and scurrilities are seriously meant and are prompted by strong feeling, be it political or aesthetic partisanship, or, as one is sometimes driven to suspect, sheer personal animus. Banter, repartee and personalities of the kind known as γεφυρυσμός formed a recognised and privileged part of the festival of Dionysus in general, and it was not strange that they were also introduced into that portion of the festival which took place in the theatre. Nor is it strange that the comedians should claim privilege or expect the victim κομωδιθεὶς ἐν ταῖς πατρίοις τελεταῖς ταῖς τοῦ Διονύσου (v. 368) to bear their onslaughts, as Socrates is said to have borne that of the Clouds, with as good a grace as possible. Even the gods (like Dionysus in this play) did not ask to be spared. Between the various comic dramatists who competed from year to year there was scarcely a citizen of any public prominence, pronounced peculiarity, or reprehensible character, who could expect to escape his turn of comment or caricature. Aristophanes, indeed, prides himself on leaving alone the ἰδιώτης (v. 459), but there were few Athenians who were absolutely ἰδιῶται in the sense that they were neither brought officially, nor in some way brought themselves, under public notice. Had the comedians been of all parties and views, and had their works all survived, it would probably have appeared to the casual modern reader as if the whole population of Athens deserved the verdict passed by the king of Brobdingnag on the world described by Gulliver. The more philosophic student would, of course, realise that comedy is not on oath, and that the function of caricature is to caricature. As it is, we possess, besides Aristophanes, only fragments of his contemporaries, and the reader has been too ready to take the word of the prince of comedians as if it were sober historical record. When he appears to be supported by the remains of other comic writers, or by what we learn of their work, it is not sufficiently remembered that the comedians belonged in the main to the same class, swayed by the same motives, and that the purpose of all alike was to ridicule such persons or proceedings as seemed most open to ridicule from their point of view. And among these the prominent politician and the propagandist are always fair game.

The Frogs is not only, as the Greek preface puts it, a highly entertaining drama τῶν ἐν πάρῳ καὶ φιλολόγῳ πεποιημένων, but it plays its full part in the political and aesthetic purposes above mentioned. To understand the piece we must understand both the political and literary position of the moment, and we must also comprehend the attitude of Aristophanes himself as partisan and critic.

The last year had witnessed the death of the two younger members of the great tragic trio. Euripides, who had retired from Athens in 408 B.C. to the court of the Macedonian Archelaus, died early in 406 B.C.; Sophocles followed at the end of the same year. There was left no poet worthy to supply their place, and tragedy was now in much the same position as that of English poetry after the demise of Tennyson, Browning and Matthew Arnold. Of the numerous 'minor poets' with pretensions to succeed the great masters, Agathon was apparently acknowledged to be the best. He had won success (416 B.C.) even during the vogue of Sophocles and Euripides, but except for old fragments and the information given by Aristotle that he was the first to invent an entirely fictitious tragic plot, and that his choric lyrics were often mere interludes, we are in no position to judge of his creative and other artistic powers. But, whatever his merits, he had now retired, as Euripides had done, to a quieter abode in Macedonia. Iophon, the son of Sophocles, enjoyed repute, but there was much doubt as to the extent to which he was dependent on his father's help. Xenocles and other composers appear to have been little more than poetasters, although Xenocles had to his credit a victory over Euripides in 414 B.C.

Such was the position of the tragic drama when the time came for Aristophanes to present his comedy for the Lenaea of February 405 B.C. The new tragedies must be forthcoming in a few weeks at the Great Dionysia, and among the competitors (who were presumably known already) would necessarily be writers whom the comedian held in lively contempt. The moment was an eminently suitable one for a piece with such an argument as that of the Frogs. But to deliver a number of shrewd blows at the various tragic aspirants is only a minor part of the object of Aristophanes. With higher purpose he prepares to employ his wit in correcting or directing taste itself. And for this end he devises a trial and a judgment of the respective merits of those two great masters who were most completely opposed to each other over the whole field of tragic art—Aeschylus and Eurifunction of caricature is to caricature. As it is, we possess, besides Aristophanes, only fragments of his contemporaries, and the reader has been too ready to take the word of the prince of comedians as if it were sober historical record. When he appears to be supported by the remains of other comic writers, or by what we learn of their work, it is not sufficiently remembered that the comedians belonged in the main to the same class, swayed by the same motives, and that the purpose of all alike was to ridicule such persons or proceedings as seemed most open to ridicule from their point of view. And among these the prominent politician and the propagandist are always fair game.

The Frogs is not only, as the Greek preface puts it, a highly entertaining drama τῶν εἰς πάντα καὶ φιλολόγους πεποιημένων, but it plays its full part in the political and aesthetic purposes above mentioned. To understand the piece we must understand both the political and literary position of the moment, and we must also comprehend the attitude of Aristophanes himself as partisan and critic.

The last year had witnessed the death of the two younger members of the great tragic trio. Euripides, who had retired from Athens in 408 B.C. to the court of the Macedonian Archelaus, died early in 406 B.C.; Sophocles followed at the end of the same year. There was left no poet worthy to supply their place, and tragedy was now in much the same position as that of English poetry after the demise of Tennyson, Browning and Matthew Arnold. Of the numerous 'minor poets' with pretensions to succeed the great masters, Agathon was apparently acknowledged to be the best. He had won success (416 B.C.) even during the vogue of Sophocles and Euripides, but except for odd fragments and the information given by Aristotle that he was the first to invent an entirely fictitious tragic plot, and that his choric lyrics were often mere interludes, we are in no position to judge of his creative and other artistic powers. But, whatever his merits, he had now retired, as Euripides had done, to a quieter abode in Macedonia. Iophon, the son of Sophocles, enjoyed repute, but there was much doubt as to the extent to which he was dependent on his father's help. Xenocles and other composers appear to have been little more than poetasters, although Xenocles had to his credit a victory over Euripides in 414 B.C.

Such was the position of the tragic drama when the time came for Aristophanes to present his comedy for the Lenaea of February 405 B.C. The new tragedies must be forthcoming in a few weeks at the Great Dionysia, and among the competitors (who were presumably known already) would necessarily be writers whom the comedian held in lively contempt. The moment was an eminently suitable one for a piece with such an argument as that of the Frogs. But to deliver a number of shrewd blows at the various tragic aspirants is only a minor part of the object of Aristophanes. With higher purpose he prepares to employ his wit in correcting or directing taste itself. And for this end he devises a trial and a judgment of the respective merits of those two great masters who were most completely opposed to each other over the whole field of tragic art—Aeschylus and Euripides. Though without any studied formality, Aristophanes virtually anticipates the analysis which Aristotle makes of the elements of a tragedy, namely the plot (ὁ μῦθος or τὰ πρᾶγματα), the characters (τὰ ἥθη), the thought (ἡ διάνοια), the language (ἡ λέξις), the music (ἡ μελοποιία), and the scenic effects (ἡ ὄψις). To his mind Euripides was not only inferior to Aeschylus, but also a prophet of false taste, in all these elements. Aristophanes does not, indeed, regard the elder master as perfect, especially in the matter of lucidity of language and variety of music; but in Euripides plot, character, thought, language, music and scenic presentation all alike tend to be undignified, trivial, repellent to sound taste, moral and aesthetic. There is free and humorous criticism of Aeschylus by Euripides, and much of this must be taken as representing the actual opinion of the comedian; there is more fiercely humorous criticism of Euripides by Aeschylus, and of this the earnestness is beyond all doubt. For comic purposes it would obviously never have done to pit the perfect writer against the imperfect. Both art and interest required that the 'forensic dispute' (ἔλεγχος) so beloved by an Athenian audience, whether in tragedy or comedy, should admit of strong argument on either side, and there could be no such dispute if the one side were flawless. Some have hurriedly suspected that this is a reason why Sophocles is not brought into the dispute. But Aristophanes unequivocally places Sophocles below Aeschylus, and therefore cannot have regarded him as perfection. The explanation of the 'sitting out' of Sophocles is surely not so far to seek. A triangular contest is manifestly unmanageable; Sophocles does not offer the same uncompromising contrast of the old school with the new; the smoothness of his genius leaves no conspicuous handles for the humorous caricature to which the more massive but less finished genius of Aeschylus lends itself. Moreover, the character of Sophocles (v. 82) made him the sort of man whom the comedian had no desire to caricature immediately after his death. But a more obvious consideration is that (as the dates would show) the Frogs was already in process of composition, that at least it must have been designed, before the actual decease of Sophocles. The allusions to Sophocles are all of the kind which could easily be incorporated or added without disturbing the original conception of the piece.

Having adopted the notion of holding a trial of the respective representatives of tragic drama right and wrong, the comedian must find a motive for the occurrence of such a trial, and his device is of the happiest. Dionysus, god of the tragic stage, is troubled at the outlook, and is much concerned for his coming festival. Finding no worthy poet living, he must seek one from among the dead. But, until he is converted towards the end of the play, he is infected with the prevailing bad taste of the contemporary Athenian theatre—that is to say, his model poet is Euripides. In fact Dionysus is an embodiment of the rather muddled judgment of the Athenian ‘gallery.’ He does not visit Hades in order to select, but in order to fetch his already selected Euripides. The trial of the poets which actually ensues is a perfectly natural outcome of a quarrel, deftly introduced between the tragedians themselves. Their dispute is judged by Dionysus, who is gradually converted to sounder taste and gives his verdict in favour of Aeschylus.

It is doubtless true that Aristophanes invented neither the notion of resurrecting eminent men nor that of holding a trial of their merits. Eupolis in his Demi recalls Solon, Pericles and others from the grave in order to advise a helpless community, and Cratinus had in one piece pitted Homer against Archilochus. There were probably other examples of the same devices. But such notions, once invented, belong to any man, and, for the purposes of comic art, all depends upon the easy sequence and deft handling of the circumstances.

In his judgment of poetry Aristophanes, like most, though by no means all, of his contemporaries, blends considerations of art with considerations of morals, in the widest sense of that term. It is perhaps doubtful whether his censure of Euripides on the artistic side would have been quite so severe, if he had not felt constrained to pass even more severe censure upon his ethical (and therewith political) influence. In ancient Greece a poet was a power, and, being listened to by immense audiences and read and recited by a larger circle than any orator could reach, it was not unnatural that his function should commonly be regarded as including that of a teacher. His effect upon his generation was somewhat like those of the modern preacher, novelist, essayist and poet combined. It was therefore almost impossible for an ancient critic to separate the question of the poet's claim to be an artist (ἀετιός) from his claim to wisdom and knowledge (σοφία) and sound admonition (πυθέρια) in the domain of boni mores. Each of these aspects of Aeschylus and Euripides respectively is reviewed in the Frogs. And in none does Euripides escape condemnation. Here, as elsewhere, the judgment necessarily depends on the point of view, and to Aristophanes no other conclusion was possible.

The comedian was conservative, in politics, in religion, in ethics, in manners, and in taste. He disliked innovation, and, though he claims to be a friend of democracy, he undisguisedly detested the rule of the rabble. He believed in the political predominance of men of birth and culture—for such is the meaning of his καλοὶ καγαθοὶ or βέλτιστοι; under them, he held, the state was kept on a steadier, more provident, and more dignified course. On the other hand ochlocracy, led by demagogues, meant unwisdom in foreign policy, capriciousness, suspicion, prejudice, dishonesty and extravagance in internal affairs. We need not accept the view that either Cleon or Cleophon was really the coarse and corrupt person described by Aristophanes; nor need we believe that the fuller democracy of the date of the Frogs either deserves to be called an ochlocracy, or was guilty of more selfishness or folly than would have existed under the virtual oligarchy to which the comedian was in his heart inclined. Least of all must we accept at its face value the licensed ridicule and scurrility of a keen opponent. Our business is simply to recognise the opinion of Aristophanes, so far as it is unmistakable under the colouring of his comic emphasis. And it is unmistakable that he was politically a reactionary, aristocratically disposed, with his full share of class prejudice, and incapable of judging fairly men whose lack of exterior culture and defects of taste he probably had reason enough to condemn, but who may have been as able and honest as any καλὸς καὶγαθός among their opponents.

To Aristophanes the steps in fuller democracy and the power of demagogism were not merely distasteful; they caused the gravest apprehension. Leaving for the moment the immediate condition of domestic and foreign politics, it must be observed that in his mind the growth of ochlocracy was intimately connected with a number of new tendencies which found their most potent expression in the poetry of Euripides. These included religious scepticism and new ethical speculations, which weakened the public loyalty to ancient standards of conduct. For example Aristophanes chooses to interpret Euripides as appealing to novel and inane deities (889 sqq.), denying the obligation of an oath (101 sq., 1471), and declaring that nothing is base unless 'thinking makes it so' (1475). Again, the (for the times) ultra-democratic spirit of Euripides shows itself in his sympathetic treatment of the facts of common life, and in the comparative importance which he allows to the lowly, to women, and to slaves. This 'teaching' was as alarming to the reactionaries as threats of socialism are apt to be at the present day. As understood by Aristophanes, scepticism, 'sophistry,' and social deterioration went together. The casuistical argumentation represented by a Socrates or a Euripides was the pernicious agent of moral disintegration. And as a consequence both public and social life were being delased. Meanwhile Aeschylus represented the old school, in which character was more simple, heroic, or 'Homeric,' and standards more fixed and obeyed, and under which Athenians cultivated deeds rather than talk, while low men, women and slaves were kept in their proper background.

Meanwhile with the faults of Euripides as a teacher went faults as an artist. His fancy for clothing his tragic hero in rags and trusting to the scenic effect of these and of lameness, instead of relying upon the inherent pathos of the situation; his unseasonable fondness for casuistry; his monotony of style and versification in his prologues; his frequent trivialities of theme and expression; his undignified innovations in the music of his choruses, with their 'variations,' rapid runs and 'shakes'; these and other characteristics were to Aristophanes so many artistic sins, which were not only censurable as such, but also betrayed the same Euripidean disregard of authority and sound tradition. The play itself will make clear the respects in which Euripides is treated as aesthetically a wrongdoer.

It has already been said that, to the mind of Aristophanes, such innovations were bound up with dangerous political tendencies. The state of things at Athens was, indeed, anything but reassuring, although it is in the highest degree doubtful whether fuller democracy or even demagogism was to blame. The evils of Athens during the latter half of the Peloponnesian War are at least as distinctly, if not more distinctly, traceable to oligarchical machinations; and that such machinations were in progress in 405 B.C. is clear from the events of the next year. Since the revolution of the Four Hundred in 411 B.C. there had prevailed no confidence or sense of security between parties, and, on the whole, the behaviour of the 'people' had been more just and temperate than that of its opponents.

The questions at issue were partly internal, partly of external politics, and the two were mutually involved. The chief internal question was that of public burdens and expenditure, and these were necessarily conditioned to a great extent by the existence of peace or war. The long continuance of the struggle with the Peloponnesians caused a severe drain upon the resources as well as the pleasures of the well-to-do. The *φίμω*s of the confederate states might perhaps have met the requirements of the war itself; but meanwhile there had also been an increasing demand for payment of the assembly, the juries and the theoric fund. The richer citizens felt that they were likely to be taxed out of existence; they recognised in the leaders of the popular party (παρατάται τοῦ ὄμιλου) their natural enemies; they were therefore not only in favour of concluding peace, but also of reducing the assembly and jury fees, if not of abolishing them altogether. Their sympathies were naturally not so alien to the oligarchical Sparta, and, on that account and because of the obvious pecuniary self-interest, the efforts of the peace party were looked upon with suspicion by the general body of purer democrats.

To the well-to-do Athenian the ideal condition of things would thus have included peace, abolition of payment of fees, and therewith a considerable narrowing of the deliberative, judicial and administrative functions to their own leisured class. Hence the attempt of the oligarchs in 411 B.C. and the more tyrannous establishment of the Thirty in 404 B.C.

Hence also the strenuous counter-policy of democratic leaders like Cleophon. That counter policy did not, it is true, necessarily involve the prosecution of the war. Democracy could have had its way at home without being compelled meanwhile to fight the Peloponnesians. But the war certainly kept a large number of the poorer citizens in receipt of daily pay, while the burden of supplying this fell partly upon the taxed allies and partly upon the richer Athenians. Moreover, the continuance of the war meant antagonism to the principle of oligarchy as represented by Sparta. Yet, when all this is said, we can hardly refuse to acknowledge that the privations and dangers of every order of citizens were so great that the war-party must have been impelled by a genuine spirit of patriotism. The superb efforts after crushing losses, the refusals to make peace on apparently easy terms, the persistence in manning warships, are not to be accounted for by the desire to earn three obols a day. And, as Grote has fully pointed out, we are in no fair position to discuss the wisdom or unwisdom of men like Cleophon, when they refused to hear of peace on the terms proposed after the battle of Cyzicus or of Arginusae. Gallant spirit and fair prospects may have been ample justification for a politician and a party who had good reason for suspecting the motives of those who were most energetic in the cause of peace. That Athens would ultimately fail could hardly have been so foregone a conclusion before the battle of Aegospotami as it seems to us after that event.

At Athens there were doubtless 'Moderates' or a middle party, whose fate was that of such persons all the world over. Determining their proposals, which might be the wisest possible, by the exigences of the immediate case, they laid themselves open to a charge of inconsistency or worse. They were called opportunists and turncoats. Most conspicuous among these was Theramenes, whose character and conduct appear to be at length securing fairer treatment. And less distinctly before the public there must have been a body of thoughtful and reasonable men whose efforts went towards reconciling the two chief parties. Most of these would naturally uphold a real democracy, but a democracy which should abstain from bribing itself with extortions from either the allies or the rich; they would for the most part desire peace, so soon as peace could be obtained on anything like equitable terms; they would do their best to remove the reciprocal jealousies and suspicions which harassed the state. To this party Aristophanes claims to belong, and probably believed that he did belong. His avowed aims are peace, democracy on just principles, and a general wiping of old jealousies off the slate. Yet it is impossible to read him without perceiving that he himself can show no fairness towards the popular leaders, that he is only restrained by prudential reasons from proposing a virtual oligarchy, and that he actually goes near to suggesting it. He is often obviously feeling the pulse of his audience, and his consequent action is admirably deft, with just that spice of audacity in suggestion or reproof which a democracy loves, but without much serious self-committal. His attacks upon individuals like Cleophon and Cleigenes are uncompromising enough; but it requires little experience of a democracy to recognise that a party will laugh at the strongest caricature of its leader, so long as the attack is not ostensibly made upon itself. Men do not particularly mind being called 'lions led by asses,' and this is practically the general assertion of Aristophanes. If occasionally he alleges that they allow demagogues to make fools of them, he insists that the foolishness is not natural, but the contrary: also they are never knaves. At his boldest his chorus speaks under 'privilege of the festival,' while he can always personally disclaim the views which happen to be dramatically fit in the mouths of his characters. It is edifying to observe how in the Frogs he puts out feelers concerning the recall of Alcibiades without direct expression of his own views. Meanwhile he makes no secret of his view that peace is the best policy. All credit must, of course, be given to the Athenian toleration of παρρησία, and probably no personal harm could have come to the poet from the most outspoken partisanship. But he was at the same time a dramatist contending for a prize, and had no wish to alienate the greater part of his audience.

To us, after the event, it might seem that in the Frogs Aristophanes shows himself a master of political wisdom. He recommends an amnesty of parties, and he urges peace. In a very short time (after Aegospotami) the course of restoring to their franchise all the citizens who had lost it was approved and carried out; also in a very short time the war ended in the complete defeat of Athens. But these facts are insufficient as data for proving that Cleophon was an incompetent knave or Theramenes an unpatriotic self-seeker. They simply show that in the circumstances the poet and his party may claim to have given the best advice.

Though politics are not the primary subject of the Frogs, the references to them are sufficiently numerous, while (except as usual in the parabasis) they come in without awkwardness or forcing. The tragic poet's qualifications, it has been said above, included practical σοφία, and his function included teaching and admonition. Therefore, in choosing between Aeschylus and Euripides, it was necessary to give prime consideration to the advice (γνώμη) which each was likely to offer at a critical time. And undoubtedly the time was critical. History tells us little of the condition of Athens during the months after the victory of Arginusæ and the blundering trial of the admirals. That Athens made no progress after that victory is sufficiently evident, but there is nothing in professed history to tell us exactly what the prospect was like before the collapse of Aegospotami. It is, however, somewhat surprising that so little of the truth has been gleaned from the present play, which is the most trustworthy document for the interval. From the Frogs it may be gathered with certainty that the outlook was almost desperate. Aristophanes implies this without feeling called upon to argue it. The country is κημάτων ἐν ἀγκάλας (704). The assumption throughout is that the best for which there is hope is σωτηρία. The prayer of the mystæ is for σωτηρία (381, 386); the advice demanded of the rival poets is to be such as will secure σωτηρία (1419, 1436); the need of men to fight in the navy is so great that all who will so fight should be made citizens (701 sq.); even then the country may come to grief (736), but it will do so without disgrace. According to the true interpretation of v. 685 there is implied a doubt as to the possibility of now obtaining a treaty on reasonable terms. The whole tone of the political allusions is the tone of a man who simply hopes that the worst will not happen, and who recognises that a last united effort is the only chance of averting it.

After the putting down of the oligarchical revolution of the Four Hundred in 411 B.C. the punishment of the participants had been severe. Many were in exile, many were ἀτιμοί, either as condemned for public treachery or else through inability to pay fines imposed upon them. According to Aristophanes the state was thus losing the services of many of its most useful citizens 'through one slip' (into which, he pleads, they had been lured by Phrynichus), and was also perpetuating the bad feeling which increased the internal insecurity. He pleads that they should be restored to their lost status, and that all citizens should thus be 'put on a level.' Meanwhile it is beyond question that the intrigues of their party were proceeding actively, if covertly, and that the prospects of the war were not improved thereby. The signal victory of Cyzicus (410 B.C.) and the destruction of the Lacedaemonian fleet, it is true, once placed Athens in a position to secure peace on very favourable terms. That these offers were rejected, mainly through the influence of Cleophon, is perhaps not surprising. The country had reason to hope for an issue better still. Upon other successes, in which Alcibiades had been a chief instrument, there followed the irregular and only partially legitimised return of that brilliant adventurer to Athens (408-407 B.C.) and the high hopes placed in his ability and promises. Beyond the showy action of enabling, by his military escort, the Eleusinian procession to follow the orthodox land-route for the first time for several years (i.e. since the Peloponnesian occupation of Deceleia), Alcibiades achieved practically nothing. Deposed from his generalship, he had withdrawn in dudgeon to his own possessions in the Chersonese (406 B.C.). Nevertheless in the present year he was still considered the only leader capable of some great exploit which might prevent the ruin of Athens, and it is evident from the Frogs that his recall was being unofficially debated. Returning, however, to the time immediately after his deposition (406), we find his successor Conon blocked up by the Peloponnesians in Mitylene, and thereupon a desperate and magnificent effort by which the last armada of Athens sailed to relieve him. When the fight of Arginusae (406) had resulted in the complete rout of the Peloponnesians and the liberation of Conon, the people showed its lively gratitude by the rare act of setting free the slaves who had taken part in the engagement. Unhappily the omission of the admirals to recover their dead and shipwrecked compatriots after the victory brought about the rather complicated events of their unfair trial and condemnation. The 'true inwardness' of these occurrences we are hardly likely to discover, but that the relations of the oligarchical and democratic parties were once more involved is almost indisputable. Be that as it may, the victory produced for Athens little solid good externally and no small harm at home. It prevented immediate collapse without restoring her fortunes. That the Lacedaemonians offered peace on the terms of status quo is a statement discredited by Grote on very reasonable grounds. In the months which followed the fleet did nothing to improve the Athenian position, and, though the blunder and disaster of Aegospotami could not be foreseen, the straits of the city must have been very great and the signs of exhaustion unmistakable.

It was amid such circumstances that Aristophanes brought on the Frogs at the Lenaea of February 405 B.C.

According to the πρόθεσις, quoting Dicaearchus (a pupil of Aristotle), the piece was so much liked 'because of its parabasis' that it was put on the stage a second time. Exactly when this reproduction would occur is not clear. It may possibly have been on the day called Χίτροι of the Anthesteria, although it is more natural to think of the Great Dionysia. That there were two productions, and that the second contained certain variations from the first, is universally allowed. In the extant text the two versions are confused at least in vv. 1437 sqq., where the commentary should be seen. Events had not moved far during the interval, but the poet doubtless found sufficient reasons for modifying certain lines in the light of more immediate circumstances. In the passage 1252 sqq. (q.v.) there is an appearance of alternativeness about two short passages in the lyrics, but it is hard to perceive a reason for the substitution of one for the other, and there is nothing improbable in regarding both as belonging to the first version, the tautology (if such it can be called) being justified by the fact that the lines are a parody. In any case it is difficult to believe, with Van Leeuwen, that before the second performance members of the audience were possessed of copies of the play, in which their comprehension of the points was assisted by notes of reference. vv. 1109 sqq. should be otherwise interpreted.

At first sight it appears strange that the play should be named from the frogs which play so small a part in it. The true chorus is composed of the μύρται, while the frogs are but a comparatively inconsiderable παρωκλήριον. Why, then, did not Aristophanes call the play Μύρται? Two reasons may be assigned, each sufficient in itself. The sacredness of the mysteries would suggest that Μύρται as the announced title of a comedy might be prejudicial. However harmless might prove to be the part played by the mystae, it would naturally appear beforehand as if the mysteries were threatened with some ridicule. Apart from this consideration it is to be remembered that in its origins comedy revelled in the imitation of animals, comic action and licence being rendered more ludicrous by such disguises. The Old Comedy, therefore, still affected such animal choruses (Σφῆκες, Ψῆρες, etc.), partly from force of tradition, and probably more because the audiences looked for them and were attracted by the corresponding titles. A title, after all, is but a convenient short label whereby to identify a play, and, while the choice lay between μύρται and βάρπυχοι (since it would be hard to think of any single word descriptive of the action and thought of the piece), the latter possessed the superior claims on both the grounds above stated.

The choice of the μύρται is prompted by fairly obvious motives. What equally suitable body of persons could the comedian find in Ilades? The initiated alone are there so situated that they can still sport and dance as the comic chorus requires. Moreover they are Athenians, acquainted with local circumstance and able to make the necessary local references. When Aristophanes was met by the question who were to form his chorus, he hit upon what was probably the only satisfactory answer. Nor should the nearness of the Little Mysteries of the Anthesteria be overlooked (see next section of this Introduction).

B. THE MYSTERIES REFERRED TO IN THE FROGS

It has been universally assumed that the μίσται in the Frogs are represented as carrying Iacchus from Athens to Eleusis in the procession of the Greater Eleusinia, and that the proclamation, hymns, and dances are intended to recall, as far as εἰσέβεια permitted, those which belonged to that occasion. The difficulties raised by the assumption are, however, very great, though they appear to have been strangely overlooked. The various scholia lend no help worth considering.

We may first summarise the proceedings of the Greater Mysteries so far as they concern interpretation.

The πρόρρησις of the Archon Basileus, Hierophant, and Daduchus in the Stoa Poikile on the 16th of Boedromion (about the end of September) was followed by the ceremony of purification known as ἄλαδε μίσται, and this by sacrifices. On the 19th—20th the initiated went in procession to the Ἰακχεῖον in the city, took thence the statue of the child Iacchus, and carried it with shouts, songs, and ceremonies through the Sacred Gate and along the Sacred Road to Eleusis. The procession started in the forenoon. It arrived at Eleusis towards midnight. The following days till the 23rd were occupied at Eleusis with the mystic observances, including παννυχίδες. Of these it was rank impiety to tell, and any attempt to mimic them was visited with the heaviest punishment.

Now we might concede that though Dionysus, under that name, is without part in the Greater Eleusinia, yet Iacchus and Bacchus were commonly identified in the popular mind, and therefore there would be a certain justification for the comedian thus introducing the Eleusinian Iacchus procession into a play for the festival of Dionysus. There would also, we may admit, be no impiety in putting on the stage that prelude to the mysteries which all the world was allowed to see.

Nevertheless we have to meet the following questions:—

(1) What is meant in v. 324 by Ἰακχ', ὦ πολίτιμοῖς ἐν ἔδραις ἐνθάδε ναίων? Where is ἐνθάδε? There was apparently no Iaccheum at Eleusis. And what is meant by the next words ἐλθὲ τόνδ' ἀνὰ λειμῶνα χορεύων? Where is 'this' meadow? Are we to suppose that it was near the said temple of Iacchus in Athens? Yet it is hardly conceivable that there was any meadow thus near the temple, i.e. on the way from the Iaccheum as one started towards Eleusis. If it is argued that the allusion is to the temple in which Iacchus was lodged at Eleusis, and that the meadow is there, the notion that there is a representation of the procession at starting must be abandoned. There has apparently been a complete confusion of thought on the part of readers, whose minds have glided from a temple of Iacchus at Athens to a meadow at Eleusis without being aware of the fact. The language of Aristophanes does not permit of this easy transit.

(2) According to current accounts the procession left the Iaccheum somewhat early in the day. Yet in Aristophanes the torches are all blazing (vv. 340 sqq.). This state of things, though possible, is hardly probable. Doubtless torches sometimes appear lighted on the vases even when the procession looks as if it might belong to the daytime, but in reality either the vase-scene is one of the night-time or else the lighting of the torch is an artistic convention. If we were already in the meadow at Eleusis at night the situation would, of course, be more natural; but then we are not starting from Athens.

(3) Where and at what time is the proclamation of vv. 354 sqq. supposed to be made? What is the succession of events? It is hard to reconcile the sequence here with what we are told of the order at the Greater Eleusinia.

These are but the weaker objections. They are perhaps answerable. Some might plead that the torches of the procession may in point of fact have been lighted in the forenoon, their purpose being purely symbolic. It might also be hazarded that a second or final πρόρρησις may have been made at the Ἰακχεῖον just before the start. Furthermore it might be argued that Aristophanes is compressing into brief space various proceedings of the procession and its preliminaries, and also proceedings on arrival at Eleusis, without regard to exact order or to literal correctness of time and place. These imaginary replies are, of course, very unsatisfactory.

If, on the other hand, we abandon the common notion and imagine ourselves already at Eleusis, near the temple in which Iacchus was there installed, we shall be obliged to modify our views concerning the reticence demanded of those—only μύρται—who were there present.

But there is a still more difficult question. (4) What is the special appropriateness of introducing the September mysteries of Eleusis into a play belonging to the Lenaea of February? The current theory seems to be that Athens was exulting over the exploit of Alcibiades, who had safely conducted the procession to Eleusis by land, after the Deceleian occupation had prevented it for years. But, apart from the fact that the play makes no reference whatever to this occurrence, the year of that convoyed procession was 407, while the date of the play is 405. There is no proof that the land procession could be resumed in 406, and people do not exult over a thing which they managed to do the year before last, but which they have been unable to do last year. Moreover the exultation seems in any case somewhat belated.

There are other considerations which may throw light on the problem. These lead to the conclusion that the reference is not to the Greater Mysteries at Eleusis but to the Lesser Mysteries at Athens. These, which were called ἐν Ἀγῶν (or Ἀγῶν) and took place in spring, were a smaller copy and a kind of introductory rehearsal of the Greater Eleusinia. They were celebrated in the outskirts of Athens just across the Ilissus beyond the Limnao from the Lenaeum. These mysteries were to take place in a month from the production of the Frogs; nor is it impossible that the Frogs would be actually repeated at the dramatic performances which appear to have taken place on the Χίτροι of the Anthesteria.

The ceremonies at Agra (or Agrae) concerned originally the same deities as at Eleusis, but with a difference in their relative importance which corresponds to the order of precedence in the Frogs. There was a similar arrangement of the temples of the two goddesses, and the rites and ceremonies were in the main analogous, although those at Agrae were of a preparatory and, in a sense, a more popular nature.

That Aristophanes had these celebrations in mind, and not those of Eleusis, is rendered almost certain by the following considerations:

(a) The introduction of the mysteries into a play intended for the festival of Dionysus is made the more accountable and natural. With Eleusis Dionysus is scarcely concerned. But in the mysteries at Agrae he is united with Persephone, to whom, as the Spring Goddess, the festival in reality belonged. For his prominence in these see Dr. Harrison's Prolegomena to Greek Religion pp. 560 sq.

(b) The temple in which Iacchus dwells (ἐνθάδε), beside a marshy meadow (τόνδε λειμῶνα, also called in v. 352 ἐλαιοῦ δάπεδον), is most easily conceivable as a temple of Dionysus-Iacchus by the Ilissus.

(c) The Agrae mysteries were particularly in honour of Persephone, not of Demeter, and it will be noted that in the hymn 377 sqq. it is Persephone who is placed first. At the Greater Eleusinia this could hardly occur with propriety.

(d) There is an allusion in 218 sqq. to the coming spring feast of the Anthesteria. The spring mysteries are regularly associated with the Anthesteria. Those of the autumn are too remote from the Lenaea.

(e) The emphasis laid upon λειμῶνα (325), ἀνθηρὸν δάπειον (352), εἰανθεῖς κόλποις λειμώνων (373), ἀνθοφόρον ἄλσος (441), λειμῶνας ἀνθεμόδεις (445) surely points to the spring festival of the month Anthesterion and not to the late autumn. Whether Ἀνθεστήρια is or (more probably) is not derived from ἄνθος, popular etymology inevitably associated the words. The repeated reference to ἄνθη is a seasonable anticipation of the Ἀνθεστήρια. The season for flowers is, of course, much earlier in Greece than in higher latitudes, and late September is no time for the luxuriance of flowery meads.

(f) Dionysus and Xanthias have come down by way of the house of Heracles to the λίμνη and have crossed into a low-lying meadow of flowers. This, translated into terms of Athenian topography, means a descent from the temple of Heracles Alexikakos in the north-western part of Athens, past the Λίμναι, beyond the Lenaeum (see vv. 211–219) and south-eastward into the meadows by the Ilissus.

(g) The great body of Athenian spectators would be more familiar with the Lesser Mysteries of their own suburbs than with those of Eleusis, which were distant and required time as well as a greater degree of initiation. Thus a representation of the dancing of the Mystae on their way across the Ilissus into the Agrae precincts would be more readily appreciated and less open to religious objection.

C. THE LANGUAGE AND METRE OF COMEDY AS COMPARED WITH THOSE OF TRAGEDY, AND THEIR RELATION TO ORDINARY SPEECH

In a comedy various parts are written in various metres, and each such part has a character of its own as regards the degree in which it represents, or departs from, the current diction of Athens. The main portion consists of the spoken dialogue in the metre known as the iambic trimeter (or senarius). This departs least of all (Greek metres from the rhythm of ordinary speech (Aristot. Poet. 4 μάλιστα γὰρ λεκτικὸν τῶν μέτρων τὸ ἰαμβεῖον ἔστιν· σημείον δὲ τοῦτον· πλεῖστα γὰρ ἰαμβεῖα λέγομεν ἐν τῇ διαλέκτῳ τῇ πρὸς ἀλλήλους); correspondingly it departs as little as possible from the diction, phraseology and grammar used in ordinary life and conversation. In other words the iambic trimeter of comedy is the language of vivacious and colloquial prose arranged in the form of an easy and fluent verse.

Next to the dialogue in trimeters come the longer metres known as tetrameters, which are trochaic, anapaestic, or iambic. The metre of these is easily recognised as a distinct departure from customary language; they are not merely spoken, like the senarii, but are associated with excited movement and are delivered in a sort of recitative to the accompaniment of a flute. (Technically this style of delivery is called παρακαταλογία.) It is natural, therefore, that in these there should be permitted also some departure, though not a very wide one, from the ordinary vocabulary or grammar. That is to say, they may bear a more poetical colour.

Thirdly there come the lyrics proper, in various metres, sung by the dancing (or gesticulating) chorus, and in these the humorous parody of tragic choruses, dithyrambs and other serious lyric poetry is so overwhelming that we no longer look to them for any certain criteria as to the contemporary speech of Attica.

We shall do well to consider in order the main characteristics of comic metre and language in the trimeters and tetrameters.

(1.) Diction and Grammar of the Comic Senarius.—The language of the comic senarius differs widely from that of the tragic. The language of tragedy is poetic. It contains archaic words which were no longer current in everyday Athenian speech, but which had belonged to an older stage of Attic or were part of the wider poetry familiar to every educated citizen. In this respect it resembled the serious poetry of modern England, in which occur words which no one would think of using in an ordinary language. As we do not in common life or in sober prose speak of 'welkin' or 'steed,' unless humorously, so the Athenian of the fifth century B.C. made no use of μολεῖν, λῆμα, κλίειν, and the like except in serious poetry. In ordinary life these words could occur only in quotations or allusively or with humour. But just as the speaker of English who does not use 'welkin' or 'burgeon' nevertheless knows the meaning of those words and recognises their place in poetry, so the speaker of Attic Greek who did not use μολεῖν or κλίειν understood them fully when they occurred in tragedy.

Meanwhile comedy is the language of real life, and in the ordinary senarius such words as those mentioned would be altogether incongruous. As Horace says (A. P. 89), veribus exponi tragicis res comica non vult. It is, of course, true that Athenians, though less than Englishmen, differed somewhat in the range of their vocabularies and in the phrases for which their everyday speech showed a partiality; but, as an educated Englishman is none the less able to draw a distinction between the poetic and the common or familiar word (between the γλῶττα and the κίριον ὄνομα), so the educated Athenian had a keen sense of the same difference. Athens, indeed, was a small community, and the current language and range of vocabulary were much more homogeneous or on a level throughout society than they are with us, so that the distinction of the rare from the familiar term would be even more readily felt.

The comic senarius, unless it is quoting, parodying, or burlesquing, uses only the current terms (κίρια ὀνόματα), and the occurrence of such words as ἔτλην or ταγός is a signal—even if there were no other—that there is an allusion to some tragic passage, or a quotation from serious poetry, or a deliberate spice of the grandiose. In all such cases we must conceive of the actor as delivering the word or its context with a tragic tone and air, and striking a tragic gesture or attitude.

The student may at first find some difficulty in telling which words are, and which are not, purely poetical. But the difficulty is exactly the same as is encountered in dealing with Greek prose. The rules of prose diction are the rules of the comic senarius. Some words are entirely and solely poetical; a few are allowable in prose or comedy in certain phrases only. Thus σθένος and φρήν are to be called poetical words (the current equivalents being ῥώμη and νοῖς), and yet the phrases παντὶ σθένει and νοῖν ἔχοντα καὶ φρένας were permitted in common Attic speech. Similarly in English we can use an expression 'with all his might and main,' although 'main' is otherwise obsolete and 'might' is a word of poetical colour, the current equivalent being 'strength.' The form θέλειν for ἐθέλειν is poetic, yet ἦν θεὸς θέλη ('God willing') survived as a phrase of ordinary life. The Athenian ear was remarkably delicate and even captious in such matters, and the comedian could rely upon his audience seeing the point of humour whenever he introduced into his line words like κλειρός, ἐλαρίτειν, παμπηγρία, κέαρ.

Attic diction of the date of Aristophanes was subtle and fastidious in its usages, not only in the nouns, adjectives and verbs, but in the prepositions, conjunctions etc. A distinction from tragedy has frequently to be noted. For example where tragedy uses ὥς in similitudes comedy proper must use ὥσπερ; where tragedy says οὔποτε comedy must say οὔδέποτε. The tragic use of πρός or ἐκ for ὑπό ('by'), which is not allowed in Attic prose, is not allowed in the comic senarius. In tragedy πρὶν, εἰ, ἕως, ὅς and other relatives may be joined to the subjunctive without ἄν, e.g. ἕως ἔλθῃ, ὅς ᾧ. This is a remnant of the older Greek use of a pure subjunctive mood. The subsequent addition of ἄν to the relative had nothing to do with determining the mood, but it was meant to assist the generic indefiniteness of the expression, and its use was at first optional. In Attic Greek it came about that the use of ἄν prevailed, until in ordinary life it became an indispensable attachment to the relative when used with the subjunctive. The comedian must therefore write πρὶν ἄν ἔλθῃ, ὅς ἄν ᾧ. Here again quotation, burlesque (παρατραγωδία), or 'mouthing' would at once show itself by the use in a comic senarius of πρός = ὑπό, ὥς = ὥσπερ, ὅς = ὅς ἄν. The nice distinctions of Attic cannot, of course, be enumerated here. It must suffice to illustrate by these easy examples.

Another most important difference between comic and tragic language consists in the use or omission of the article. In early Greek, as in Latin and many other languages, there was no article. There existed a demonstrative pronoun ('that'), which was employed when 'that' was palpably required. Gradually this demonstrative pronoun was weakened into a mere 'definite article,' which became regularly attached to nouns in the later common speech, whereas in the older stage it was as regularly absent. Only a few old and familiar phrases continued to dispense with it. Thus Attic Greek continued to say, εἰς ἀγοράν, εἰς ἀγρόν, ἔξω τείχους, ἐς πόλιν, very much as we still say without the article 'to market,' 'to town,' 'upstairs,' and the like. Tragedy, representing an elevated diction which is the opposite of the everyday, adheres to the old fashion. It regularly dispenses with the article, unless that article is emphatic, i.e. a virtual demonstrative. It is, in fact, a gross error to assume that the tragedians use or omit the article purely for metrical reasons and without further discrimination. Thus tragedy uses ἐμὸς πατήρ in the simple sense of 'my father,' but when it wishes to say 'my father,' or affectionately 'my own father,' it uses ὁ ἐμός. Comedy, like prose conversation, must always (in ordinary dialogue) use ὁ ἐμός. The fact that comedy is verse does not justify the omission of the definite article in writing such verse. The omission is only permitted after prepositions with names of localities, e.g. ἀγορά, πόλις (= ἀκρόπολις, πριτανεῖον, ἀγρός (which were treated by an Athenian as practically proper names), or in stereotyped phrases, e.g. κατ' ὀφθαλμοῖς, κατὰ γῆν, etc.

υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—
—		—		—
υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣
υ̣υ̣—
—υ̣υ̣		—υ̣υ̣

Besides these an anapaest is occasionally allowable in other feet than the first in a proper name which could hardly be brought into the verse without such a concession. The iambic senarius of comedy admits freely of an anapaest in any foot but the 6th. It freely admits of a dactyl in the 5th foot as well as the 3rd. There are also no inconsiderable number of instances of a tribrach in the 6th foot: e.g. φειδῶτιᾱ (Antiph. 'Αρχ. 3), δελφῆκῖᾱ (Eubul. 'Αμάλθ. 9), σαρκῖδῖᾱ (Diph. 'Απλ. 2), ληκῖθῖον̄ (Anon. 40) and in Aristophanes χοιρίδιον̄ (Ach. 777) θελάκιον̄ (Ran. 1203). It will be seen that in each of these examples there is an iota, which may be slurred; but to 'correct' all such cases is quite unwarrantable.

(b) The scheme given above for tragedy is, however, limited by certain rules of greater or less refinement. For example there is the 'law of the final cretic,' according to which, when a single word or organic combination of the value — ∪ ∷ can be separated at the end of the line, the previous syllable is short. Thus a line could not end with πολλῶ πλείονα nor with πολλοῖς τῶν λόγων. The exception is that a long syllable may precede the final — ∪ ∷ when the said long syllable is a monosyllabic word organically connected with the — ∪ ∷ following, as in a preposition followed by its case (ἐκ πραγμάτων) or an article followed by its noun (τὰς ξερμαρίας). [One can, without violating the rule, say ἡμῶν γὰρ γένος, because the — ∪ — is not composed of a single word nor of an organic combination, since γὰρ belongs to what precedes.] For comedy there is no such law of the final cretic, and πολλῶ πλείονα or πολλοῖς τῶν λόγων is a perfectly normal ending.

(c) In tragedy the line regularly has a caesura, or division between words, after the first syllable of either the 3rd foot or (less frequently) the 4th. There are, it is true, about forty undoubted exceptions in extant tragedy, and though in some of these the unusual rhythm is manifestly intended for effect, the only inviolable rule seems to be that a tragic line must not be capable of severance into three equal parts. Thus εἶπω τι τῶν | εἰσθότων, | ὦ δέσποτα ;

or καῖλλως ὁ μὲν γ' | Εὐριπίδης | πανοῦργος ὢν are impossible in tragedy. In comedy there is no such rule whatever and lines without caesura are used with the greatest frequency.

(d) There is more freedom in comedy as to the number and sequence of the resolved feet (i.e. ∪ ∪ ∪ or — ∪ ∪ or ∪ ∪ —) which may be used in a single line, and as to the places at which such feet must be divided between words. The rules for tragedy are set forth in the ordinary verse-books. In comedy scholars have made plentiful observations as to what does or does not occur, but many of these are too subtle for mention in this brief sketch and in some instances should never have been exalted into rules.

The working scheme for the comic senarius is therefore

1	2	3	4	5	6
∪ —	∪ —	∪ —	∪ —	∪ —	∪ —
∪ ∪ ∪	∪ ∪ ∪	∪ ∪ ∪	∪ ∪ ∪	∪ ∪ ∪	∪ ∪ ∪ (rarely)

(with no regard to caesura or 'final cretic').

It may be said in general that a true comic line will very seldom scan as tragic. Either it shares an anapaest or dactyl in the wrong place, or it has too many resolved feet, or it is without caesura, or it ignores the final cretic, or, in a foot in which a tribrach or anapaest or dactyl is possible in tragedy, it does not conform to some rule as to dividing such a foot between words. In most cases, as soon as a line scans faultlessly as a tragic line, we have good reason to suspect that it is a quotation or burlesque, and that it was 'mouthed' by the actor accordingly. Thus while the line

τὸ δὲ προσδοκῆσαι σ' οὐκ | ἀνόητον καὶ | κενόν

is the natural line of conversational comedy, its successor

ὥς δοῦλος ὢν καὶ θνητὸς Ἀλκμήνης ἔρει

is delivered with the grand tragic tone and attitude.

Much will be lost from an appreciation of the humour of Aristophanes and from an understanding of the Greek stage if this simple fact is not borne in mind.

(c) Besides the rules which have been given for the several feet available in comedy and tragedy respectively, there is a most important difference in a rule of syllabic quantity. In tragedy, if a vowel is not long in itself, it may be lengthened before one of the mutes (κ, γ, χ, τ, δ, θ, π, β, φ) followed by one of the liquids (ρ, λ) and (except for γ, δ, β) by one of the nasals (μ, ν). Thus in ὕβρις, ἀγρός, πατρός, ἵππος etc. the first syllable may be long or short as the poet chooses. [In point of fact the lengthening is not nearly so common as is generally supposed. For the statistics see Class. Review Vol. xi. pp. 341 sqq.] But in the language of daily life, if in such syllables the vowel was naturally short, the syllables were always kept short; and therefore comedy, being the language of daily life, never lengthens them in the iambic senarius, unless it is quoting or burlesquing serious poetry. Thus in a natural line of comic dialogue ἀγρός or τῖφλός or ὕβρις is impossible. When we find such lengthenings we may be sure that we have more 'mouthings.'

(f) The senarius of comedy differs also markedly from that of tragedy in respect of freedom in Elision, Prodelision, Crasis, Synecphosis and Hiatus.

Elision.—Comedy, unlike tragedy, may elide -αι in the verb-terminations of the infin. and of the 1st and 3rd persons passive ; e.g. παρεῖν' ἐς τὴν πέκνα, διαγωνιείσθ' ἔφασκε, δέομ' οἶδέν, κολῶν' ἔξεστι, γενήσεται' ἀγαθά. It may also elide -οι in οἶμοι ; e.g. οἶμ' ὥς.

Prodelision.—In comedy the initial ε of a word following a final vowel is freely dropped from the scansion ; e.g. ἐγὼ 'νδείκνυμι, οἶκ' ἀξιῶ 'γὼ 'μαντόν, ὅποι' 'νθάδ', οἶ 'μνήσθην, οἶομαι 'γωγ'. In tragedy the instances are much less bold and are mostly restricted to prepositions.

Crasis in comedy is very free. Striking instances are δῆξομαι' (δῆξομαι ἄρα), χᾶνδρες (καὶ οἱ ἄνδρες), μεντοῖφασκεν (μέντοι ἔφασκεν), τυχὰγαθῇ, καιτοῖκ, σοῖδωκεν, μοῖγγύς, ἐγοχόμην.

Synephronesis.—What comedy can do in the slurring together of final and initial vowels may be seen from e.g. μὰ τὸν 'Απόλλω οἶ, ἔα αἰτόν, εἰ δὲ μὴ ἡμεῖς, ἐγὼ εἴσομαι, μὴ ὦρασι.

Hiatus, which very rarely occurs in tragedy (perhaps only in τί οἶν) is frequent in comedy after τί, ὅτι, περί. We have τί ἔστι, τί ἄρα, τί οἶ, τί αἶ, τί εἶπας etc., ὅτι ἄν, ὅτι οἶκ. ὅτι ἦ, ὅτι εἰσέθηκε etc., περὶ ἔτροις, περὶ 'Αθηνῶν, περὶ ἐμοῦ etc. Also οἶδὲ ἔν, εἶ ἄσθι, εἶ οἶδα, ὦ 'Ηράκλεις, ὦ οἶτος, and (at least in the New Comedy) μέχρι ἄν, πρὸ ἡμέρας.

It would have been impossible to write a natural language without these privileges. Thus the article cannot be omitted as in tragedy. Since so many words begin with vowels, a crasis with the article was necessarily very frequent, e.g. θοῖδατος, θῆμετέρον. Such crases doubtless occur in tragedy also, but much less often, and only when the article is for some reason indispensable. Similarly it would have taken away all the realistic character of comic language if the writer could not have employed $\tauί$, $ὅτι$ or $περὶ$ before a vowel, or if a familiar phrase like $τύχῃ ἀγαθῇ$ were barred by the metre. It must meanwhile be remembered that the elision, prodelision, crasis and synecphonesis of comedy represent the actual Attic pronunciation of ordinary life. Tragedy avoids the common language; comedy must reproduce it.

(i) The following metrical observations deserve note for the iambic senarius of comedy:—

1. $\dot{\eta}\mu\epsilon\nu$, $\dot{\iota}\mu\epsilon\nu$ are not allowed, nor the monosyllabic use of $\theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$.
2. $\nu\acute{\epsilon}\nu$ and $\tau\acute{o}\iota\nu\acute{\epsilon}\nu$ are correct, not $\nu\epsilon\nu$ or $\tau\acute{o}\iota\nu\epsilon\nu$.
3. $\phi\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, $\theta\acute{\iota}\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\epsilon\iota$, $\acute{\iota}\eta\mu\iota$ are the proper quantities, although perhaps $\acute{\iota}\eta\mu\iota$ is occasional.
4. $\delta\rho\acute{\alpha}\chi\mu\acute{\eta}$ and $\delta\rho\acute{\alpha}\chi\mu\acute{\eta}$ are both in use; $\acute{\epsilon}\alpha$ is commonly pronounced as one syllable; $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\iota}\omega$ (not $\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omega$) is correct.
5. The vowel or diphthong ending is shortened before deictic $-ί$, e.g. $\tau\alpha\rho\tau\eta\acute{\eta}ί$, $\tau\omicron\upsilon\tau\eta\acute{\eta}ί$, $\acute{o}\acute{\iota}\tau\omicron\iotaί$, $\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon\iota\tau\omicron\iotaί$.
6. $\epsilon\acute{\iota}s$ is necessary before a vowel; a comic senarius cannot say $\acute{\epsilon}s$ $\acute{\alpha}\gamma\rho\acute{o}\iotas$. Before a consonant $\acute{\epsilon}s$ is perhaps the proper form, but this cannot be proved; nevertheless in some phrases, e.g. $\acute{\epsilon}s$ $\kappa\acute{o}\rho\alpha\kappa\alpha\varsigma$, it would be quite incorrect to write $\epsilon\acute{\iota}s$.
7. The following quantities are optional, viz.:—
 $\acute{o}\acute{\iota}$ in $\pi\omicron\iota\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$ ($\pi\omicron\iota\eta\tau\acute{\eta}s$ etc), $\acute{o}\acute{\iota}\sigma$, $\pi\omicron\acute{\iota}\sigma$, $\tau\omicron\iota\omicron\acute{\upsilon}\tau\omicron\varsigma$,
 $\acute{o}\acute{\iota}\epsilon\iota$ ($\acute{o}\acute{\iota}\eta\theta\eta\acute{\nu}\alpha\iota$), $\beta\omicron\iota\omega\tau\acute{o}s$:
 $\acute{\alpha}\acute{\iota}$ in $\delta\epsilon\acute{\iota}\lambda\alpha\iota\omicron\varsigma$, $\Pi\epsilon\iota\rho\alpha\iota\epsilon\acute{\iota}s$:
 $\acute{\iota}$ in $\acute{\alpha}\nu\iota\acute{\omega}$, $\acute{\iota}\alpha\tau\rho\acute{o}s$:
 $\acute{\alpha}$ in $\acute{\alpha}\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\iota}$, $\acute{\alpha}\rho\alpha$ ($\acute{\alpha}\rho\alpha$) :

Also $\Pi\rho\omega\tau\acute{\epsilon}\omega\varsigma$ or $\Pi\rho\omega\tau\acute{\epsilon}\omega\varsigma$ etc.

8. The following alternative forms are equally available:—

$-\omicron\iota\varsigma$, $-\omicron\upsilon\tau\iota$, $-\omicron\iota\sigma\iota\nu$ in dat. plur. :

διδόασ', διδόασι, διδόασιν and the like (paragogic
-ν being added at pleasure):

σταιτόν, έταιτόν and σαιτόν, αύτόν:

είκοσι, τιννοίτο (etc.) and είκοσιν, τιννοῦτον (etc.):

μείζονα, ἡττονες (etc.) and μείζω, ἡττοίς (etc.):

τεθνηκέαι, τεθνηκώς and τεθνάναι, τεθνεώς:

-οίατο, -αίατο and -οιντο, -αιντο:

-αις and -ειας in opt. 2nd pers.:

ὄρνιν, ὄρνις, γέλων and ὄρνιθα, ὄρνιθας, γέλωτα:

συν- and ξυν-:

9. On the other hand it is not permitted to use forms like ποιοῖμι, ποιοῖς for ποιοίην, ποιοίης, nor διδοῖ for δίδωσι, but the rule of contemporary prose applies also to comedy. If -μεσθα and -οισι appear to be exceptions it would be better to accept them as evidence that Attic use was in these respects not absolutely settled.

10. Aristophanes also uses 'tmesis' in e.g. ἀνά τοί με πείθεις.

(iii.) Tetrameters.—In dealing with the tetrameters it is sufficient to state the main principles. It is probable that the collectors of statistics have often over-refined and in some cases constructed rules out of mere accidents.

The trochaic, anapaestic and iambic tetrameters are 'catalectic,' i.e. they lack a syllable of being complete sets of '4 metres' (= 8 feet).

(a) The trochaic tetrameter consisted originally of the scansion :—

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8

with a caesura after the 4th trochee. Variations in the several feet were allowed, the first and simplest being that of a spondee (— —) in the 2nd, 4th and 6th feet. Resolved feet were also permitted, though in tragedy (excepting Euripides) their use is moderate. In comedy they are frequent, but it is not very often that more than one resolution will occur in the same line. The commonest form is the tribrach, which may be used in any foot. An anapaest may occur in the 2nd, 4th, and 6th. A dactyl is very rare. The caesura is often neglected.

We thus have :

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8
 — ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪ | ∪
 — — | — — | — — | — — | — — | — — | — — | ∪

ἀλλὰ | καὶ νῦν | ὦν' ὅητοι || μεταβαλόντες | τοὺς τρόπους

δικίδιον σμικρὸν φάγοιμ' ἂν | ἐν λοπάδι πέπνιγμένον

The trochaic tetrameter is a favourite metre for quick and excited speech.

(b) The anapaestic tetrameter consisted of 7 anapaests and a syllable. As a variation a spondee was then allowed in any foot, but in Attic comedy such spondee is never used in the 7th. A dactyl also is allowable, provided that it does not precede an anapaest, and provided that the last syllable of the 4th foot is left long. A caesura takes place at the end of the 4th.

For example :

δεξιό̄τητος | καὶ νοῑθεσί̄ας || ὅτῑ βελ̄τίους | τε̄ ποιοῦ̄μεν
 or ἀπὸ̄ τοῦ̄ | τιμὴν̄ | καὶ κλέος̄ | ἔσχεν̄ || πλὴν̄ τοῦ̄δ' ὅτῑ
 χρή̄γτ' ἐδίδοῡ ξεν̄;

This metre is suited to marching movement and is also a favourite in comic disputes and passages of arms accompanied by motion.

(c) The iambic tetrameter consisted of 7 iambs and a syllable. It does not belong to tragedy, but is frequent in comedy. Apart from resolution by tribrachæ, a spondee or dactyl was permitted in the 1st, 3rd, and 5th feet. By a further extension an anapaest is permitted in all feet but the 7th. Caesura after the 4th foot is not essential.

We thus get :

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—	υ̣—	κ
—		—		—
υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣	υ̣υ̣υ̣
—υ̣υ̣		—υ̣υ̣		—υ̣υ̣
υ̣υ̣—	υ̣υ̣—	υ̣υ̣—	υ̣υ̣—	υ̣υ̣—	υ̣υ̣—

e.g.

ἐξ̄η̄πάτα | μώροις̄ | λαβὼν̄ | παρὰ̄ Φρῑνίχῳ̄ | τριφέν̄τας
 πρῶ̄τισ̄τα μὲν γὰρ̄ ἑν̄α | τιν'̄ ἄν̄ | καθίσ̄εν̄ ἐγκαλὶ̄ψας
 Ἀχιλ̄λέᾱ τιν'̄ ἦ | Νιόβην̄ | τὸ̄ πρῶ̄τω̄πον̄ οὐ̄χί̄ δεικνύς̄.

This also is a metre for disputes, but does not imply motion, and serves as an agreeable change from the anapaestic measure.

In the tetrameters we are made more distinctly conscious that we are dealing with verse than is the case in the trimeter. They were, as has been already said, half sung to the accompaniment of the flute. In them, therefore, the language and its pronunciation recede somewhat further from the spoken Attic. One illustration of the distinction is that, whereas in the trimeter final diphthongs cannot stand before an initial vowel without being either elided or else forming crasis or synecphonesis, in the anapaestic tetrameters they may be left and scanned as shortened syllables, e.g. εὐχομαι εἰ, θεμιστοκλεῖ ἀντιφερίζεις, ῥιππαπαῖ εἰπεῖν, Χαιρέον εἶός, εἶναι ἀδελφῆν, δεσποίνῃ Ἀθηναίῃ. [If it be observed that these diphthongs end in i or u, which may be made consonantal (= y and w), we have still to reckon with e.g. Κλεισθένῃ εἶδον.]

The tragic (or generally poetical) lengthening before a mute and a liquid or nasal is also (though very occasionally) found in tetrameters (e.g. ἄγρῶν, μῶχλός), and words of poetical colour are sometimes used, e.g. οὐποτε, κάρτα, μοχθεῖν, αἶτε, ιδέσθαι, κλέος, ἑκατι, ἔφης.

D. SOME MAIN FEATURES OF THE COMIC STYLE

The language of comedy is the language of common life, rendered as vivacious and witty as the poet can make it. The idioms are therefore the idioms of prose, but on its structural side the language, at least in the dialogue, is for the most part even easier than that of the contemporary prose. Brisk conversation admits of no involved sentences. The student may occasionally find considerable trouble with the vocabulary; he will meet with new colloquial phrases, with allusions to which he has no key, and with jokes of which the point is obscure or undiscoverable; but he should have little difficulty with the grammar. What he should be prepared for is

surprise words (παρὰ προσδοκίαν) :

colloquial metaphor constituting Athenian slang :

words manufactured for humorous purposes :

and also a plentiful use of

expletives :

exclamations of abuse, ridicule, contempt or pity.

Though these occur plentifully in every play, it is not easy to illustrate them apart from their context. The following may perhaps suffice as introductory specimens.

(a) Puns.—Plays upon words were as welcome to the Athenian audience of Aristophanes as they were to the English audience of Shakespeare. We are, however, scarcely in a position to estimate properly the excellence or the contrary of an Attic pun, for the reason that we are uncertain as to the exact Attic pronunciation. If we could hear a contemporary of Aristophanes articulating his vowels and consonants and giving to the accent its proper value, we should doubtless perceive a much closer resemblance between the words played upon than we can always perceive in them as written. Nevertheless it would appear that the Athenians were not very exacting in this respect. A suggestive resemblance in the shape of two words, or identity in a prominent syllable, was apparently sufficient, and the actor's delivery of course emphasised the point. Examples are :—

Eq. 55 μάζαν μεμαχότος ἐν Πύλῳ Λακωνικὴν

ibid. 279 ταῖσι τριήρεσι ζωμεύματα (sug. ἵποζώματα), 1182 φαγεῖν ἐλατῆρας ('cakes'), ἵνα τὰς ταῖς ἐλαύνωμεν καλῶς, Ran. 418 οὐκ ἔφιντε φράτερας (sug. φραστῆρας), 439 Διὸς Κύρινθος (κόρις), I'ac. 431 ἵπεχε τὴν φιᾶλην, ὅπως ἔργῳ 'φιαλοῦμεν, Ecc. 686 κάππα . . ἵνα κάπτωσιν, Lys. 91 sq. χαῖτα (plays on χάσκω), Ach. 35 sq. πρίων and πρίω, 348 ἄνθρακες (and ἄνθρωποι or ἄνδρες), I'sp. 30 τὴν τρόπιν τοῦ πράγματος (= τὸν τρόπον), Ar. 121 πόλιν εὔερον (sug. εἰᾶερον), 179 πόλος and πόλις, Nub. 23 sq. κοππατίαν and ἐξεκόπην. So in the line of an unknown comedian ἰπὸ τοῦ γέλωτος εἰς Γέλλαν ἀφίξομαι and (Anon. 350. 11) ὀνησιφόρα . . ὄνος φέρει.

(b) Surprise words (παρὰ προσδοκίαν).—A favourite device of the Attic comedians is to begin a sentence in such a way that the hearer would naturally expect a certain word or notion to follow, whereas there is substituted some other word or notion, which comes with a humorous surprise and therefore the greater effect. A good instance occurs in a fragment of Alexis (Παράσ. 2):—

φρέατος ἔνδον ψυχρότερον—'Λκίροτος.

For 'colder than ice' is substituted 'more frigid than Araros,' ψυχρός being the Greek for dull and tedious.

So in Aristophanes: Eq. 59 βιρσίτην ἔχων | δειπνοῦντος ἐστὼς ἀποσοβεί—τοὺς ῥήτορας (instead of τὰς μνίας), 457 ὦ γεννικώτατον κρέας (for κάρνι), 1176 εἰ μὴ φανερώς ἡμῶν ἵπερεῖχε τὴν—χύτραν (for χεῖρα), 1363 ἐκ τοῦ λάρνγγος ἐκκρεμίσας—'Υπέρβολον (for e.g. λίθον), Ran. 421 ἐστὶν τὰ πρῶτα τῆς ἐκεῖ—μοχθηρίας, 855 κεφαλαίῳ ῥήμιτι . . ἐκχέη τὸν—Τήλεφον (for ἐγκέφαλον), I'ul. 26 τῶν ἐμῶν γὰρ οἰκετῶν πιστότατον ἡγοῦμαί σε καὶ—κλεπτίστατον (for e.g. χρηστότατον), Lys. 103 ἄπεστιν ἐπὶ Θράκης φυλαίτων—Εὐκράτη (for τοὺς πολεμίους), Ach. 733 ποτέχετ' ἐμὶν—τὰν γαστέρα (for τὸν νοῦν, Av. 134 μή μοι τότ' ἔλθης, ὅταν ἐγὼ πράττω—κακῶς (for καλῶς), I'esp. 243 ἦκειν ἔχοντας ἡμερῶν ὀργὴν τριῶν (for σιτία).

(c) Parody, burlesque, quotation and allusion are too completely interwoven with the whole structure of a play for us to illustrate them satisfactorily in extracts. Tragedy, dithyramb, the hexameters of oracles, skolia, and other forms of verse are fair game for the comedian. In the dialogue it is particularly tragedy, in the lyrics particularly dithyramb, which suffer. The Athenian audience was entirely familiar with the style of the messenger's speech (ἀγγέλου ῥῆσις), with the recognition-scene (ἀναγνώρισις) and with the 'forensic dispute,' or argument and retort (ἔλεγχος), of the tragedian. It would therefore at once apprehend the humour of the comic burlesque of such passages, especially when the actor struck an attitude and intoned his words after the manner of some tragic 'star' whom they had recently seen performing in a play of Sophocles or Euripides.

Thus Eg. 625–682 and Plut. 627 sqq. travesty an ἀγγέλου ῥῆσις, Eg. 1232–1253 and Ran. 745 sqq. an ἀναγνώρισις, Pac. 124–154 a tragic discussion, Thesm. 331 sqq. the proclamation of a κῆρυξ, Lys. 1124–1156 a tragic speech, Ar. 685–702 an epic theogony. Sometimes a part of the plot as well as the language of a tragedian is happily burlesqued, as in the Thesmophoriazusae, where portions of the Helena and Andromeda of Euripides are so treated.

It must be remembered that the whole Athenian populace attended the theatre at the festivals of Dionysus to listen to both tragedies and comedies, and that they similarly witnessed and heard the dithyrambic choruses. From the plays then performed they carried away vivid recollections of whole scenes. Moreover the plays were subsequently circulated and read. Lines of dialogue became popular, either on their merits or because of some humorous perversion which might be made of them. Passages of lyrics 'took' with the people and were sung and quoted. Moreover Homer and the great lyric poets were taught at school to every properly educated Athenian boy. Certain skolia had been sung at symposia and elsewhere for generations. It was therefore quite safe for a comedian to burlesque, quote, or allude to epics, dramas, dithyrambs and other lyrics with a feeling that his audience would be with him in ready appreciation.

(d) Colloquial Metaphor or Athenian Slang. — The Greeks had a love of metaphor, i.e. of similitude compressed into the use of one figurative word. The notion that they were sparing or timid in such use is a misconception. Aeschylus is as figurative as Shakespeare and the Athenian populace as much so as the modern American. It is true that critical writers like Aristotle and Longinus utter cautions against excessive indulgence in this figure, but the cautions would have been unnecessary if there had been no tendency in that direction. What was really insisted upon was that a metaphor should be a happy one, that it should not be feeble or far-fetched (σχολαστική). If very bold, it was considered well to qualify it with terms like ὡς εἶπεν (cf. quasi). The Athenians loved clear thinking; therefore similitudes must bear examination; they must 'go on all fours.' But they also loved the imaginative clearness which perceived likenesses between things. Hence both their fondness for metaphor and their discriminating use of it.

Metaphor was therefore very common in colloquial Attic, and especially that humorous metaphor which cloaks the disagreeable under another name. It is naturally the part of comedy to make full use of such sprightly expressions, and Aristophanes is rich in them. For example, among words expressive of punishing by

ξαίνειν, πλύνειν, μυττωτεύειν, φλᾶν etc. (cf. the English
'flay,' 'skin,' 'give a hiding,' 'a dressing,' 'dust one's jacket' etc.). So we have χορδεῖν τὰ πράγματα, ἐκκοκκίζειν τὰς πόλεις, ἐκβολβίζειν τινά, ὀπτᾶν (of teasing), κατατέμνειν τινὰ καττίματα ('cut him into bits of leather'), ἀποβλίσκειν τι. A man in anger or ill-temper is said βλέπειν σκίτην, νᾶπιν, ὀρίγανον, ὀπόν, κάρδαμα; he λῖει τὴν ἑν. Eating has names like ἐρείδειν, σποδεῖν, φλᾶν, παίειν. To cozen is ὑπέρχισθαι, περιέρχισθαι, περιελαίνειν, περιδραμεῖν, βουκολεῖν.
A schemer κεραμεῖ (τὴν πόλιν) or ἱφαίνει.

How far these were already current slang, or how many of them Aristophanes invented and made current, we can hardly tell. It is only reasonable to suppose that it was part of a comedian's business to strike out new phrases, and that some at least make their first appearance in the Aristophanic plays.

(e) Words humorously manufactured.—The ease with which compound words were systematically constructed in Greek gave the comedians an opportunity for coining facetious terms of whatever length they chose. Some of these were more or less puns upon existing compounds; others were parodies of them, and these were particularly numerous in those lyrics in which the comic poet burlesqued the dithyramb. According to Aristotle (Poet. 22) compound words μάλιστα ἀρμόττει τοῖς διθυ-ράμβοις and Aristophanes is ready to show his skill in travestyng the ὀνόματα πολλαπλᾶ of that style. His ὀρθροφοίτοσυκοφαντοδικοταλαίπωρος is, doubtless, an extravagant example, but κρομμοξυρεγμίας, ψαμματοσιογάργα are not far from the typical.

If there is a term ὁμομήτριος the comedian will invent ὁμομαρτυγίας; from τρίπαλαι he will make χιλιόπαλαι; he will turn Λυσίμαχος into κλαυσίμαχος.

He will speak of μέλος μελλοδειπνικόν and of νεοπλοιτοπόνηρος. Similarly he will invent humorous verbs, e.g. ἐσωκράτουν, nouns, e.g. φροντιστήριον, superlatives, e.g. αὐτότατος. He will play with genders, as in ἡ στρατηγός, ἡ γραμματεῖς, or with the voice of the verb, as in ῥέγκεται (because another middle has preceded). He will make foreigners, such as the Triballoi or the Scythian police, talk broken Greek, e.g. ὄρνιτο (= ὄρνιθος), καὶ γὰρ λέγει, περί (= φέρεις), Ἀττικὸς μέλις (= Ἀττικὸν μέλι); or he will mimic a lisp, as in ὀλῆς (= ὀρίς). Sometimes he will imitate stammering, as in βρετετέτας, or the sound of a musical instrument, e.g. θρετταελό, τοφλατοθράτ, βομβανοβομβάξ. There is in Greek no word πώλης, but after the mention of στυπαιοπώλης a character will say εἰς οἴτοσι "πώλης," separating the latter part of the compound.

(f) Diminutives. — Colloquial Greek, like modern Italian, had a fondness for diminutives, expressing affection, pity or contempt. These were formed in a variety of ways. [In the speech of Dominus Hyacinthus in Browning's The Ring and the Book the intensives and diminutives applied to the same person occur as Cinone, Cinozzo, Cinoncello, Cinuolo, Cinicello, Cinino, Ciniccino, Cinoncino, Cinucciatolo, Cinotto, Cinarello etc.] The following are the regular types affected by the comedians, viz.

1. -ιον, e.g. παιδ-ίον, γερόντ-ιον, θιγάτριον, λίριον.
2. -ίδ-ιον, e.g. γνωμίδιον, δικίδιον, νοίδιον, γῆδιον, γρῆδιον, Σωκρατίδιον, Ξανθίδιον.

[When the stem of the word ended in -ιο- or -ια the result was -ι + ιδιον and thence -ιδιον, e.g. οἰσίδιον, ἱματίδιον, οἰκίδιον (from οἰκία), ἀργυρίδιον (from ἀργύριον).] Similarly ἀμφορείδιον, Ἑρμείδιον, ἰχθίδιον.

3. -άριον (contemptuous), e.g. παιδάριον, πλοιάριον, ἀνδράριον.

4. -ιδ-άριον, e.g. βοιδάριον, κηδάριον, βιβλιδάριον.
5. -ίσκος, -ίσκη, e.g. θηλακίσκος, οϊκίσκος, μεираκίσκη.
6. -ίσκ-ιον, e.g. κοτιλίσκιον, χλανίσκιον.
7. -ισκ-ιδ-ιον, e.g. χλανισκίδιον.
8. -ίλλ-ιον, e.g. μεираκίλλιον, επίλλιον.
9. -ίδριον, e.g. έλκίδριον.

To intensify the diminutive still further the word μικρόν may be added, as in δικίδιον μικρόν.

(g) Expletives.—Athenian conversation must have been liberally garnished with expletives. Oaths, chiefly introduced by μὰ or νῆ, and appeals to the gods, with or without introductory ὦ, are therefore scattered throughout the pages of comedy. Such expletives are generally expressive of excitement, wonder, and keen interest; but it is by no means always possible to discern any special appropriateness in the choice of deity invoked. In verse the metre naturally has something to do with the question, but a comedian would not, for the sake of metre, run counter to conversational use. An appeal to Zeus is, of course, possible in any case. For the other deities it is presumable that originally—and perhaps at all times in studied speech—a choice was made of the god or goddess whose function it would be to lend help, deliverance or enlightenment, or to punish breach of faith, in the particular circumstances. Thus Apollo is the god, and Herakles the hero, of deliverance. As ἀλεξίκακοι they would be invoked when danger threatened or when a portent was seen. So in matters of taste one might swear νῆ τὰς Χάριτας and in matters of love νῆ τὴν Ἀφροδίτην. To some extent this principle of choice was always present. But it is impossible to suppose that the ordinary conversation of the people consistently maintained any rational distinctions. Each speaker would have his favourite expletives. There are, however, some limitations. The oath by τὼ θεῷ (Demeter and Persephone) belonged to women only, as did νῆ τὴν Ἀρτέμιν.

In comedy it will be found that oaths, introduced by μή (less often οὐ μή) and νῆ (less often καὶ μή), are most commonly by Zeus (Δία or τὸν Δία indifferently). Next in order come the group Apollo, Poseidon, Demeter (νῆ or μή τὸν Ἀπόλλω, τὸν Ποσειδῶ, τὴν Δήμητρα, with the article). Then follow Dionysus, Hermes and Herakles (τὸν Διόνυσον, τὸν Ἑρμῆν, τὸν Ἡρακλέα). Other deities are less frequent (τὴν Ἀφροδίτην, τὴν Ἑκάτην, τὴν Ἀθηναίαν, τὰς Χάριτας). Sometimes we have generalisation in τοῖς θεοῖς, or enlargements for more serious asseveration, e.g. νῆ τὸν Δία τὸν Σωτῆρα, μή τὸν Δία τὸν Ὀλύμπιον. When an appeal is made (with or without ὦ) it is generally to the ἀλεξικάκοι, e.g. Ζεῦ, Ζεῦ φίλτατε, Ζεῦ δάσποτα, Ζεῦ καὶ θεοί, θεοὶ καὶ δαίμονες καὶ Ζεῦ, or Ἀπολλον, Ἀπολλον ἀποτρόπαιε, ἄναξ Ἀπολλον καὶ θεοί, φίλ' Ἀπολλον, Φοῖβ' Ἀπολλον, or Ἡράκλεις, ὦναξ Ἡράκλεις, πολιτίμηθ' Ἡράκλεις, or ὦ Δυσκόρω, or ὦ Γῆ, or ὦ Πόσειδον. Occasionally Ἀλεξίκακε or Ἀποτρόπαιε is used alone, and sometimes vaguely θεοί, φίλοι θεοί, πολιτίμητοι θεοί.

In adjurations with πρὸς (or ὦ πρὸς) the commonest expressions are πρὸς (τῶν) θεῶν, πρὸς (ταῦ) Διός; sometimes πρὸς πάντων θεῶν and πρὸς τῆς Γῆς.

There can be no doubt that the language of comedy would have seemed to Athenian ears unnatural and unvivacious without a liberal seasoning of such expletives, just as would have been the case with English drama in the pre-Puritan days.

(h) Terms of abuse, contempt etc.—Attic conversation, at least among the lower orders and the ἀγοραῖοι, must also have been remarkably free in abusive epithets, execrations and epithets of pity. These can seldom have been either meant or taken very seriously. The tone, of course, counted for much, but a little experience of the modern East (for example) or of the less refined walks of a modern European city will teach the observer that a speaker may attribute to another the most shameful defects of character and habits without meaning anything in particular. Comedy therefore—doubtless exaggerating the practice for farcical purposes—indulges freely in words expressive of moral turpitude, e.g. μιαρός, παμμίαρος, μιανὴ κεφαλὴ, βδελυρός, πονηρός, παμπόνηρος, θεοῖς ἐχθρός, κατάρματος, κάθαρμα, βωμολόχος, οἶδεν ἱγίης; of stupidity and ignorance, e.g. σκαιός, ἀπαιδείτος, μῶρος, ἡλίθιος, παχὺς, ἀμαθής, ἀνόητος, βεκκεσέληνος; of cowardice, treachery, or greed, e.g. δειλός, δειλακρίων, φέναξ, ἀλάζων, πίθηκος, θηρίον, Φρυνώνδας, λάρος, γλίσχρων. Speakers sling at each other such titles as ιερόσυλος, λωποδότης, βυλλαιτιόμομος, κλέπτης, τοιχωρίχος, κοπρολόγος. [That such terms are often to be taken in a 'Pickwickian sense'; that at least they possessed less grossness of sound, or fell upon thicker skins at Athens than with us, is clear from the scurrility which marks the Athenian orators, even the best.]

With abuse goes execration or threat, and extremely common are such phrases as ἐς κόρακας, βάλλ' ἐς κόρακας, οὐκ εἰ ἐς κόρακας; διαρραγείης, ἐπιτριβείης, ἀπόλοιο, οἴμωζε, ἀπολεῖ κἀκίστα.

On the other hand there are plentiful exclamations of pity, e.g. ὦ κακοδαίμων, ὦ μέλε, ὦ ζυρέ, τάλαν (frequent among women), δίστηνε, σχέτλιε, δέλαιος etc.

Without these also comedy would have lacked something in convincingness.

The present text is conservative in the sense that the reading of the best MSS., when metrically correct and grammatically tolerable, is always retained, if it yields such a meaning as Aristophanes may very well have intended. No attempt has then been made, nor can legitimately be made, to substitute something which might seem more prettily idiomatic or even more humorous. If an editor thinks he can perceive some reading which might be an improvement, and which he would like to think that Aristophanes actually wrote, he is entitled to offer it in his critical notes, but scarcely to insert it in his text.

Where the best MSS. differ, it is for the critic to use his sagacity in determining which of two readings, if either, is the more likely to have been prior to the other. He may choose the one or deduce both from some common source. How far, when the best MSS. alike show an untenable reading, some inferior copies are to be taken as authority, is one of the nicer matters of textual criticism. Often the readings of such copies simply represent the conjectural efforts of early mediaeval or renaissance critics. Nevertheless, since we cannot always tell upon what basis of authority these texts are formed, it is on the whole safer, when the best MSS. fail us, to accept from the inferior MSS. a tolerable reading in which a number of them agree, than to ignore it in favour of a modern conjecture. The best stratum of scholia is also often to be pressed into the service, as of at least equal value with the later order of MSS. Nor are the quotations by Suidas to be ignored, although verbal accuracy in quotation was by no means rigorously insisted upon until long after the era of printed books. But when all the texts are impossible or extremely unsatisfactory, new conjectural emendation has its place. Whether or not such emendation shall be incorporated in the text depends upon the degree of its convincingness as judged by the most dispassionate critical faculty of the editor.

Of the Frogs there are a large number of MSS., Of these the authority of two entirely outweighs that of the rest. They are the Barceus (R) and the Venetus (V). These two are not always right; each occasionally corrects the other; both occasionally require correction from other MSS. or from conjecture. But the most casual survey of their readings in comparison with those of other MSS. will show that they have been copied with greater accuracy from originals which have undergone much less corruption. These are known as the codices vetusti, the rest being recentiores. For most of Aristophanes R is the sounder MS. but this is scarcely the case in the Frogs, in which many of the better readings are derived from V. When we have to choose between R and V we must first look to the indications of the other MSS. and to the scholia, and then fall back upon our critical judgment.

The scholia, or notes in the margins of the MSS., particularly those in R, have an appreciable value for criticism, but require cautious handling. They comprise two chief strata, the one ancient, dating, (or derived) from the comments of the Alexandrian γραμματικοί from at least the third century B.C. A great compiler of such comments, to whom the annotators of our scholia often refer, was the famous Didymus of the earlier age of Augustus. The other stratum is relatively modern, dating from Byzantine scholars and editors of MSS.

The Frogs having been (like the Knights, Clouds, Acharnians and Plutus) one of the plays most commonly read and therefore most continually and carefully copied, its text is comparatively pure.

In the present edition the innovations will be found to consist chiefly in the ascription of lines to their speakers (e.g. 570, 574), in punctuation or accent (e.g. 66, 279, 285, 455, 507, 574 sq., 605, 610 sqq., 896 sq., 1210) and in a discrimination between the matter of the two versions of the play (1437 sqq.). Conjectures of the editor are included in the text at 645 (οἶν for οἶδ'), 665 (περὶ προῶν), 957 (ἔριν for ἐρῶν), 1130 (correction of order), 1305 (ἐπὶ τοῖτον for ἐπὶ τοῦτον), 1307. Further suggestions are added as queries in the critical notes to 15, 77, 83, 193, 286 sq., 705, 935, 1012, 1028, 1203, 1256, 1285, 1298, 1393, 1403, 1405, 1439 (= 1440), 1517. The MS. readings have been retained and defended in several cases where they are generally rejected without sufficient reason (e.g. 197, 665, 1235, 1249).

An attempt has been made to restore the proper orthographies as indicated by Attic inscriptions and other evidence, e.g. in φάριξ, φημίτερες, ἀναβωίην, ἀνέτετον, τρεῖςκαίδεκα, Τειθρίσται, ἡῖρον, σφῶζω, κῶδιον, κωδιῆριον, πρέσεται, λάθρι, πείκητι, σχινδαλάμων. ποεῖν, ποιῶτω etc. are written (generally with MS. support) wherever the metre permits of a short initial syllable.

The better the actor the more he would perform, so far as the piece permitted. Hence the parts were probably divided as follows. That four actors are on the stage at once is seen from 552 sqq., 1444 sq.

Protagonist: Xanthias, who also plays Euripides (see n. after 1499).

Deuteragonist: Aeschylus, who has previously played Herakles, Charon, Aeacus, Landlady, and perhaps Persephone's maid.

Tritagonist: Dionysus.

Fourth Actor: The Corpse, Plathane, Pluto.

ENTER Dionysus, dressed in a saffron-coloured χιτών and wearing the soft high boots called ἀθόρνα. Over his effeminate tunic (see 46) he has thrown a lion's skin (Λεοντή) in imitation of Herakles, and is also carrying a club (ρόπαλον). As a traveller he is probably wearing a brimmed hat (πέτασος). Xanthias is mounted on a donkey, but is carrying across his shoulders a pole (ἀνάφορον), from either end of which hang bundles of travelling baggage (σκεῖη including στρωματόδεσμα). [The ass is got rid of at the first change of scene.]

The names of slaves were chiefly derived from (1) the colour of their complexion and hair, e.g. Ξανθίας, Περρίας, (2) the country of their origin, e.g. Σύρος, Φρίξ, Γέτας, (3) names frequent in their own country (ἐγχώρια ὀνόματα), e.g. Τίβιος (Cappadocian), (4) names of kings of such countries, e.g. Μίδας (from Phrygia), (5) names of good promise, e.g. Σωσίας.

1. τῶν εἰσθότων: sc. λέγεσθαι. The use of this neut. partic. as a simple adj. (= ἡθαδων) is frequent.

Though Aristophanes chooses to ridicule the cheap buffoonery and clap-trap phrases which pleased the more vulgar part of the audience (θεάτρον), and though he is here presumably 'putting a spoke in the wheel' of his rivals (as in Esp. 58), he is himself occasionally guilty of the same device (fr. 307 Dind.). In Pac. 748 he claims to have done away with the stock jokes of whipped slaves and similar κακὰ καὶ φόβτον καὶ βωμολοχείματ' ἀγεννή, but here he is insidiously introducing them while pretending to despise them.

2. ἐφ' οἷς . . γελῶσιν: i.e. in amusement, while ἄ γελῶσιν would express scorn.

ἀέ is cutting: 'they never fail.' The audience come in for their share of the reproof.

3. ὅ τι βούλει γέ: γέ gives an intonation: 'whatever you like.'

πλὴν πύζομαι. There is a slight pause before these words, and then he forbids the very phrase which Xanthias would have chosen and which he does eventually manage to drag in (30). πύζομαι and ὥς θλίβομαι were some of those cant and vulgar terms which enjoy a vogue for a time without much humour in themselves.

4. πάνυ . . χολή. 'it has become positively sickening' (not only to the speaker, but to people in general). Writing έστ' we may compare (the subject being τοῦτο) Ach. 125 ταῦτα δὴτ' οὐκ ἀγχόνη; and contrast Hor. Sat. 2. 6. 32 hac iuvat et melli est. This seems more natural than έστ' (= 'for by this time there is utter disgust with it').

χολή: cf. Hor. Ep. 1. 19. 20 bilem . . . restri movere tumultus. An anonymous epigram has ὥς καὶ τοῦ μέλιτος τὸ πλέον έστὶ χολή.

5. μηδ' : sc. εἶπω.

ἀστεῖον : πρὶς πρὶς : 'smart,' 'piece of pretty wit.' (Cf. 901, 906. That which (to use eighteenth-century language) takes 'the town' is chic and up-to-date. The opposite is ἀγροικόν. Aristophanes is sarcastic at the prevailing notions of wit.

6. τὸ πάνυ γέλοιον. 'what really is funny'; lit. 'that really funny phrase.' But Di. anticipates his 'really funny' phrase and forbids it; whereupon Xa. is in despair. [γέλοιον is not the Attic accentuation.]

7. ἐκεῖνο : illud : 'that (favourite or notorious) phrase.'

τὸ τί : The article is prefixed to τί or ποῖος mostly when the question refers to something already mentioned (cf. lequel?). Like the present place is Plat. Phaedr. 277 A ΣΩ. νῦν δὴ ἐκεῖνα ἤδη δυνάμεθα κρίνειν. ΦΑΙ. τὰ ποῖα ; (Kühner-Gerth, Gr. Synt. § 465. 2).

8. μεταβαλλόμενος : middle because the action is reflexive. The bearer who shifts the pole from shoulder to shoulder gives himself a change.

τἀνάφορον. The ἀνάφορον (or ἀσίστα) is a carrying-pole like that of the Chinese rather than the milkman's yoke. The latter would not be changed from shoulder to shoulder. Xa. is carrying τὰ στρώματα (Xen. Mem. 3. 13. 6) tied on one end and the other baggage (σκεῖη) on the other. For illustration see Smith, Dict. Ant. i. p. 211.

ὅτι χεῖρητις, 'that you are fit to burst.'

9. τί δὴτ' ἴδαι κ.τ.λ. : not = δεῖ, but sarcastically : 'what was the use of your giving me the baggage to carry (before we came upon the stage), if it was not simply to enable me to make the common jokes! The comedians often satirise their own proceedings, the stage machinery, and the audience.

ταῦτα τὰ σκεύη. taûta (ista) is frequently contemptuous (cf. τοῦτων in v. 14) = 'your old baggage.'

13. εἴπερ ποήσω . . . 'if I am not going to do . . .' More commonly εἴπερ μέλλω ποιῆσειν. For this fut. cf. 20 (εἰπεῖ), 1460, Ar. 759 αἶρε πλῆκτρον, εἰ μαχεῖ, Uss. 1263 μαθητέον τὰρ ἐστὶ πολλοῖς τῶν λόγων, εἴπερ ἀποτείσω μηδέν.

Φρύνιχος: a rival comedian now competing with Aristophanes. His Μοῦσαι won the second prize. [He must be distinguished from (1) the general who figures in the revolution of 411 B.C., and who was assassinated in that year; (2) the tragic poet, who had been dead for two-thirds of a century (see inf. 910).]

We must not take too seriously the attacks of the comic poets upon each other. Their reciprocal charges of staleness, plagiarism and other literary sins are only part of the Dionysiac game. The schol. says that in the extant works of Phrynichus there was nothing of the kind here mentioned.

14. εἴωθε ποιεῖν: playing upon the senses 'do' and 'compose poetry.' This justifies the repetition of the word and also gives the contemptuous point, 'I could make as good a thing as P.'

Λύκις: possibly a nickname. If there was a writer named Lycis he is unknown. Kœk, however, reports that the letters ΛΥΚΙΣ appear in a fragmentary inscription recording dramatic victories, and therefore it is too bold to read the conjecture κάπιλκος.

Ἀμειψίας: a distinguished rival, who won the first prize against the Birds of Aristoph. (414 B.C.), and was second when our poet was third with the Clouds (423 B.C.).

15. σκευηφοροῦσ'. The reading is doubtful and the line may be spurious. One note among the scholia 'implies that the annotator's text' did not possess it (Rutherford). [It might even be suggested that vv. 14, 15 are both interpolated, the former being added under the misconception that the grammar of v. 13 was incomplete.]

Keeping the line (with σκευηφοροῦσ' and the common punctuation) the construction is εἴπερ ποήσω μηδέν τοῦτων ἅπερ Φρύνιχος εἴωθε ποιεῖν καὶ (ἅπερ) Λύκις Ἀμειψίας σκευηφοροῦσι, i.e. 'if I am to do none of those things which P. is accustomed to do (or 'put in his pieces') and (which) Lyc. and Am. do when carrying baggage.' The idiom μηδέν ὥνπερ . . . σκευηφοροῦσι is sufficiently Greek in itself, the accus. being internal. Thus ταῦτα σκευηφοροῦσι = 'in this way do they carry baggage' = 'they do this when carrying baggage.' Cf. inf. 833 ἀπερ ἐκάστοτε | ἐν ταῖς τραγωδίασιν ἑτεραπεύετο, Arch. 617 ἐκείνων ὡν ἐναυμαχήσαμεν, Dem. 18. 198 δηλοῖς δὲ καὶ ἐξ ὧν ζῆς ('from the way in which you spend your life'). In Greek a writer is said to do what he represents others as doing, and a comedian therefore 'carries baggage' in making his characters do so. It might be objected that we should expect the relative to be repeated (χὼν Λύκισ). Even so μὴδ' rather than καὶ would be normal. But in a conversational sentence of some length such awkwardness as exists is not unnatural.

[We might also punctuate (with Bergk) after ποιεῖν and translate 'Also Lycis and Amcipsias always carry baggage in comedy.' But (apart from the abruptness) the point is not that they carry baggage, but that their baggage-carriers always make poor jokes. In a reading τοὺς σκευηφόρους (Fritzsche) the accus. should depend on ποιεῖν, i.e. 'if I am to do none of those things which P. and L. and A. are wont to do to their baggage-carriers.' Possibly, if further conjectures are permissible, we might suggest <ὡς> σκευηφοροῦσ' 'when they . . .'] ἐγὼ θεώμενος, 'when I am a spectator.' The statue of Dionysus was placed in the theatre before the play began, and there is a humorous allusion to this.

17. τούτων: cf. 13.

18. πλεῖν . . . ἀπέρχομαι, 'I go home an older man by more than a year.' These old jokes 'age a man so'; cf. Cic. de Or. 2. 59 senium est cum audio. The schol. quotes Hom. Od. 19. 360 αἶψα γὰρ ἐν κακότητι βροτοὶ καταγηράσκουσι. So stale and weary jests are said ἀπολλύναι, ἀποκναλεῖν, σφάττειν. [πλεῖν should not be called a 'contraction of πλέον.']

20. ὅτι: clearly better than ὅτι. In the sense of the latter the comedian would have preferred εἰ. θλίβεται: slyly getting in the forbidden word (5). τὸ γέλοιον, 'the (usual) funny thing.'

οὐκ ἐρεῖ, 'is not to (be permitted to) say'; cf. 13. Those who alter to ἐρῶ have but a captious sense of humour. The neck is personified, and it gets 'all the kicks without the halfpence'; it has borne all this trouble simply to get a chance of 'speaking its piece,' and now this reward is denied.

21. εἰτ' : indignantis, as often. For the form of expression cf. Lys. 659 ταῦτ' οὐχ ἔβρις τὰ πράγματ' ἐστὶ πολλή;

22. δτ' : i.e. δτε (δτε cannot suffer elision).

Διώνυσος υἱὸς Σταμνίου. Dionysus is the freeborn Athenian master with a patronymic (like Νικίας Νικηράτου, Δημοσθένης Δημοσθένους), while Xanthias, being a slave, 'has no father.' Cf. 631 n. So the breadwoman in Iesp. 1396 cries οὔτοι μὰ τῷ θεῷ καταπροῖξει Μυρτίας | τῆς Ἀγκυλίωνος θυγατέρος καὶ Σωστράτης (-: 'I would have you know I am a freeborn Athenian woman'). The metre here is in keeping with aggrieved dignity.

Σταμνίου. A στάμνος or σταμνίον is a wine-jar, and Di. is the god of wine. But there must be some joke beyond the substitution of Σταμνίου for Διός. Zeus had many titles, and a Ζεὺς στάμνιος is invented on the analogy of Ζεὺς φίλιος, ξένιος, etc. Possibly also there is a pun on ταμίου. In default of anything better we may substitute 'son of Juice' for 'son of Zeus,' while the tone may be given by 'Dionysus FitzDemi-john.' [It might perhaps be guessed that there was some contemporary Athenian of drinking propensities with a name which Σταμνίου would recall.]

ὀχῶ, 'give him a mount' (more commonly 'carry'). Cf. Xen. Hierp. 4. 1 δεῖ τὸν ἵππαρχον προνοεῖν ὅπως ἀναπαίῃ τοὺς ἱππέας τοῦ βαδίζειν, μέτριον μὲν ὀχοῦντα κ.τ.λ.

24. ἵνα μὴ ταλαιπωροῖτο κ.τ.λ. The opt. depends on the historical tense (ὀχεῖσθαι εἶσα) implied in the thought, viz. 'I permitted him to ride (when we set out).' Cf. 766, Iesp. 110 ψήφων δὲ δέισας μὴ δεηθεῖν ποτέ, 'ἵν' ἔχει δικάζειν, αἰγιαλὸν ἔνδον τρέφει (i.e. συνέλεξεν ὥστε τρέφειν), Dem. 22. 11 τοῦτον ἔχει τὸν τρόπον ὁ νόμος, ἵνα μὴδὲ πεισθῆναι . . γένοιτ' ἐπὶ τῷ δήμῳ (i.e. ἐτέθη ὥστε ἔχειν). Kühner-Gerth § 553. 4 n.

The line sounds like a quotation, with ἀχθος φέροι originally metaphorical. This gives point to what follows.

25-30. οὐ γὰρ φέρω 'γώ. Here follows a brief skit on logic and jugglings with words as practised by those who cultivated the society of the sophists (or, as Ar. would imagine, of Socrates). There are also secondary meanings for which it may be unprofitable to seek. Xanthias cuts short the logic with a philistine appeal to facts, 'all I know is that this shoulder—πιέζεται' (30).

26. φέρων γε ταυτί : sc. φέρω, (why, I am bearing) by bearing this.' There is quibbling with various senses of the words in φέρω, τίνα τρόπον, βαρίως, βάρος. To τίνα τρόπον; 'how?'

βαρίως πάνυ plays upon the physical sense and the mental (= molesté, acgre ferre): 'it makes me sore enough.'

τὸ βάρος τοῦθ' takes up βαρίως, 'your said burden (and your said soreness).'

27. οἶνος: better than δνος (which would more naturally be substituted in mss. than rice versa). 'Isn't the donkey bearing that sore burden?' is the natural inquiry, and it contrives to call Xa. a donkey quite as plainly. Xa. indignantly replies 'I'm no donkey.'

31-32. σὺ . . σὺ . .: the first σὺ belongs to φῆς only, 'since you (unlike me) say the donkey does you no good, it is your turn to carry the donkey.'

33. τί γὰρ ἐγὼ οὐκ ἐναυμάχουν; lit. 'why was I not for joining in the sea-fight?' = 'why did I decline to join?' 'The negative imperf. commonly denotes resistance to pressure, or disappointment. Simple negation is aoristic' (Gildersleeve, Gk. Synt. § 216). Cf. Dem. 21. 163 οὐκ ἀνέβαιν' ἐπὶ τὴν ναῖν 'he would not go on board' (lit. 'he was not for embarking'). Xen. Cyr. 1. 1. 21 ἐμάχετο οὐδεὶς, ἀλλ' ἀμαχητὶ ἀπώλλυντο ('nobody would fight').

The reference is to the battle of Arginusae in the previous year (406 B.C.). See Introd. p. xxv. Slaves as well as free men were included in the great armada which the Athenians made a supreme effort to send out, and those who took part in the battle were given their liberty (cf. 693). If Xa. had been one of these he could have snapped his fingers at his master.

34. κωκύειν μακρά, 'a long be-hanged,' instead of 'a long farowell' (χαίρειν). Cf. Vesp. 584 κλᾶειν ἡμεῖς μακρά τὴν κεφαλὴν εἰπόντες τῇ διαθήκῃ, Hor. Sat. 1. 10. 91 te . . iubeo plorare. [μακρά is not strictly identical with μεγάλα, 'loud,' but = (1) 'long' in duration; (2) sounds which carry far (Homeric μακρὸν αὐτεῖν).]

35. κατάβα: the intrans. aor. of imperat. compounds of βαίνω is formed either thus or (more commonly) with -βηθι. The latter represents the imperat. ending -θι (in ἴθι, ἴσθι) added to the root βά (Attic βῆ), while the former is the root-grade βᾶ with imperat. ending -ε (in φέρε, etc.). Thus we have κατά-βᾶ-θι or κατά-βα-ε. Similarly πίμπλά.

35-37. καὶ γὰρ ἐγγὺς . . τραπίσθαι. The rhythm points to parody or semi-quotation. In that case we may join εἰμι with βαδίζω by what is known as the schema Chalcidicum.

Cf. 761, Soph. Aj. 1320 κλόντες εσμεν, ibid. 1324 δρῶν γὰρ ἦν τοιαῦτά με, Eur. Cycl. 381 ἦτε πασχοντες, etc. Otherwise we should better construe ἐγγὺς εἰμι τῆς θύρας, βαδίζων ('as I trudge,' opposed to ὀχοῦμενος) = 'my trudging has at last brought me . . .' Cf. Ecc. 1093 ἐγγὺς ἤδη τῆς θύρας | ἐλκόμενός εἰμι, Plat. Lys. 204 π πόρῳ ἤδη εἰ πορευόμενος τοῦ ἔρωτος.

37. Ἴδεα: as part of my plan.

παῖδ' ὦν, παῖ, ἡμὶ παῖ. [The hiatus is allowable in the colloquial phrase.] The porter (θερωρός) is called three times (the tragic ἐν τρίτοις προσφθέγμασιν) as in And. 1145 παῖ, ἡμὶ, παῖ, παῖ, Aesch. Cho. 651 τρίτον τὸδ' ἐκπέραμα δωμάτων καλῶ. The call is accompanied by loud knocking, either with the knocker (ρόπτρον) or more generally with beating upon the door (κρούειν, κόπτειν) with fist or stick. 'What ho! there! boy! what ho!'

ἡμὶ. The only parts of the verb which are found are ἡμὶ, ἡσί and the aor. ἦν (δ' ἐγώ), ἦ (δ' ὅτ, δ' ἦ).

38. Herakles himself appears at the door. The Athenians would in all probability understand that he is 'at home' in the temple of H. Alexikakos in Melite, the WNW. quarter of Athens. Introd. B, p. xxxiii.

It was part of the regular stage-business (taken from real life) for the porter to show surly annoyance when knocking was impatient (cf. And. 133 sqq.). Herakles, acting as his own porter, keeps up the tradition.

ὡς κενταυρικῶς. The Centaurs were proverbial for βίβρα (Xenophanes 1. 22). Among his other deeds as pioneer in civilisation and destroyer of monsters Herakles had fought with the Centaurs. The story of Nessus is also well known. Hence the choice of this word as = ἐβριστικῶς. 'A savage way, indeed, to knock at a man's door!' Cf. Plant. Truc. 2. 2. 1 quis illic est qui tam proterve nostras aedes ardet?

39. ἐνῆλαθ': an exaggeration, but suited to the act of a Centaur. Literally in Soph. O. 7. 1261 πέλαις διπλαῖς ἐνῆλατ', ἐκ δὲ πυθμένων | ἐκλινε κοῖλα κλῆθρα. That kicking at doors was sometimes resorted to appears from Terence (who imitates Attic comedy), Eun. 2. 2. 54 istis (sc. foris) . . . calcibus insullabis frustra. [Greeks and Romans 'kicked' with the heel, as the make of their shoes would prompt them to do.]

δοτις: quicumque. We should rather supply ἐνῆλατο than ἦν. More fully δοτις might be δοτις δῆ, δοτις ποτέ, or δοτις δῆποτε. Cf. Hor. (Ml.) 2. 13. 1 ille et nefasto te posuit die, quicumque primum (sc. posuit).

τοῦτ' ἴ τ' ἦν; 'what might this mean?' So 1209 and Ach. 767 τοῦτ' ἴ τ' ἦν τὸ πρᾶγμα; The imperf. as in v. 48 ποῖ γῆς ἀπεδήμεις; ('Where might you be going abroad?'). The use is akin to that of ἦν ἄρα ('is, as it seems'), and logically the basis is 'what was this (without our knowing it)?' See Goodwin, M. and T. § 39, Gildersleeve, Gk. Synt. § 220 (where the tense is called the imperf. of 'sudden appreciation of the real state of affairs').

Herakles is first amazed at Dionysus' appearance, gives a start, and is then convulsed with laughter. Di. attributes the start to his own formidable aspect.

40. ὁ παῖς. The nom. with art. is more lordly than the vocative, cf. 271. We must supply e.g. ἀκοιέτω.

41. μὴ μάλινός γε: πρ. ἴδεις, 'Yes! afraid you might be mad.' γε stresses μάλινος.

42. οὐ . . δύναμαι μὴ γιᾶν. The negative infin. after the negative οὐ δύναμαι would more commonly take μὴ οὐ (Kühner-Gerth § 514. 5, Goodwin, M. and T. § 815), but μὴ alone is found too often to provoke suspicion (K.-G. 5 h). Cf. Aesch. P. V. 106 ἀλλ' οὔτε σιγᾶν οὔτε μὴ σιγᾶν τίχας! οἷόν τε μοι τάσδ' ἐστί. Metre of course lends no criterion, since μὴ οὐ forms one syllable. Both uses are combined in Xen. Mem. 34 οὔτε μὴ μεμνηῖσθαι δύναμαι αὐτοῦ, οὔτε μεμνημένος μὴ οἶκ' ἐπαινεῖν.

[Though we cannot always find a special appropriateness in oaths (Introd. pp. liii sq.). Demeter may here be chosen as a goddess of silence.]

43. δάκνω ἐμάντον. From biting the lips comes a colloquial expression 'to bite' in the sense of putting on restraint. Cf. Nub. 1369 τὸν θυμὸν δακῶν. More explicitly Soph. Trach. 976 ἀλλ' ἴσχε δακῶν | στόμα σόν.

44. ἀποσοβῆσαι. There may be a play upon ἀποσβεῖν (cf. γέλωι ἀσβεστος), but there must also be some further reason, lost to us, for the present peculiar application of ἀποσοβεῖν. τὸν γέλωα is a παρά προσδοκίαν for, e.g., τὸν φόβον: ἀποσοβεῖν is used of keeping off flies (the persistent or 'shameless' fly of Homer); and there may have been some Athenian cant phrase which lent humour to such a remark as 'Bother this laugh! I wish it would go away,' accompanied by a gesture.

γέλωα and γέλωτα both occur in comedy, the former being specially Attic.

45. ἐπὶ κροκωτῇ κειμένην: i.e. the λεοντῇ is a sort of ἱμάτιον to the κροκωτόν (=χιτῶν κροκωτός). The latter was a saffron-yellow garment worn for show by women over the χιτῶν proper, but without itself being λευατιον (Dict. Ant. i. p. 564). Only very effeminate men could think of wearing this colour, but—like the κόθορνος—it was part of the ceremonial attire of the statue of Dionysus (Poll. 4. 117, Ath. 198 c). This was not unnatural for the god of festivity.

47. τίς ὁ νοῦς; 'What is the meaning of it?' Cf. Ar. 994 τίς ἡ πίνυα; So the verb νοεῖν, e.g. Plat. Euthyphr. 287 E ἤρουν, ὁ τι νοοίη τὸ ῥῆμα.

τί κόθορνος . . ξυνηθέτην; Cf. Thesm. 140 τίς δαὶ κατόπτρον καὶ ξίφοις κοινωνία; (of Agathon the γύνυς). The κόθορνος is a woman's boot (Eccl. 346, Lys. 657), soft, and capable of being worn on either foot. Its effeminacy appears also from Hdt. 1. 155, where Croesus, recommending Cyrus to make the Lydians γυναῖκας ἀντὶ ἀνδρῶν, would have them wear κόθορνοι. [The use of colthucnus for the tragic buskin is not Greek, but Roman.] In ξυνηθέτην the dual is deliberately used to emphasise the peculiar 'pair' the two things make.

48. ποῖ γῆς ἀπεδήμεις; For the tense see v. 39. These strange additions to the ordinary costume of Di. are taken to mean that he is about to travel.

ἐπιβάτευον Κλεισθέει. The sentence is interrupted. Dionysus begins his explanation at the beginning, viz. how he came to be reading Euripides on board a ship. Lit. 'I was serving Cleisthenes (my trierarch) as a marine,' the dat. being used as in γραμματεῦειν τι etc. For the sense cf. Thuc. 8. 61 Ἀντισθέει ἐπιβάτης ξυνεξηλθε. The ἐπιβάται (militēs classiarii) were the fighting men, who generally numbered ten to the trireme. Cleisthenes is to Aristoph. the type of effeminate and dissolute youth (Eq. 1374 etc.), and the notion of either Cleisthenes as trierarch (a duty imposed as a λητουργία) or Dionysus as fighting man would be sufficiently absurd.

49-50. There was doubtless much boasting after the battle of Arginusae, and such braggadocio is here satirised. ἢ δώδεκ' ἢ τρεῖςκαίδεκα: 'it may be a dozen, it may be thirteen'; it was difficult to keep count exactly of such a trifle.

51. σφώ; i.e. 'a pair of fellows like you!'

κατ' ἔγωγ' ἐξηγρόμην: 'And then I woke.' The words are more probably an aside by Xanthias than a comment by Heracles. Besides their appropriateness in the mouth of the former, a dramatist always finds it desirable to keep his personae from inactivity on the stage (Ath. 190 E). Xanthias of course indulges in derisive gestures, but he must occasionally also speak (cf. 87). ἔγωγ' should be noted. It is not as if he sarcastically completed the tale for Dionysus, 'and then I woke,' but 'and then I woke (if you did not).'

52. καὶ δὴτ': resumptive of v. 48: 'and, to come to what we were saying . . .' Cf. Vesp. 13, Plat. Prot. 310 c.

ἀναγινώσκοντι . . . τὴν Ἀνδρομέδαν: a very popular play of Euripides produced in 412 B.C. Much use is made of it in burlesque in Thesm. 1018 sqq. [Paley's notion that the ship was named Andromeda and that D. read the name on the ship's side is not only extremely unnatural but is disproved by the article. D. would not there read 'the Andromeda.']

54. πῶς οἶα: grammatically a parenthetical question. The corresponding English is 'you can't think how much.' Cf. Nab. 881 καὶ τῶν σιδίων | βαρύνουσ' ἐποίει πῶς δοκεῖς ('you can't imagine how well'), Plut. 742 etc. The use is found in tragedy, comedy and prose. Cf. Plat. Symp. 216 D ἀνοιχθεὶς πόσῃ οἶσθε γίμει εὐφροσύνῃ.

55. πόθος; πόσος τις: Point is given to this query only if we assume that Herakles draws himself up at the word ἐπ' αὐτῷ and is prepared to deal with the πόθος which has 'struck' his 'little brother' (60). 'Struck you, did he? How big was he?'

μικρὸς ἡλίκος Μόλων. The precise sense of these words is perhaps not now discoverable. It is altogether improbable that Dionysus would reply that his πόθος was μικρὸς. Even if ironically spoken the word seems to lack humour. There appears at first sight to be an almost exact correspondence with Plant. Cure. 1. 2. 14 (taken from Attic comedy). A. Silit hanc anus. B. Quantillum silit? A. Modica est, capit quadrantal. But in modica est there is a sarcasm on the thirst of old women in general: 'this one is moderate.'

Moreover, we are uncertain as to Molon. The name was not rare, and we are told that among its bearers there was an actor of Euripides (Dem. 19. 246), and also a foot . . . (λωποδίτης). While Eustath. (p. 1831. 27) states that Μόλωνες = οἱ παμμεγέθεις, the schol. reports from Didymus (ob. circ. A.D. 10) that the λωποδίτης was a small man. The actor would necessarily be of good stature.

That the πόθος is meant to be great is clear. If, therefore, we do not (1) take the answer of Di. to be simply ironical, 'a little one (of course), the size of -Molon,' we may perhaps (2) render μικρὸς ἡλίκος Μόλων by 'as big as Little Molon,' understanding (ὁ) Μικρὸς to be an ironical nickname applied to a huge man (cf. 'the Woolwich infant' and the like). Cf. Inv. 8. 32 nanum . . Atlanta vocamus and context. Such nicknames were frequent. Cf. Xen. Mem. 1. 4. 2 Ἀριστόδημον τὸν

Μικρὸν ἐπικαλούμενον. Strab. 14. 2. 26 ὁ Μαλακὸς Ἀπολλώνιος. The objection to the order (if we do not actually transpose with ἡλικὸς μικρὸς Μόλων) is perhaps met by regarding the words as partly quoted (in parody) and arranged so as to convey a surprise, the promise in the first word μικρὸς being contradicted by the last Μόλων.

58. οὐ γὰρ ἀλλ' κ.τ.λ., 'for, really, I am in a bad way': a common elliptical expression. Cf. 192, 498. [There was apparently an early confusion between οὐ γὰρ ἄλλο (εστίν ἢ) . . and οὐ γὰρ (τοιούτως ἔχει or the like). ἀλλά . . But the analysis of such combinations is generally a slippery matter, and οὐ γὰρ, ἀλλά . . ('it is not so, but . .') may after all be the origin.]

59. τοιοῦτος ἡμερὸς κ.τ.λ. His painful case calls for the tragic style, in which he is naturally an adept, as god of the theatre and lover of Euripides. ἡμερὸς is scarcely conversational Attic, though employed in the higher prose of Plato. Cf. ἀαρῶπται (66).

60. οὐκ ἔχω φράσαι. 'I cannot (find words to) express it.'

61. δμως γε μέντοι κ.τ.λ. The rhythm suggests tragic quotation. By αἰνιγμός (or αἰνιγμα) is meant any indirect, allusive, figurative form of expression, in place of speaking ἀπλῶς, cf. Aesch. P. 17. 637 οὐκ ἐμπλέκων αἰνιγματ' ἀλλ' ἀπλῶ λόγῳ, Anaxil. ap. Athen. 558 αἰ λαλοῦσ' ἀπλῶς μὲν οὐδέν, ἀλλ' ἐν αἰνιγμοῖς τι.

62. ἤδη . . ἔτνους; Herakles will understand an appeal to his appetite, which was proverbial, as became the patron of athletes (for whose greed see Eur. fr. 284. 7). Cf. 550 sqq., Eur. Alc. 719 sqq., Ion fr. 29 ἐπὶ δὲ τῆς εὐφημίας (ἐφηρίας!) κατέπινε καὶ τὰ κᾶλα καὶ τοὺς ἀνθρακας, and the proverb Ἡρακλῆς ἐνίχεται. In Athen. 411 there is an elaborate description of his ἀδηφαγία. In Vesp. 60 Aristoph. affects to be tired of Herakles 'cheated of his dinner' and in Pac. 741 considers the exhibition of his gluttony a stale jest. Yet he does not disclaim the subject here and Ar. 1689. The joke is similar to that concerning aldermen and turtle-soup.

ἔτνους: soup or brose of peas or pulse; cf. Eq. 1171 ἔτνοι πλίνων. The schol. tells us that it was a favourite strengthening food for fighting men. [ἔτνους is brought out after a brief pause, as a half surprise, in place of something more noble.]

64. ἄρ' ἐκδιδάσκω κ.τ.λ., 'Do I make myself clear, or shall I express it another way?' According to the schol. half the line is from the Hypsipyle of Euripides. With ἐτέρᾳ cf. ταύτῃ, τῇδε, and for the synecphonesis (ἢ ἐτέρᾳ) or prodelision (ἢ ἑτέρᾳ) — whichever may be correct — see Introd. pp. xli sq.

66. δαρδάπτει : see 59 n.

67. καὶ ταῦτα τοῦ τεθνηκότος ; usually καὶ ταῦτα is joined with a participle (cf. 704 n.), but that construction is here prevented by the article. There is, however, no special virtue in a participle to give καὶ ταῦτα its meaning, which is simply 'and that too' (idque), and is theoretically capable of a wide use. With the present place cf. Aesch. Æum. 628 οὐ γὰρ τι ταῖτον ἄνδρα γενναῖον θανεῖν | καὶ ταῦτα πρὸς γυναικός. The article τοῦ might possibly (as Blaydes suggests) distinguish the dead Euripides from the living Eur. (his son or nephew), but more naturally it is generic, 'actually for a person who is dead!'

68 sq. κούδεις γέ μ' ἂν πείσαιεν . . τὸ μὴ οὐκ κ.τ.λ. Though in practice τὸ μὴ with infin. comes to be equal to ὥστε μὴ (cf. Lys. 1196), in strict grammar it began as a contained accus. (here of the persuasion administered). Cf. Aesch. P.V. 950 οὐδὲν γὰρ αὐτῷ ταῦτ' ἐπαρκέσει τὸ μὴ | πείσειν ἀτίμως (of the kind of ἐπαρκεσις). A freer use followed ; e.g. Ar. 36 αὐτὴν μὲν οὐ μισοῦντ' ἐκείνην τὴν πόλιν | τὸ μὴ οὐ μεγάλην εἶναι φύσει (where μισοῦντε contains the notion of διὰ μίσους ἀρνούμενω).

70. κατωτέρω. The word is mouthed, in answer to κάτω : 'Yes, indeed ; and if there is any place downer down.'

71. ποιητοῦ δεξιού, 'a poet who understands his business,' i.e. technically a good craftsman. Cf. δεξιότητος 1009 n.

Dionysus is the god of the theatre and is alarmed for the theatrical prospects of the city Dionysia. Introd. p. xii.

72. οἱ μὲν γὰρ κ.τ.λ. From the Oeneus of Euripides. The schol. quotes two lines of στιχομῆθια, viz. <A.> σὺ δ' ὦδ' ἔρηνος ξυμμάχων ἀπόλλυσαι ; <B.> οἱ μὲν γὰρ κ.τ.λ. It is commonly assumed that the first line was spoken by Diomedes, while the second is the reply of the unhappy Oeneus, his grandfather.

73 sq. Ἰοφῶν : the son of Sophocles. He had produced numerous plays with success during his father's lifetime, from at least as early as 428 B.C., when he obtained the second prize in competition with the Hippolytus of Euripides ; but it was suspected that Sophocles lent him help (hence 78 sq.). Nevertheless he competed against Sophocles himself.

[There was also a younger Euripides, whom Ar. does not notice. Among poetic relatives of Aeschylus were his son Euphorion and his nephew Philocles, the latter of whom Ar. ridicules elsewhere (Thesm. 168, Vesp. 461).]

τοῦτο γάρ τοι κ.τ.λ., i.e. 'Yes (that only bears me out), for, in point of fact, he is the only king left to bless us' (not = τοῦτο το ἀγαθὸν λαίπων ἐστί). καὶ is a regular part of the phrase: cf. Thesm. 81 τοῦτ' αὐτὸ γάρ τοι κἀπολείν με προσδοκῶ.

εἰ καὶ τοῦτ' ἄρα, 'if even that (is such) after all.'

πρότερον, 'preferable.' So μικροτερον = μικροτιοτερον. Cf. Nub. 643. Palmer's πρωτερον ἀντ' is very attractive, but not necessary. With the expression he compares Ecc. 925 οἶδεαι γάρ ως σε πρότερον εἰσέτω ἀντ' ἐμοῦ.

77. ἐκείθεν, 'from the other world.' Cf. 82 n.

78. ἀπολαβὼν αὐτὸν μόνον, 'getting him all by himself;' cf. Pac. 508 αὐτοὶ δὲ μόνον λαβόμεν' οἱ γίωργοι.

79. ὃ τι ποῖ: not merely 'what he can do' but 'how he can compass.'

κωδωνίσσω: cf. 723 κεκωδωνισμένοι (of coins) and δακωδωνιστοί. Properly κωδωνίζειν is to 'treat like a bell,' and the word is therefore appropriate to the ringing of a coin in order to test the metal.

82. ὃ δ' ἐβόλος κ.τ.λ. The rhythm suggests a tragic original. For ἐνθάδε 'in this world' and its opposite ἐκεί cf. Plat. Rep. 330 n οἱ λεγόμενοι μῦθοι περὶ τῶν ἐν Αἴδου, ὡς τὸν ἐνθάδε ἀδικήσαντα δεῖ ἐκεῖ δοῦναι δίκην, Eur. Med. 1073 εὐδαίμονοιτον, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖ. The amiable character of Sophocles appears incidentally from Plat. Rep. 329 n.

83. Ἀγάθων: Agathon, a rich, handsome and accomplished pupil of the rhetorical sophists Gorgias and Prodicus, was born about 447 B.C. and had won success with tragedies by the year 410. Cf. Ath. 217 A, Plat. Symp. 175 γ' ἡ δὲ σφαιρία . . . παρὰ σφαιρίῳ ἀποτο σφαιρία ἐξέλασσε οὐκ ἔτι. The name of Plato's Symposium is laid at his house. As Euripides had previously drawn King Archelaus of Macedonia (cf. ibid. 175 γ' ἡ δὲ σφαιρία . . . παρὰ σφαιρίῳ ἀποτο σφαιρία ἐξέλασσε οὐκ ἔτι) as a topographical deity and so to his states that he was (cf. ibid. 175 γ' ἡ δὲ σφαιρία . . . παρὰ σφαιρίῳ ἀποτο σφαιρία ἐξέλασσε οὐκ ἔτι) from the real one.

cf. ibid. 175 γ' ἡ δὲ σφαιρία . . . παρὰ σφαιρίῳ ἀποτο σφαιρία ἐξέλασσε οὐκ ἔτι.

The passage is meant to sound as if Agathon was dead. οἶχεται suggests this, and in the next line ἀγαθὸς ποιητὴς κ.τ.λ., 'a good poet and regretted by his friends,' recalls an obituary notice 'a good citizen (πολίτης) and respected by all who knew him.' It was not, indeed, the approved Athenian custom to place upon a tomb a complimentary inscription beyond the word χρηστός. Cf. Theoph. Char. 13. Nevertheless such expressions may very well have been a sort of formula, particularly used in the ἔπαινος at the funeral feast.

For this notion ἀποἶχεται is less good, but in ἐμ' οἶχεται (of Dind.) the emphatic pronoun is out of place. It is therefore not impossible that, simulating the tearful emotion of the funeral ἔπαινος, Dionysus says with broken voice (ἐν παρολῇ) ἀπολιπὼν μ' ὁ-ο-οἶχεται. This trick was a natural one for comedy. Cf. Eq. 32 βρατετέτας (in fear), Ar. 310 ποποποποποῦ, Plaut. Most. 316 (a tipsy man) ο-ο-ocellus es meus.

85. εἰς μακάρων εὐωχίαν: keeping up the play in οἶχεται. There is an obvious suggestion of μακάρων νήσοις or μακαρῶν εἰδαιμονίαν. Cf. Plat. Phaed. 115 c οἰχέσθουαι ἀπὼν εἰς μακάρων δὴ τινας εἰδαιμονίας. But since Agathon (a good diner, τὴν τράπεζαν λαμπρὸς, according to the schol.) has gone to Macedonia, there is a pun upon Μακεδόνων and a substitution of εὐωχίαν for εἰδαιμονίαν. He has gone 'to the Banquets of the Blest' (or, to adapt a modern phrase, 'where good men go when they di - ne'). Macedonian eating and drinking were proverbial (Ath. 126 E). Doubtless, also, there is an allusion to the blessedness of those who can manage to get away from the present trouble and poverty of Athens.

86. ὁ δὲ Ξενοκλῆς --: With this punctuation Dionysus does not let Herakles finish his sentence, but finishes it for him, as if he knew what he was necessarily about to say: H. 'And Xenocles --' D. 'Be hanged, by all means.' This gives a more natural use of ἢ Δα than if we put a question at Ξενοκλῆς. No words are wasted on Xen.; he is beyond redemption.

Ξενοκλῆς. For the form (not Ξενοκλῆς) see 787 n. Carcinus, a tragedian of the date of Aeschylus and an inventor of dances, had three sons, of whom Xenocles was also a tragedian, while Xenotimus and Xenarchus were χοροῖται. The whole family incurred the ridicule, not only of Aristophanes (e.g. Vesp. 1500 sqq.), but of other comedians (e.g. Pherecrates and Plato). According to Ar. (Thesm. 169) ὁ δὲ Ξενοκλῆς ὢν κακὸς κακῶς ποιεῖ, and both our poet and the comic Plato satirise his recourse to tricks of plot and scene. We may best understand Pac. 792 μηχανοδιόφης and Plato's δωδεκαμήχανος to τοῦτο γάρ τοι κ.τ.λ., i.e. 'Yes (that only bears me out), for, in point of fact, he is the only king left to bless us' (not = τοῦτο τὸ ἀγαθὸν λοιπὸν ἐστὶ). καὶ is a regular part of the phrase: cf. Thesm. 81 τοῦτ' αὐτὸ γάρ τοι κάπολεῖν με προσδοκῶ.

εἰ καὶ τοῦτ' ἄρα, 'if even that (is such) after all.'

76. Σοφοκλέα: scanned with synizesis (Σοφοκλῆα). So perhaps Ηγλέα 863 n. and certainly Ηρακλέα Thesm. 28. In tragedy such pronunciation is not rare.

πρότερον, 'preferable.' So priorem = superiorem. Cf. Nub. 643. Palmer's πρότερον ἀντ' is very attractive, but not necessary. With the expression he compares Eccles. 925 οἶδεις γὰρ ὡς σε πρότερον εἰσεῖς' ἀντ' ἐμοῦ.

77. ἐκεῖθεν, 'from the other world.' Cf. 82 n.

78. ἀπολαβὼν αὐτὸν μόνον, 'getting him all by himself;' cf. Pind. 508 αὐτοὶ δὴ μόνοι λαβώμεθ' οἱ γεωργοί.

79. ὅ τι ποιεῖ: not merely 'what he can do' but 'how he can compose.'

κωδωνίσσω: cf. 723 κικωδωνισμένοις (of coins) and ἀκωδώνιστος. Properly κωδωνίζειν is to 'treat like a bell,' and the word is therefore appropriate to the ringing of a coin in order to test the metal.

82. ὁ δ' εὐκολος κ.τ.λ. The rhythm suggests a tragic original. For ἐνθάδε 'in this world' and its opposite ἐκεῖ cf. Plat. Rep. 330 n οἱ λεγόμενοι μῦθοι περὶ τῶν ἐν Αἰδοῦ, ὡς τὸν ἐνθάδε ἀδικήσαντα δεῖ ἐκεῖ διδόναι δίκην, Eur. Med. 1073 εὐδαιμονοῖτον, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖ. The amiable character of Sophocles appears incidentally from Plat. Rep. 329 n.

83. Ἀγάθων: Agathon, a rich, handsome and accomplished pupil of the rhetorical sophists Gorgias and Prodicus, was born about 447 B.C. and had won success with tragedies by the year 416. Cf. Ath. 217 A. Plat. Symp. 175 E ἡ δὲ σὴ σοφία . . . παρὰ σοῦ νέου ὄντος οὕτω σφόδρα ἐξέλαμψε κ.τ.λ. The scene of Plato's Symposium is laid at his house. In 407 B.C. he had withdrawn (as Euripides had previously done) to the court of King Archelaus of Macedonia. In the Thesmophoriazusae he is satirised as a fop, but the present place shows that both his literary and social merits were placed high. Aristotle (Poet. 9) states that he was original and inventive in his plots, but also (ibid. 18) that he was the first to disconnect the choric lyrics from the real matter of the play.

ἀπολιπὼν μ' ἀποίχεται, 'he has departed and left me.' See crit. note. οἴχεται of the best mss. gives the best sense.

The passage is meant to sound as if Agathon was dead. οἶχεται suggests this, and in the next line ἀγαθὸς ποιητὴς κ.τ.λ., 'a good poet and regretted by his friends,' recalls an obituary notice 'a good citizen (πολίτης) and respected by all who knew him.' 85. ἐς μακάρων εὐωχίαν: keeping up the play in οἶχεται. There is an obvious suggestion of μακάρων νήσοις or μακαρῶν εὐδαιμονίαν. Cf. Plat. Phaed. 115 c οἰχέσθουαι ἀπὼν εἰς μακάρων δὴ τινὰς εὐδαιμονίας. 'Be hanged, by all means.' This gives a more natural use of ἢ Δα than if we put a question at Ξενοκλῆς. No words are wasted on Xen.; he is beyond redemption.

Ξενοκλῆς. For the form (not Ξενοκλῆς) see 787 n. Carcinus, a tragedian of the date of Aeschylus and an inventor of dances, had three sons, of whom Xenocles was also a tragedian, while Xenotimus and Xenarchus were χοροῖται. We may best understand Pac. 792 μηχανοδίφης and Plato's δωδεκαμήχανος to refer to his frequent introduction of melodramatic mechanical devices. The schol. on Iuc. l.c. says that Xenocles δοκεῖ μηχανὰς καὶ τερατείας εἰσάγειν ἐν τοῖς δράμασιν. Nevertheless, he won a dramatic victory over Euripides (and his Troades tetralogy) in 415 B.C. Aelian (V.H. 2. 8.) calls the verdict γέλοιον, but this opinion was easy to express when the lapse of centuries had eliminated Xenocles from the canon of the tragedians.

87. Πυθάγγελος δέ; Nothing is known of Pythangelus. Since there is no reply to this question we may suppose that the answer is a sort of 'silence of Ajax,' or at most a contemptuous shrug of the shoulder. The latter would give point to the following remark of Xanthias, whose time has come to say or do something (see 51 n.). '(You shrug your shoulder), but (while you are talking about all these people) there is no talk about me and my sore shoulder.' [It is, indeed, possible that there was some well-known story relating to Pyth. and his shoulder—he may have had a thrashing or been a hunchback and Xanthias may consequently break in with 'Talking of shoulders, etc.' Others suppose that a line has been lost, and Tyrrell would read HP. Πυθάγγελος δέ; <ΔΙ. περί γε τοῦδ' οἶδεις λόγος | πλὴν τοῦ πειραβεῖν>. ΞΑ. περί ἐμοῦ δ' κ.τ.λ. If anything is to be supplied this could hardly be bettered; but the first explanation seems sufficiently natural.]

90. πλεῖν ἢ μύρια : more typically Attic than πλείω (πλέον) ἢ . . . But it is flouting the evidence to deny the use of the latter.

91. πλεῖν ἢ σταδίῳ λαλίστερα : a metaphor from the δόλιχος or long foot-race; 'they could give him two hundred yards and beat him.' Cf. Num. 430 τῶν Ἑλλήνων εἶναι με λέγειν ἑκατὸν σταδίοισιν ἀριστον. A similar metaphor, but from the short race (στάδιον), occurs in a fragment of Euripides ὥσπερ ἀγαθοὶ δρομῆς | ἐκ δέκα ποδῶν ἤρει λέγων τοῖς ῥήτορας ('after giving them ten feet start').

92. ἐπιφυλλίδες. The precise meaning of this word is uncertain. Explanations given are : (1) vines which grow rank without bearing grapes (Fritzsche) : cf. the Barren Fig-tree. But for this there is no proper evidence ; (2) vines which bear poor little grapes at the tops above the leaves ; (3) poor little grapes growing in such a position, and therefore not worth gathering ; (4) little bunches of grapes attached to the larger bunches (a sort of leafage to them). The last is one of the explanations of the scholia. So far as the formation of the word is concerned we may compare it with ἐπιστομῖς, ἐπιδορᾶνις, ἐπιγλωττίς, and these point to something which either grows upon leaves or (more naturally) is itself a leafage to something else; they certainly lend no support to the notion of a vine. The whole weight of evidence (Steph. Thesaur.) is for the sense βοτρυδία or exiles racemi, even if we cannot be more precise. We may suspect that whereas the proper σταφυλαί grow clear with full fruit, the ἐπιφυλλίδες are the miserable little bunches which seem to belong to the leaves. Sufficient notice has hardly been taken of Dionys. Hal. Rhet. 18 ἡγοῦνται τοῖς ἐπιλόγοις ὥσπερ ἐν δείπνῳ τραγήματα εἶναι τῶν λόγων καὶ ὥσπερ ἐπιφυλλίδας καὶ στωμύλματα, which at least puts out of court the meaning of 'vinea.' That interpretation seems indeed to have been due to a misapprehension of μουσεῖα as denoting the place instead of the persons.

στωμύλματα, 'chatterboxes'; lit. 'pieces of chatter.' The neut. abstract of a person is not rare: cf. λάλημα (Soph. Ant. 320). The act. sense (= δὲ λαλεῖ) is rare as compared with the passive, e.g. παίδευμα (= δὲ παιδεύεται).

93. χελιδόνων μουσεῖα, 'choirs of swallows.' μουσεῖον (like θέατρον, δικαστήριον, 'choir,' 'school') may be used either of a place or of the gathering in it. [The schol. here quotes Eur. fr. 88 (Nauck) πολλοὶς δ' ἀνείρπε κισσοῖς, εἰφύης κλάδος, | χελιδόνων μουσεῖον. There is obviously a corruption in this for ἀηδόνων μουσεῖον (Meineke), the substitution being a slip of the schol. due to our context in Aristophanes. Cf. Eur. Hel. 1107 σὲ τὰν ἐναίλοισ ὑπὸ δένδροκόμοις | μουσεῖα . . ἐνίζουσιν . . μελωδὸν ἀηδόνα. Swallows do not gather to sing in the ivy, and, as songsters, they can only be treated with disdain.] χελιδόνων μουσεῖα is a humorous oxymoron, with a parodist's perversion of the Euripidean ἀηδόνων.

The twittering of the swallow was to the Greek the embodiment of the unintelligible or inarticulate (and hence the story that the tongueless Philomela or Procne—according to different accounts—was turned into a swallow). Cf. 681 n., Aesch. Ag. 1034 χελιδόνος δίκην | ἀγνώτα φωνὴν βάρβαρον κεκτημένη. So χελιδονίζειν = βαρβαρίζειν. Not only (1) the μειρακύλλια cannot express themselves in intelligible Greek, but (2) they are garrulous. For the latter characteristic of the swallow cf. Verg. Georg. 4. 307 garrula . . . hirundo, Theoph. Char. 5 χελιδόνων λαλιότεροι.

λαβηταὶ τέχνης, 'who outrage Art.' The article is absent because of the personification.

94. Δ: reverting to the gender of ταῦτ: sc. τὰ μειρακύλλια.

θᾶπτον, 'double quick.' Like ocius, the word came to be used as a positive. It acquired this meaning partly because ἦν μόνον χορὸν λάβη, 'if only they once get a play accepted.' A poet who wished to be one of the competitors at the dramatic festival must first apply to the archon for a chorus (= χορὸν αἰτεῖν), to be provided and trained at the expense of a χορηγός. If he succeeds, he is said χορὸν λαβεῖν; the archon χορὸν δίδωσι. It is not known exactly on what principle the archon acted, but it is evident that he gave the preference to those who had previously won or approached success (οἱ εἰδοκίμοι καὶ δοκιμασθέντες says a schol. on Plato), and he must have used his best judgment in the case of new blood. The Athenian audience expressed its opinion freely by hissing, disturbance and refusal to listen (= ἐκσυρίττειν, ἐκβάλλειν), and a playwright who made an egregious failure would 'disappear' from the arena. For the expression cf. Eg. 513 βασανίζειν πῶς οὐχὶ πάλαι χορὸν αἰτοῖη καθ' ἑαυτόν, Pac. 801 ὅταν χορὸν . . μὴ 'χῃ Μόρσιμοι.

96. γόνιμον, 'virile,' having fertility in matter and ideas, like a σπέρμα γόνιμον from which something will grow. An egg is γόνιμον when it will hatch into a chicken; otherwise it is ἀνεμαῖον.

. . ἄν οὐχ εὖρος: a somewhat unusual position of ἄν. Cf. Iuc. 137 ἀλλ', ὦ μέλ', ἄν μοι σιτίων διπλῶν ἔδει, Eur. Tro. 416 ἄταρ λέχος γε τῆσδ' ἄν οἶκ ἐκτησάμην.

97. The rhythm of this line is tragic, and λάκοι suggests quotation.

δοτις . . λάκοι (followed by δοτις . . φθίγγεται): instead of λακήσεται. Goodwin (M. and T. § 57) calls the use 'final,' but this cannot be substantiated. Parallel is Soph. Ph. 279 (ὀρώντα) . . ἄνδρα δ' οὐδέν' ἐντοπον, | οἶχ' δοτις ἀρκέσειεν, οὐδ' δοτις νόσοι | κάμνοντι σιλλάβοιτο, where Jebb explains the opt. as the past indirect of the delib. subjunctive. He treats e.g. Trach. 903 κρίψας' ἑαυτήν, ἐνθα μὴ τις εἰσίδοι as an extension of the same. But we have again to consider e.g. Aesch. Cho. 171 οὐκ ἔστιν δοτις πλὴν ἐμοῦ κέραιτό νιν and the like. These are rightly treated by Goodwin (§ 241) as potential. Other potentials without ἄν survived in poetry e.g. Aesch. Ag. 557 τὰ μὲν τις εὖ λέξειεν, Herond. 3. 74 οὐδέις σ' ἐπαιδέσειεν, Eur. I.A. 418 ὥστε τερφθείης ἰδών, and in prose and comedy in the expressions ὥς δόξειεν, ὥς εἴποι τις (see note on Plat. Proem to Ideal Commonwealth 360 n). There is also a well-known tendency to 'assimilate' the verb of a relat. clause to an optat. of the introducing clause, but such instances are capable of a better explanation than the word 'attraction.'

It is generally recognised by comparative philologists that the best ascertained original sense of the opt. was potential ('may' or 'can,' and, after a past tense, 'might' or 'could'), and that the opt. of the wish (for example) is derived from this. The addition of ἄν is later, the particle serving as a help-word. It was not ἄν which justified the optative; it only assisted the sense. Is it not, therefore, easiest to suppose that when, in relat. clauses attached to a sentence containing an opt. (potential or of wish), the opt. (commonly called 'assimilated') is used, it is really nothing but the pure potential more easily retained in such a neighbourhood? This is apparently the view of Brugmann (Griech. Gramm. § 560). A so-called 'final' opt. or 'remote deliberative' falls easily under this heading. So the instance here = 'one who could utter.' Similarly in wishes, e.g. Eur. Hcl. 435 τίς ἄν πελωρὸς ἐκ δόμων μόλοι, | ὅστις διαγγείλει ('who might announce').

We are apt to be too much influenced by the fact that Attic Greek had practically ceased to use the ἄν-less potential in prose (except in one or two phrases) and therefore to look for too recondite a reason for such an opt. when it occurs with the assistance of another. Doubtless the opt. in εἴποις ἄν helps to retain the potential ὅστις λάκκι, but it does not create it. Meanwhile we call the fut. ὅστις φθέγγεται one of 'purpose,' but the two constructions are in reality simply 'you would not find a poet who could deliver himself of a fine expression, i.e. one who will utter . . .'

λάκκι suggests a kind of oracular deliverance. Cf. Plut. 39 τί δῆτα Φοῖβος ἔλακεν ἐκ τῶν στεμμάτων; Eur. I.T. 976 τρίποδες ἐκ χρυσοῦ λακῶν | Φοῖβοι.

99. παρακεκινδυνευμένον, 'boldly ventured'; i.e. an expression which takes some risks in respect of being received with approval (inf. 1108). Cf. Hor. Od. 4. 2. 10 seu per audaces nova dithyrambos | verba derolrit.

100. αἰθέρα Διὸς δωμάτιον, 'apartment of Zeus' (Iovis cubiculum), a prosaic burlesque of a ῥῆμα in the Melanippe of Euripides δμνυμι δ' ἱερὸν αἰθέρ' ὀκνησιν Διὸς (quoted again in Thesm. 272), cf. 311. There could be no objection to the expression 'Zeus dwelling in the sky,' since Homer has Ζεὺς αἰθέρι ναιῶν, and therefore we must conclude that, to Ar. at least, the noun οὐρανὸν Διὸς carried with it a rather ludicrous or prosaic suggestion not belonging to the verbal phrase, perhaps rather like 'domicile.' In δωμάριον the dimin. should be noted. The vast air is, it appears, but a δωμάριον. With the comic result cf. Plaut. Amph. 3. 1. 3 (Iuppiter) in supriore qui habito cenaculo.

χρόνου πόδα. Euripides had said (Bacch. 888) δαρόν χρόνου πόδα ('stride') and fr. 428 καὶ χρόνον προῖχαι ποῖς, personifying Χρόνος. Shakespeare also (A. Y. L. L. 3. 2) has 'the lazy foot of Time.' Greek literature was cautious with metaphors, since a quick intelligence was apt to visualise the notion, and so discover incongruities and frigidities which might escape those who have no habit of reducing a phrase to distinct apprehension.

101. φρένα μὲν οὐκ κ.τ.λ.: referring, though not directly, to Eur. Hipp. 612 ἡ γλῶσσ' ὁμώμοχ', ἡ δὲ φρήν ἀνώμοτος, which the comedian wittily brings home inf. 1471, as he does also in Thesm. 275. The meaning of Eurip. is that Hippolytus has sworn without due cognisance and that his conscience is therefore not bound. He had not sworn with full judgment (φρήν) of the circumstances. Cicero (Off. 3. 29. 107) explains and upholds the saying. Cf. Ov. Her. 21. 135 quae iurat mens est: nil coniuravimus illa: Illa fidem dictis addere sola potest. But this attitude opens the gate for much casuistry, and the business of Athenian life could hardly have been carried on if oaths had not been felt to be absolutely binding. The δρκος entered into so many relations of political, social and judicial affairs in which it was almost the only safeguard (cf. προωμοσία, ἀντωμοσία, ἰπωμοσία, ἐξωμοσία etc.) that, if the prevailing superstitious belief in the penalties of perjury were destroyed, the very existence of society was threatened. The old school, therefore, regard the Euripidean line as extremely dangerous. In Arist. Rhet. 3. 15. 8 a certain Hygiaenon, during a law case, charges Eur. with ἀσέβεια in this verse. But Eur. was quite innocent of the meaning that the lips might swear while the mind had no intention to keep the oath.

Commentators do not, however, appear to have noted the form and rhythm of the present line, which are very different from those of the verse in the Hippolytus, and, indeed, only just escape not making a verse at all. It looks as if there were some other passage in the mind of Aristophanes, which he proceeds to garble. We should not print (with Blaydes, Holden, etc.) both lines as quotation, but mark at least εἰσαγωγή.

σασαν ἰδίᾳ τῆς φρενός as a παρά προσδοκίαν, i.e. 'a mind which refuses to swear by victims, but a tongue which—perjured itself without regard to the mind.' Euripides had probably said in some natural connexion only φρένα οὐκ ἐθέλουσαν δμῶσαι καθ' ἱερῶν. This will explain the difference of tense, ἐθέλουσαν being in the quotation, but ἐπισηκῆσασαν Aristophanes' account of the subsequent action. [If 'tongue' was in the parodied passage the form would there of course be γλώσσαν not γλώτταν.]

καθ' ἱερῶν, lit. 'down upon the heads of victims' = 'while devoting victims.' Cf. Thuc. 5. 47 δυνάμει δρῶν τὸν μέγιστον κατὰ ἱερῶν τελείων, Eq. 660 κατὰ χιλίων παρήνεσα | εὐχὴν ποιήσασθαι χιμάρων.

103. σὲ . . ἀρίσκει; Both dat. and accus. are Attic with ἀρίσκειν, the acc. being more idiomatic to that dialect. The emphasis of σὲ must not be overlooked: 'do you like that sort of thing?' i.e. 'some people do, no doubt; but do you?'

μᾶλλον: i.e. μὴ (λέγε "ἀρίσκει"), ἀλλὰ κ.τ.λ. 'Don't say "/>

ὥς καὶ σοὶ δοκεῖ: (1) 'and you think so, too,' or (2) 'as even you think (and you are not particularly bright).' The latter is at least the most humorous.

105. μὴ τὸν ἐμὸν οἶκε νοῦν: playing upon two senses of οἶκεν: (1) 'dwell in' (2) 'manage' (inf. 976). When Euripides (fr. 144 N) says μὴ τὸν ἐμὸν οἶκε νοῦν· ἐγὼ γὰρ ἀρκέσω the whole expression is the tragic and dignified equivalent of 'mind your own business.' So I.A. 331 οἶχι δεινὰ; τὸν ἐμὸν οἶκεν οἶκον οἶκ' ἐάσομαι; ('manage my own concerns'), Andr. 581 πῶς; ἢ τὸν ἐμὸν οἶκον οἶκήσεις μολῶν | δεῦρ'; οἶχ' ἅλῃς σοι τῶν κατὰ Σπάρτην κρατεῖν; Prose would use διοικεῖν and Ar. plays with the other sense. In μὴ τὸν ἐμὸν οἶκε νοῦν· ἔχεις γὰρ—οἶκίαν there is also perhaps the point 'for you have'—but then instead of 'a νοῦς of your own,' he will only go so far as to admit that Herakles has 'an οἶκία.' ['My mind can mind itself: never you mind.']

106. καὶ μὴν ἀτεχνῶς γε: join καὶ μὴν . . γε, or, in other words, γε belongs to the sentence. Lit. 'indeed, and it appears wretched stuff'—'well, I can only say, it appears . . . In παμπόνηρα there may be either a moral or an aesthetic sense, or both.

107. δειπνεῖν με δίδασκε: i.e. that is your forte. Cf. 62 n.

108-112. ὥνπερ ἔνεκα . . ἵνα μοι . . τούτους. If we punctuate, as is commonly done, with comma at Κέρβερον, the construction is 'but the matters for which I came, (viz.) in order that you might tell me your friends . . tell me them,' where 'them' should grammatically be ταῦτα, looking back to the rather distant ὥνπερ ἔνεκα, but is diverted to τούτους by the intervening ξένους. But it is more idiomatic to put a period at Κέρβερον and render 'but the reason why I came (was this, viz.) in order that . .'. Cf. Plat. Rep. 330 n οὐ τοι ἔνεκα ἡρόμην, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι μοι ἔδοξας οὐ σφόδρα ἀγαπᾶν τὰ χρήματα ('why I asked was this, because . .'). Cf. Phaedr. 248 n, Luch. 184 n etc.

109. κατὰ σὴν μίμησιν: even comedy does not require τὴν σὴν, since the meaning is 'in an imitation of you.'

110. εἰ δεοίμην: primary tenses would have given ἔρχομαι ἵνα φράσῃς, εἰάν δύνωμαι.

ἐχρῶ = ἐχράου. It does not appear why the natural accent of ἄσς has been so frequently altered to ἔχρω.

ἐπὶ τὸν Κέρβερον. The twelfth labour of Herakles was 'to fetch' Cerberus.

112. λιμένας, ἀρτοπώλια κ.τ.λ. The words are spoken with calculating pauses.

113. ἀναπαύλας = ἀναπαιστήρια, 'resting-places by the road'; cf. Plat. Legg. 625 n ἀνάπαιλαι κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν, ὡς εἰκόσι, πνίγοις δυντοὶ τὰ νῦν ἐν τοῖς ὑψηλοῖς δένδροισιν εἰσι σκιεραὶ. For travel in ancient Greece see Becker's Charikles [Becker-Göll], first scene and Excursus.

ἐκτροπὰς: places where one could get off the road, e.g. to 'outspan' for a while. Not the same as the Latin deversoria, which were inns (καταγώγια, καταλύσεις); cf. [Eur.] Ihes. 880 νεκροῖς θάπτειν κελεῖν λεωφόροις κατ' ἐκτροπὰς (bends or recesses beside the highway).

114. διαίτας: apartments, lodgings, or 'flats.' Cf. diata when borrowed into Latin: Plut. Mor. 667 c Αἰδηψοί (α κρη χωρίον κατεσκευασμένον οἰκήσεσι καὶ διαίταις Ath. 270 c).

πανδοκευτρίας: humorously instead of πανδοκεῖα. Inns were frequently kept by women (cf. 549) of unrefined class.

115. κόρος: still a great plague in the common Greek inns, so that travellers often sleep in a sort of bag. The ancients carried their own στρώματα.

117. φράζε τῶν ὁδῶν ὅπως κ.τ.λ. The gen. of that concerning which one speaks is illustrated by Soph. Tr. 1122 τῆς μητρὸς ἦκω τῆς ἐμῆς φράσεων ἐν οἷς | νῦν ἐστίν, Ph. 440 ἀναξίου μὲν φωτὸς ἐξερήσομαι | . . . τί νῦν κερεῖ, Plat. Rep. 439 β τοῦ τοξότου οὐ καλῶς ἔχει λέγειν ὅτι κ.τ.λ. It will, however, be perceived that in these instances, as in the present case, the gen. does not stand alone with the verb, but is followed by a clause which defines that matter, appertaining to the thing or person in question, which is to be told or asked. In the simple τοῦ κασιγνήτου τί φῆς; (Soph. El. 317) the order might be τί τοῦ κασιγνήτου φῆς; 'what matter of (=appertaining to) thy brother!' This is the same partitive construct. as in τοῦτό σου θαυμάζω. We may next substitute for the single words τί or τοῦτο a whole phrase, as in the text and the illustrative passages. For φράζε τῶν ὁδῶν τῇ ταχίστην or ὁποῖα τάχιστα ἀφικόμεθα we get φ. τῶν ὁδῶν ὅπως κ.τ.λ. ('how' . . . virtually = 'that way by which' . . .).

120. τίνα; For the repetition of reflection cf. 460, 1399.

121. μία μὲν γάρ κ.τ.λ. There are three chief roads to death, called in modern times 'dagger, cord, and bowl.' Among the Greeks these were ξίφος, βρόχος, κώνειον (Zenob. 6. 11), although in schol. to Pind. O. 1. 97 the third is varied, viz. ξίφος, ἀγχόνη, κρημνός. To these (alternative) combinations refers the proverbial expression τὰ τρία τῶν εἰς θάνατον. See Meineke Com. Frug. ii. pp. 867, 1165. Herakles here enumerates βρόχος, κώνειον, κρημνός.

ἀπὸ κάλῳ καὶ θρανίου, 'by way of Rope-and-Stool.' The humour cannot be translated. The expression contains (1) probably a παρὰ προσδοκίαν and possibly a pun, the words κάλῳ καὶ θρανίου coming instead of some locality from which one might start, and of which the name was not unlike part at least of κάλῳ καὶ θρανίου (cf. ἡ διὰ θύρας 124); (2) certainly a play upon the sense (a) ἀπὸ κάλῳ (πλεῖν, ἔλκεσθαι) as used of being 'towed,' and ἀπὸ θρανίου (πλεῖν) = 'by means of upper-bench rowing' (i.e. making a voyage by means of tow-rope and upper rower's bench), and another sense (b) of mounting a stool, fastening the noose, and then kicking the stool away (see Theoc. 33. 49 sq.).

The θρανῖται were the highest or inmost tier of rowers in a trireme and were in the best places. Herakles is describing a fairly pleasant way of travelling. It is probable that in some circumstances, while a vessel was towed, the towing was assisted by rowing on the one tier only. This would be not simply πλεῖν ἀπὸ κάλῳ but π. ἀπὸ κάλῳ καὶ θραπίου.

For ἀπὸ of the resources and working material cf. ἀπὸ ληκυθίου 1209 n. This use is extended till it becomes purely modal, e.g. ἀπὸ σπουδῆς or ἀπὸ πόλου ἂν τάχοις ἀποφύγοι (Xen. An. 2. 5. 7).

122. κρεμάσαντι σαυτόν: a concluding surprise.

παῦε. As an exclamation 'Stop!' it is Attic to say either παῦε or παῦσαι (but neither παῖον nor παῖσον). Especially cf. Ar. 889 παῦ' ἐς κόρακας, παῦσαι καλῶν. This use of the active is permitted (though it is not frequent) even with a genitive (cf. 580) or a participle (Pac. 326 παῦε παῦ' ὀρχοίμενος). The intrans. use of the trans. παῦε in this exclamation began with the sense 'stop (it) or 'things'.

πνιγρὰν. He had asked for a road not θερμὴν ἄγαν (119). This one is positively 'stifling.'

123. ξύντομος τετριμμένη: (1) as applied to a road = 'a short cut, a well-beaten track'; (2) as applied to hemlock = 'shredded and pounded.' In Plat. Phaed. 116 n (of the hemlock of Socrates) ἐνεγλάτῳ τις τὸ φάρμακον, εἰ τέτρηπται, εἰ δὲ μή, τριψάτῳ ὁ ἄνθρωπος, 117 λ τὸ φάρμακον ἐν κύλικι φέροντα τετριμμένον. For ξύντομος cf. the use of τέμνειν, ἐντέμνειν φάρμακα.

124. ἡ διὰ θυέας: in which the hemlock is pounded; cf. Pac. 230. Doubtless there is a play upon some local name, e.g. Θρία (there was a Thriasian gate of Athens): 'the way through — Mortar.'

125-126. ψυχρὰν γε . . . sc. λέγεις. The first effect of hemlock is to chill and deaden the extremities; cf. Plin. H.N. 25. 13. 95 semini et foliis (cicutae) refrigeratoria vis. Quos necesse incipiunt alere ab extremitatibus corporis. The numbness ultimately reaches the heart. The best comment on this passage is Plato's account of the effect on Socrates (Phaed. 117 κ) σφόδρα πείσας αὐτοῦ τὸν πόδα ἤρετο εἰ αἰσθάνοιτο, ὃ δ' οὐκ ἔφη. καὶ μετὰ τοῦτ' αἰθεὶς τὰς κνήμας. καὶ ἐπαριῶν οὕτως ἡμῖν ἐπεδείκνυτο ὅτι ψύχαιτό τε καὶ πηγνύτο.

128. ὥς ὄντος γε μὴ βαδιστικοῦ, 'since I am not much of a walker'; lit. 'on the assumption that . . .' In such ὥς-clauses μὴ is regularly used in virtue of the imperative (here φράσον understood); cf. Soph. Ant. 1063 ὥς μὴ 'μπολήσων ἴσθι τὴν ἐμὴν φέρεα, and with gen. absol. Thuc. 7. 15 ὥς τῶν στρατιωτῶν μὴ μεμπτῶν γεγενημένων, οὕτω τὴν γνώμην ἔχετε, Plat. Rep. 327 c ὥς τοίνυν μὴ ἀκοισμέρων, οὕτω διανοισθε (Kühner-Gerth ii. p. 200).

129. καθήκον. The temple of Herakles Alexikakos was on the heights of Melite and the Cerameicus lay below (καθ-) to the north. Cerameicus lay both inside and outside the Διπύλον gate, the part called ὁ ἐντὸς τεῖχος running from the gate to the Agora, while ὁ ἔξω lay between the gate and the Academy. According to Pausanias (1. 30. 2) torch-races (λαμπαδηδρομία, λαμπάς, less often λαμπαδηφορία) began at the altar of Prometheus (as πυρφόρος) in the Academy and continued to the city, probably inwards as far as the Prytaneum (see infra 1093 sq. n.). There were also torch-races in honour of Hephaestus and Athena (at the Panathenaea), but we have no definite information as to details.

ἐς Κεραμεικόν. The article is commonly (but by no means always) omitted after a preposition with the name of a recognised part of the city, e.g. ἀγορά, πόλις (when = ἀκρόπολις), πρυτανεῖον.

130. τὸν πύργον. Some have fancied this to be the tower of the solitary Timon Misanthropus (Paus. 1. 30. 4), a character referred to (without mention of a tower) in Lys. 809, Ac. 1549, and by other comedians, Plutarch and Lucian. Shake-speare's Timon of Athens gives a very free treatment to the theme. But we may be tolerably certain that Aristophanes would have brought in the name (τὸν πύργον τὸν Τιμωνος). The most natural explanation is that the allusion is simply to some particularly high πύργος, commonly known as ὁ ὑψηλὸς πύργος, among those on the walls of Athens, used as a look-out.

131. ἀφιμένην τὴν λαμπάδα, 'see the torch-(race) being started.' So λαμπάδα τρέχειν, νικᾶν; cf. Plat. Rep. 328 A λαμπάς ἔσται πρὸς ἐσπέραν τῇ θεῷ. In the torch-race of the Cerameicus the simpler form seems to have been used (Paus. 1. 30. 2), viz. with single competitors instead of relays or 'sides.'

132-133. ἐπειδὴν φῶσιν . . εἶναι, 'when they say "let go," do you be good enough to let yourself go.' The infin. does not depend on φῶσιν (for κελεύωσιν), but quotes the spectators' own word, i.e. an infinitive-imperative like the εἶναι σὺ following. Cf. Vesp. 386, Nub. 850, Thuc. 5. 9 σὺ δέ, Κλεαρίδα, αἰφνιδίως τὰς πύλας ἀνοίξας ἐπειθεῖν καὶ ἐπειγέσθαι, Xen. Oec. 3. 12 πάντως, ὦ Κριτόβοιλε, ἀπαληθεύσαι πρὸς ἡμᾶς. The force of such infin. is 'be kind enough to . . .' εἶναι for ἀφείναι belongs to the older language, surviving in a phrase of the games.

134. ἀπολλίσαι' ἄν . . δύο: playing on two senses: (1) 'I should waste two brain-rissoles,' (2) 'I should dash out the two lobes of my brain.' Α θρίον is soft or minced meat' fish, marrow, eggs, etc., seasoned, and wrapped and cooked in fig-leaves. Eq. 951 δημοῦ βοείου θρίον, Ach. 1101 θρίον τὰρίχου. They were delicacies, and Dionysus would not care to waste a couple of them. The two halves of the brain in their membranes suggest such θρία.

137. μεγάλην . . πάνυ. After these words there is a slight pause, and then ἄβυσσον intensifies the previous description: 'a lake—a very big one—bottomless.' Exactly similar are the position and intonation of δειρότατα in v. 144. Herakles is trying to frighten Dionysus. The boat is only a miserable little one (πλοιαρίω), 'only this size' (τυννουτῶ, accompanied by a gesture). Charon's boat is a crazy thing in Verg. Aen. 6. 413. The lake is, of course, Acheron; cf. Luc. Lucif. 3 ἡ Ἀχερουσία λίανη πρόκειται πρώτη δεχομένη τοῖς ἀπαιτῶντας, ἢ οἶκ' ἐνὶ διαπλευσαι ἢ παρελθεῖν ἀνευ τοῦ πορθμέως· βαθύα γὰρ περᾶσαι τοῖς ποσὶ καὶ διανήξασθαι πολλή, Verg. Aen. 6. 295 etc. For the probable references to Athenian topography see Introd. p. xxxiii.

139 140. ἀνὴρ γέρων ναύτης διάξει: rather render 'an old man will carry you across as waterman' than join ἀνὴρ γέρων ναύτης. For Charon's age cf. Verg. Aen. 6. 304 iam senior, sed cruda deo ciridisque senectus.

δύ' ὀβολῶ: (1) it might seem natural to explain that the sum is for Di. and Na. (since Herakles can hardly anticipate the refusal of Charon to carry the latter). It is true that he says σε . . διάξει and not σφῶ, but Dionysus might 'include' his slave. Yet in v. 270 Dionysus pays τῷβολῶ for himself alone. (2) We may suppose that the usual fee of one obol is here raised to two simply to introduce a humorous reference. So Murray explains 'Charon traditionally took one obol . . But Theseus, the fountain-head of the Athenian constitution, has introduced the two-obol system in Hades.' (3) The two fares to and fro may be combined (Merry, who quotes Apuleius Met. 6. 18 in ipse ore duas ferre stipes of Psyche's fare). This is perhaps rather too much to extract from the words, and it is not altogether likely that Dionysus would pay for his return in advance and say nothing about it (270). (4) Perhaps a διώβολον (or δύ' ὀβολῶ) was sometimes treated as the proper fee for Charon. (So the schol. here, but he is probably only led to say this by our passage itself.)

It is certain that the δανάκη or κατιτήμον was commonly regarded as a single obol; cf. Luc. Lucif. 10 ὀβολόν . . μισθόν τῷ πορθμῇ τῆς ναυτιλίας. Such an obol has been found in the mouths of Greek skeletons. Juv. (iii. 267) has tridentem. On the whole, therefore, the explanation (2) given above is most probable.

141. ὡς μέγα δύνασθον κ.τ.λ., 'How mighty everywhere are those two obols!' like the useful 'threepenny-bit'). This is said with special allusion to recent legislation introduced (Arist. Const. Ath. 28. 3) by Κλεοφῶν ὁ Λυκοποιός, ὅς καὶ τὴν διωβελίαν ἐπέδρασε πρῶτος. The διωβελία is the fund (τὸ θεωμαλόν) from which were dispensed on each day of the Dionysiac festival two obols to each citizen who claimed them. The innovation is ascribed to Pericles on much later and weaker authority (Plutarch and Ulpian). 'The Diobelia appears in the accounts for the first time in 410 B.C.' (Gilbert, Greek Const. Ant. Eng. tr. p. 313). The audience would readily take the point, especially those who sat ἐν τοῖν δροῖν ὀβολοῖν (D-m. de Cor. § 28).

Besides the theoric two obols, that sum played its part in other connexions. For example it was allowed as the σιτηρίσιον (ration-allowance) for a hoplite (Dem. Phil. 1. 4. 28); it was sometimes pay for a seaman (Vesp. 1188); and it was a common fee for seers and dream-readers (Vesp. 52). But there is no proof that the μισθὸς δικαστικός was ever two obols, and the μισθὸς ἐκκλησιαστικός (which did take the form of a διώβολον for a time) was not yet instituted. We may conclude that two obols represented the daily 'living wage' of an Athenian about the end of the fifth century.

142. κάκεισε: cf. 77 (ἐλεῖθεν), 82.

Θησεύς. The two obols are a specially Attic institution, and in Hyles they are due to no less a person than the time-honoured Attic hero. It is as if we accredited King Alfred with the uses of the omnipresent threepenny-piece. Theseus had helped Peirithous in his attempt to carry off Persephone from Hades, and had been kept in durance there till delivered by Herakles. Herakles can therefore speak personally of what Theseus had done.

ἤγαγεν: sc. αὐτό. Such an omission is not of the most frequent: cf. Hom. Il. 6. 121 τίς δὲ σὺ ἔσσι, φέριστε, καταθνητῶν ἀνθρώπων: | οὐ μὲν γάρ ποτ' ὄπωπα (sc. σε). (Kühner-Gerth § 597. 2 b.)

144. δυνάτατα: see 137 n.

ἐκπληττει, 'try to frighten.' Goodwin, M. and T. § 25, Gildersleeve, Gk. Synt. § 192.

145. βόρβορον: burying in mud specially awaited the uninitiated; cf. Plat. Phaed. 69 c ὅς ἂν ἀμήνητος καὶ ἀτέλεστος eis "Αιδου ἀφίκηται ἐν βορβόρῳ κείσεται. But the wicked in general had a similar fate: Eccl. 363 οὗτοι δὲ ἀνοστοὺς καὶ ἀδίκους εἰς πηλὸν τινα κατορύττουσιν ἐν "Αιδου, Luc. Alex. 25 ἐρομένου γάρ τινος τί πράττει ἐν "Αιδου ὁ Ἐπίκουρος; Μολυβδίνας, ἔφη, ἔχων πέδας ἐν βορβόρῳ κάθηται. Vergil (G. 4. 478) speaks of limus niger in the locality here described. A similar notion occurs among the punishments in Dante's Inferno.

146. καὶ σκῶρ ἀείνων, 'and filth that ever flows': an obvious burlesque of something more dignified, e.g. ἰδὼρ ἀείνων.

148-151. εἴ ποιν . . ἐξεγράψατο. The sins which merit this punishment are those of the traitor, the μητραλοίας and πατραλοίας, the perjurer and—the admirer of Morsimus' poetry. All is delivered with great solemnity. We can have little doubt that there was a well-known formula connected with the less esoteric part of the mysteries, setting forth the chief classes of sinners whom the pure and initiated will see punished in Hades. From this source Aeschylus would draw (Eum. 269) his ὅψῃ δὲ καὶ τις ἄλλος ἤλπετο βροτῶν | ἢ θεῶν ἢ ξένων | τιν' ἀσεβῶν ἢ τοκέας φίλους, and Vergil his hic quibus invisi fratres, dum vita manebat, | pulsataeque parens, aut fraus innixa clienti, etc. (Aen. 6. 608). The humorous climax comes the more effectively to the audience from their familiarity with this section of the 'catechism.'

151. ἡ Μορσίμου τις κ.τ.λ. The repetition of τις has led to the suggestion ἡ εἰ by Meineke. But with the distance since the introduction of the sentence Greek did not feel the awkwardness. Cf. Theogn. 335-345 εἰ τις ἐπιβουλεύει τι τῷ δήμῳ κακὸν . . | . . ἡ πικρυκεῖται | Εὐρυπύδῃ . . | ἡ πεμπομένη τις ἀγγελίας ψευδεῖς φέρει. | ἡ μοιχὸς εἴ τις ἐξαπατᾷ ψευδῇ λέγων | . . | ἡ δῶρά τις δίδωσι γραῦς κ.τ.λ., Eur. Hec. 1178 εἰ τις γυναῖκας τῶν πρὶν εἰρηκεν κακῶς, | ἡ νῦν λέγων τίς ἐστιν.

Μορσίμου: grand-nephew of Aeschylus and a bad poet of tragedy. Various scholiasts call him πονηρός, ἀμετρος, ὑπόψυχρος; cf. the terrible imprecation Eg. 400 εἰ σέ μὴ μισῶ. . . διδασκόμεν προσάδειν Μορσίμου τραγῳδίαν. Insc. 801. He is said, however, to have been a 'good eye-doctor' (schol.).

ἐξεγράψατο, '(ever) got copied out' (or 'copied out for himself'). An author γράφει, his amanuensis ἐκγράφει, but a person who makes or gets made a copy for his own use ἐκγράφεται. So when one writes down for his own use what another says; cf. Ar. 981 ὁ χρησμός . . | δὲ ἐγὼ παρὰ τὰ πολλῶν ἐξεγραψάμην, Vesp. 538 καὶ μὴν δὲ ἂν λέξῃ γ' ἀπλῶς μνημόσιννα γράψω γῶ, Soph. Phil. 1325 καὶ ταῦτ' ἐπίστω καὶ γράφου φρενῶν ἔσω.

152. ἐχρῆν γὰρ πρὸς τοῦτοις κεῖ . . .: brachylogic for ἐχρῆν . . . εἰπεῖν κεῖ. In usual prose perhaps we should have had ἐχρῆν προσκεῖσθαι τὸ κεῖ . . . For the conversational omission of an infin. cf. 1279.

153. τὴν πυρρίχην . . τὴν Κινησίου: the πυρρίχη was a quick dance in armour derived from the ancient war-dance, and recalling the crouching, springing, bending aside, etc., of actual fight (Plat. Legg. 815 A, Ath. 630 D). Here the name is applied to the song and music which the dance accompanies.

Cinesias was a dithyrambic poet of whirling words and of ill repute, not only with Aristoph. (Av. 1372 sqq.) but also with Plato the philosopher (Gorg. 501 E), Plato and Strattis the comedians, and Lysias the orator (Ath. 551 D). He was remarkably thin (Ath. l.c.), and that peculiarity is referred to inf. 1437. The art. τὴν must allude to a notorious composition invented (perhaps recently) by Cinesias.

154-157. The after-life of the initiated is described in terms which (like those concerning the unblest, 148-151) belong to the current exoteric doctrines of the μύσται. That there was such a recognised account is clear from the similarity of this passage to one in Pindar (Thren. fr. 1): Unto them shineth the might of the sun, and in meadows of deep-hued roses is their demeane, shaded with incense-trees and heavy with golden fruits. And in horses and in games some take their joy, and some in harps, and a perfume is shed throughout that place delectable. Cf. Verg. Aen. 6. 638.

It should be noted that Aristoph. ventures no travesty with this. Nevertheless it appears very probable that in the words ὥς περ ἐνθάδε, in θάσσουσ' εὐδαίμονας ἀνδρῶν γυναικῶν, and especially in κρότον χειρῶν πολύν, he is making allusion to the festive audience in the theatre. When the chorus comes in there will be κρότος πολὺς in the shape of clapping. This underlying meaning would be assisted by the actor's gestures, but is not inartistically pressed.

154. ἐντεῦθεν, 'next.'

αὐλῶν: in Pindar the φόρμιγξ is played among the blest. But the αὐλός was used at the mysteries, and the choric lyrics (which the μύσται are to sing, 312 sqq.) are accompanied by the flute.

περίεσθαι = 'will float around you'; cf. Soph. Ant. 1200 τῷ δ' ἀθλίας δσημα περιβαλεῖ βοῆς.

155. ὥς κάλλιστον ὥς περ ἐνθάδε: the ἐνθαδὶ of Meineke is wrong. The meaning is 'in this world,' not 'on this spot.'

The light of the underworld is for the most part only darkness visible, but in the abodes of the blest there is bright day, λάμπει μένος αἰλίου (Pind. l.c.), or, as Vergil expresses it (Aen. 6. 640), largior hic campis aether et lumine vestit | purpureo, soleaque summum sua sidera norunt. So inf. 454 μόνοις γὰρ ἡμῶν ἥλιος | καὶ φέγγος ἱλαρὸν ἔστιν.

156. μυρρινῶνας: Pindar has φοινικορόδοις τ' ἐνὶ λειμώνεσσι προάστιον αἰτῶν καὶ λιβάνῳ σκιαρὸν καὶ χρυσέοις καρποῖς βεβρηθός, and Vergil (l.c.) speaks of locus lactos et amoenus viridis | fortunatorum nemorum.

157. ἀνδρῶν γυναικῶν: i.e. ἀνδρῶν καὶ γυναικῶν. Such asyndeton is not very frequent in comedy; yet cf. Ach. 625 πωλεῖν ἀγοράζειν, inf. 861 δάκνειν δάκνεσθαι. In Vesp. 1081 σὺν δόρει σὺν ἀσπίδι is an echo of tragedy. For the latter cf. Soph. Ant. 1079 ἀνδρῶν γυναικῶν σοῖς δόμοις κωκίματα, Aesch. Eum. 1028 παίδων γυναικῶν.

159. νῆ τὸν Δία . . μυστήρια, '(talking of mysteries) I, at any rate, am playing the donkey's part at them.' γοῦν = 'true, so far.' There was a sarcastic proverb ὄνος ἀγεί μυστήρια, derived from the fact that the sacred utensils were carried from Athens to Eleusis by donkeys, whose only part in the celebration was the hard work. There is a play on the senses of ἀγεῖν: (1) 'keep,' 'celebrate,' as in ἀγεῖν ἑορτήν, (2) 'bring,' 'carry' (like νῆες φόρτον ἀγοῖσι, an old use, generally replaced by φέρειν, but retained in an old saw). The modern coster's donkey similarly has his 'day at Epsom.' For the form of expression ὄνος ἀγῶ κ.τ.λ. cf. Lys. 695 ἀετὸν τίκτοντα κἀνθαρόν (σε) μαυρίσομαι, Cephissol. (Com. Frag. ii. 883) ἐγὼ δὲ τοῖς λόγοις ὄνος ὄμαι, Verg. Eccl. 9. 36 (videtur) argutos inter strepere anser olores, Cic. de Or. 2. 57. 233 docebo vos oratorem.

160. ταῦτα, 'this baggage.'

τὸν πλείων χρόνον: not a rare use of the article with χρόνος; cf. Thuc. 4. 117, 5. 15, Aesch. Ag. 626 ἐς τὸν πολὺν . . καρποῖσθαι χρόνον. The time which is yet to run on is set against e.g. τὸν μέχρι νῦν χρόνον.

[These two lines are an aside, and do not interrupt Herakles.]

161. ἴδη: 2nd pers. of δέομαι (cf. 110) rather than 3rd from δεῖ.

164. καὶ χαῖρε, 'and so, good-bye.' χαῖρε can be used both at meeting and parting (salve and vale) = 'good-day,' while ὑγιαίνε commonly = vale, and was generally restricted to that sense.

166. πρὶν καὶ καταθέσθαι; 'before I have so much as got it down?' Xanthias is annoyed at the small respite he has had, and speaks hyperbolically.

μέντοι: of affirmation (μέντοι), 'certainly,' 'I'm telling you' (cf. 171); a frequent use in both positive and negative sentences.

167. μή δῆθ': sc. τοῦτο εἶπης (κελεύσης).

168. τῶν ἐκφερομένων: ἐκφορά is the common term for a funeral.

ἐπὶ τοῦτ' ἔρχεται, 'is on that errand,' or 'has that (express) object'; sc. to visit Hades (not τὸ ἐκφέρεισθαι). The phrase ἐπὶ τοῦτο (or τόδε) ἔρχεσθαι should be recognised as corresponding to the Latin id (hoc) agere. For the rather vague reference of τοῦτο cf. 358 βωμολόχοις ἔπεσιν χαίρει μή 'ν καιρῷ τοῦτο ποιόσιν (id agentibus), and for the particular expression Eur. Bacch. 967 Δι. ἐπίσημον ὄντα πᾶσιν. II. ἐπὶ τόδ' ἔρχομαι ('that is my object'), Xen. An. 2. 5. 22 ἀλλὰ τί δῆ, ὑμᾶς ἐξὸν ἀπολέσαι, οἷκ ἐπὶ τοῦτ' ἤλθομεν; ('why did we not make it our business?')

169. τότε μ' ἄγειν, 'then take me' (msa.) and τότ' ἔμ' ἄγειν (Bergk) are equally possible, but there is no superiority in the latter.

ἄγειν: either as imperat. (cf. εἶναι 133), or we may supply κελείω from ἰκετεύω (167) despite the intervening μίσθωσαι.

170. [The bearers and corpse are a παραχορήγημα or παρασκήριον (the proper term is disputed; see Dict. Ant.).]

τουτονί, 'a corpse yonder.' [The reading of the best msa. is better than Elmsley's τιν' ἐκφέρουσι. The sense is 'for certain persons are carrying a corpse yonder' = 'for yonder are certain persons bearing a corpse.']

172. βούλει: not = ἐθέλεις, but 'do you want . . ?'

σκενάρια, 'a bit of baggage,' depreciating the amount.

173. τελείς: either present ('are you paying?'), or, less vivaciously, future (cf. 176).

174. ὑπάγεθ' ὑμεῖς τῆς ὁδοῦ. He turns away from Di. to his bearers; hence ὑμεῖς, 'get on, you men!' This sense of ὑπάγω is frequent. The gen. is strictly partitive ('some of the way'); cf. Xen. An. 1. 3. 1 οἷκ ἔφασαν ἵναι τοῦ πρόσω, Herod. 3. 105 προλαμβάνειν τῆς ὁδοῦ, Soph. Aj. 731 δραμοῦσα τοῦ προσωτάτω. [Not 'get out of our way,' which makes a doubtful construction and takes from the contemptuous indifference of the corpse.]

175. ὦ δαιμόνι: expostulatory, as often in Plato.

ἐάν ξυμβῶ, 'in case I can come to terms'; cf. 339, 1517, Thuc. 2. 5 λόγων πρῶτον γενομένων, ἣν τι ξυμβαίνωμεν.

177. ἐννέ' ὀβολούς: a drachma and a half, as a compromise.

ἀναβιόην, 'strike me alive (if I will)!' Being dead he cannot say the usual ἀποθάνοιμι or ἀπολοίμην.

180. ὥπ, παραβαλοῦ: the voice of Charon is heard, and the boat comes into sight immediately afterwards. We may suppose that some sort of boat enters the orchestra on rollers, and that at v. 270 it is withdrawn in the same fashion. The change of scene, if not wholly imagined, would be produced by a change of the painted hangings which hung upon the temporary wooden structure (προσκήνιον) serving as background. Possibly the περίακτοι may already have been used as the easiest way of suggesting new surroundings. It should be noted that the change would occur at v. 184. Here there is not sufficient pause even to prevent the line from being metrically completed by the new speaker.

ὥπ. In v. 208 ὥπ, δπ is used in setting the time for rowing. ὥπ cannot therefore be limited (with schol. on Ar. 1395) to the stopping of the rowing (i.e. = 'easy!' or 'avast!'). At v. 208 (q.v.) a schol. calls it ἐλαττικόν ἐπιφθεγμα. There is nothing in the passages containing ὥπ to show that it was more than neutral, i.e. a κέλευμα calling attention, but depending for its application on the circumstances or attendant words.

παραβαλοῦ: lit. 'bring your boat alongside (i.e. to shore).' The middle may be used without an object (cf. 269) or with one (Eq. 762 τὴν ἀκατον παραβάλλου). In the former case we may either supply τὸ πλοῖον or regard the verb as intrans. (cf. the act. παραβάλλειν). The use of the middle is due to the reflexive sense implied, viz. 'bring yourself (in your boat) alongside.' So ἐντίθεσθαι, ἐξαιρεῖσθαι regularly in regard to goods in one's own ship. Charon is apostrophising himself; there is nothing unnatural in a boatman, as he reaches shore, singing out 'Easy! lay her to!' [The notion that he has another person assisting on board is contrary to the legends of Charon, is dramatically inconvenient, and leaves no reason for the subsequent treatment of Dionysus.]

181 κί. λίμνη νῆ Δία | αὕτη 'στὶν ἦν κ.τ.λ., 'why, this is a lake, one which' . . (not 'the lake'). αὕτη by attraction for τοῦτο, according to the common, but not invariable, practice.

(Kühner-Gerth i. pp. 74 κη.) Cf. Nub. 200 ΣΤ. τί γὰρ τοῦδ' ἐστίν; εἰπέ μοι. ΜΑ. ἀστρονομία μὲν αὐτῆς.

182. ἣν ἐφραζε, 'which he was telling us about' (Hibernici, 'was after telling us of'). Cf. 275 οὗς ἐλεγεν, Plat. Phaedr. 230 Α αὐτὸς δὲ ἦν τὸ δένδρον, ἐφ' ὅπερ ἤγες ἡμᾶς; so Verg. Aen. 6. 160 multa inter se vario sermone serchant, | quem socium exanimem rates . . . | dicunt.

184. χαῖρ' ὦ Χάρων: for the three προσφθέγματα see 37 n. The schol., on the authority of the ancient grammarian Demetrius, says that the line is taken from a satyric play of Achaëus. If so, Aristoph. is deriding it, after the manner in which Thomson's 'O Sophonisba, Sophonisba, O!' was ridiculed.

185 187. τίς εἰς ἀναπαύλας κ.τ.λ. These lines are evidently a parody of the cries heard in the Attic harbours when a boat or ship was about to depart and was ready to take passengers (e.g. for Salamis, Aegina, Epidaurus, and farther). They correspond to the old London calls of the omnibus-conductors, e.g. 'Who's for the Bank?' 'Who's for Blackfriars' Bridge?' First comes the general destination of the boat to the places 'where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest'; then some of these are enumerated. In all probability there are puns upon the names of places familiar to the audience. It is of course rather hopeless to guess what these were, since it is part of the humour of Aristoph. to jumble incongruously the names of foreign parts, Attic demes, etc. Moreover a Greek pun is very elastic. Murray ingeniously suspects that in Ἀθήης πεδίων, ὄρου πόδας, Ταίναρον we have a reference to 'a proposal, by some member of the war-party, to take the offensive against Sparta by sailing round the Laconian coast—as Tolmides had done—and landing at Λεύκης πεδίων, ὄρου Ἰθάκης, Ταίναρον.' Without being too definite it appears highly probable that the (otherwise strange) addition of Ταίναρον is justified by some contemporary circumstances. That word then becomes a revealing παρὰ προσδοκίαν, the other places being imaginable localities in Hades itself. We may render 'Who's for Peace-and-Quiet, Oblivion Plain—or Cuckoo's Nest; for Deadman's Rest—or the Deuce—or—Taenarum!'

Perhaps as an alternative suggestion to that of Murray, it may be guessed that, in the present acute stage of Athenian troubles (κακὰ καὶ πρῶγματα, and see Introd. p. xxiii), there were those who, being (like Dionysus) saint-hearted, had mooted some project of leaving Athens for a new home (as many of the Phocæans left Phocæa for Corsica Hdt. 1. 165, and as some Athenians proposed at the time of the Persian invasion Hdt. 8. 61). Perhaps various places, mostly distant, were suggested and Aristoph. satirises the notion as visionary and impossible; to him such places are but Λήθης πεδίων and ὄνου πόκας—in fact to go to them is to go ἐς κόρακας. See the following notes.

186. Λήθης πεδίων: the first region across the lake in the topography of Lucian (Lucil. 5 πραιωθέντας δὲ τὴν λίμνην ἐς τὸ εἰσω λειμῶν ὑποδέχεται μέγας, τῷ ἀσφοδελῷ κατάφυτος, καὶ ποτὸν μνήης πολέμιον. Λήθης γοῖν διὰ τοῦτο ὠνόμασται). Plato (Ker. 621 A) also calls it πεδίων; Vergil (Aen. 6. 709) has campina, his topography, however, being different. [There is no river Lethe in classical Greek.]

ὄνου πόκας: ὄνου πόκες (or πόκαι, a form πόκαι being very doubtful) is among Greek expressions for the futile or impossible, κέρπειν ὄνον being as much a waste of time as πλίνθον πλύνειν, ἀσκὸν τίλλειν (Phot. 338. 8). It is to be observed that one use of Λήθης πεδίων also is as a proverb ἐπὶ τῶν ἀδυνάτων, and the line may therefore be understood as ἐς τὸ Λήθης πεδίων—ἦ εἰς ὄνου πόκας; i.e. 'Who is for Lethe Plain?' and then, in a sort of aftertone, 'or (for the matter of that, any other impossible region, say) Donkey Fleece' (which according to Zenobius 3. 8 also belongs to τὰ ἀρήνιστα). Exactly in the same tone he adds—ἦ 'ς κόρακας after ἦ εἰς Κερβερίους. [Nothing is gained, and probably something would be lost, by reading Bergk's ὄνου πλοκάς.]

187. Κερβερίους: 'the deme of Cerberus,' but with an allusion to the Κερβερίαι, another name for the Κιμμέριαι of Homer, actually read by certain ancient critics (e.g. Crates) in Od. 11. 14. Sophocles seems to have had the word in this sense (fr. 957 N). To the contemporaries of Aristoph. the Cimmerii would suggest the eastern Crimea, and it is conceivable that would-be emigrants had thought of the Euxine.

ἦ 'ς κόρακας: partly prompted by the alliteration, but also emphasising the 'very mischief' of the Utopian scheme.

187. ἦ 'πὶ Ταίναρον. It is true that a cave at Taenarum was regarded as one of the entrances to Hades (cf. Verg. Georg. 4. 467 Taenarias etiam fauces, alta ostia Ditis, | . . ingressus Manesque adiit regemque tremendum). Through it Herakles had brought up Cerberus. But that point is surely irrelevant to Charon's boat, which is not proceeding thither. Establishment of Athenians at Taenarum may very well have been one of the proposed impossibilities (and 'the deuce') ridiculed by the poet.

188. ποῦ σχήσειν δοκεῖς; 'Where do you think of putting in?' Thucydides frequently used σχεῖν (with ἐς or less often the dat.) in this sense (appellere). Cf. προσσεχεῖν, κατασχεῖν. The better mss. give ποῦ, others ποῖ, which at first sight looks necessary. It is, however, common enough for a Greek verb implying previous motion to be joined with the adv. of rest, when the motion is supposed to be already completed. Thus Lys. 1230 πανταχοῦ προσβείσομεν, 'we shall (go and) act as ambassadors everywhere.' Thuc. 3. 71 τοῖς ἐκεῖ καταπεφειγότας = 'those who (had fled into and) were in exile there,' Soph. Trach. 40 δπου βέβηκεν οἶδεις οἶδε = 'where he (has gone to and) is.' So here: 'where will you (get to and there) find a destination?' Kühner-Gerth i. p. 515.

191. εἰ μὴ ναυμαχῆκε κ.τ.λ.: unless he fought at Arginusae (33). The perf. (rather than ἐναυμάχησε) = 'unless he is a naval hero.' τὴν περὶ κ.τ.λ., sc. μάχην or ναυμαχίαν. In such ellipses it is generally easy to supply the particular feminine verbal noun δόον, μάχην, ψῆφον, πληγὴν, etc.), e.g. Eq. 50 ἐδικάσας μίαν (sc. δικήν). The omission of a masc. is less common, e.g. Luc. Dial. Mor. 2 ὡς βαθὺν ἐκοιμήθη (sc. ἕπνον) and the proverb ὁ λαγὼς τὸν περὶ τῶν κρεῶν τρέχει (sc. δρόμον or ἀγῶνα). The latter explains our passage. When the hare runs for his life (to 'save his bacon') he runs περὶ τῶν κρεῶν. The phrase is an old colloquial and facetious application of an earlier literal meaning, 'to run for the meat-prize' (περὶ of the prize at stake). The meat at stake in the case of the animal is his own; hence περὶ τῶν κρεῶν = περὶ τῆς ψυχῆς. Thence proverbially of the human being. At Arginusae the Athenians were fighting for their very existence, and Aristoph. is not afraid to confess it. With the form of expression cf. Uesp. 376 τὸν περὶ ψυχῆς δρόμον δραμεῖν, Hdt. 8. 74 περὶ τοῦ παντός ἤδη δρόμον θέοντες, Eur. El. 1264, etc. [The reading of a certain Ixion, recorded by Photius, viz. περὶ τῶν νεκρῶν, is absurd. There was no fight 'for the (unrecovered) dead.' More untenable still is the notion that in κρεῶν the comedian is playing upon the sense νεκρῶν. This is not only open to the previous objection, but it outrages Athenian sentiment, which was very sensitive in this particular matter.]

192 = οὐ γὰρ (ἐναυμάχησα or ναυμαχεῖν ἐδυνήθην), ἀλλ' ἐτυχον κ.τ.λ. This is the usual analysis of the phrase. But οὐ γὰρ ἀλλά has passed beyond the stage of strict analysis. See 58 n. and cf. 498, 1180, Eq. 1205.

ὀφθαλμῶν. Diseases of the eyes were common in Greece, as well as in Egypt and the East (cf. fr. 181 Dind.), and such ailments afforded a ready excuse for cowards and malingerers. They could doubtless be produced artificially (like the thumbless condition of the modern conscript). For the malady itself among soldiers cf. Xen. Hell. 2. 1. 3. In Hdt. 7. 229 two of the Spartan 300 are disabled by ophthalmia, but one insists on being led by his helot into battle, while the other, Aristodemus, returned to Sparta, where he was disgraced and nicknamed ὁ τρῖσας. [It is more natural to suppose that Aristodemus was accused of an old malingering trick than that the trick was considered to date from him: nevertheless his case probably became proverbial throughout Greece.]

194. ποῦ δῆτ' ἀναμενῶ; There is something sufficiently humorous in this naive burlesque of the λίμνη μεγάλη πᾶν and the traditional necessity of crossing it. After all, you can run round it, if you like. In the theatre we are to imagine Dionysus working his passage across the orchestra in the roller-boat, while Xa. runs round and sits down. Note also the sarcasm in ἀναμενῶ: he will have to wait for them. The Attic comedians frankly convert their own (obvious) stage-devices into a joke. Cf. Pae. 174, where a character begs the stage-engineer to be careful, and fr. 231.

παρὰ τὸν Αὔαινον λίθον. The accus. is used after παρὰ, even with an apparent verb of rest, when the sense is 'near,' 'about' (iuxta) and a certain extension is given to the space occupied or moved in. Cf. Xen. An. 7. 1. 12 Ἐτεόριος εἰσθήσει παρὰ τὰς πύλας, Hdt. 4. 87 οὗτος κατελείφθη παρὰ τὸν νηόν. The special point of Αὔαινον is probably lost. It is obvious that there are contained (1) an execration in the imperat. αὔαινον ('be shrivelled!'), in answer to the sarcasm of Xanthias; (2) a reference to some stone in the theatre, beside the orchestra, to which Charon naively points ('go and stop over there'). Among the seats to the right of the priest of Dionysus in the front row, there was one of the 'stone-bearer' (Haigh, Att. Theat. p. 310). We know nothing of the stone in question, but we may venture the guess that it is here referred to. Nor is it out of the question that the stone-bearer on this occasion may actually have been named something like Αὔαινος. With this direct allusion must go the consideration that distinguishable stones, placed by nature or man, often existed as landmarks and rendezvous, e.g. Σειληνοῦ λίθος (Paus. 1. 23. 5). We may further suggest that the ἀνάπαυλαι are actually the resting-places for the chorus, to which the dancers retired beside the orchestra when they were not engaged in performance.

196. τῷ ξυνέτυχον ἐξών; 'What (unlucky thing) did I meet with when I was coming out (this morning)?' The ordinary Athenian was even more superstitious than the modern believer in signs and portents. Only superior minds and sceptics derided the δεισιδαιμονία described by Theophrastus (Char. 16, where, for instance, a weasel runs across the road). Of particular significance were these ἐνόδιοι σύμβολοι (Aesch. P. V. 503). Horace (Od. 3. 27) gives specimens. At a later date Lucian (Pseudol. 17) speaks of the terrors caused by what one sees εὐθὺς ἐξιών τῆς οἰκίας. The first sight is the most important of all: cf. Plut. 41 ὅτῳ ξεναντήσαιμι πρῶτον ἐξιών.

197. εἴ τις ἐπιπλεῖ, 'if any one is (to be) a passenger.' The change to ἐπιπλεῖ is a mistake. ἐπιπλεῖν is the proper word of those who sail on a ship 'in addition' to the crew (who πλέοισι). Thus it is used of the soldiers carried by the ships in Hdt. 7. 98. 184 and Thuc. 2. 66. In Demosthenes and elsewhere it is used of a supercargo. The natural Greek for a captain's phrase 'we had a passenger on board' would be ἡμῖν ἐπέπλει.

198-199. οὗτος, τί ποιεῖς; κ.τ.λ. Charon has looked away while delivering his call. He now turns and sees his passenger sitting down on an oar. Dionysus has chosen to interpret ἐπὶ κώπῃν 'to an oar' (cf. Hom. Od. 12. 171 οἱ δ' ἐπ' ἔρετμα | ἐξόμενοι) as 'on an oar,' and has acted accordingly. In the latter sense ἐπὶ with accus. follows the idea of motion: cf. Nub. 251 κάθιζε τοῖνυν ἐπὶ τὸν ἱερὸν σκίμφοδα, inf. 682. ἔω is not 'I am sitting,' but 'am taking a seat.' [κώπην without article is 'an oar,' but it is natural to suppose that Charon's κάθιζ' ἐπὶ κώπῃν was an old phrase ('sit to oar'), dispensing with art. after prep. (cf. ἐπὶ δόρυ, ἐπ' ἀσπίδα, ἐς χεῖρας, πρὸς γῆν). Dionysus pretends not to understand nautical terms.]

198. ὅ τι ποιεῖς; Where the person questioned repeats the question, he regularly (though not always; cf. Ar. 608, 1233, etc.) uses the indirect ὅστις, ὅποῖος, etc. in place of the direct. We must supply the thought thus: ΧΑ. τί ποιεῖς; ΔΙ. (ἐρωτᾷς) ὅ τι ποιεῖς;

τί δ' ἄλλο γ' ἦ . . . ὅτι (like Fr. mais) is used in questions with a touch of remonstrance; cf. Nub. 1495.

199. ἔω. The simple verb is rare in Attic, but, as there is no special excuse for it here, it must have been recognised; cf. Epicr. fr. 3 ἐπὶ τοῖς νεῶς ἱστοῖσι πεινώντες κακῶς.

οὕτως: see 188 n. ἐκλείνεις: for the tense cf. 182, but in κλείνεις it is almost the rule.

202. οὐ μὴ φλυαρήσας . . ἄλλ' ὀψῆς: cf. 462, 524, Eur. Bacch. 343 οὐ μὴ προσοίσεις χεῖρα, βακχεύσεις δ' ἰών, | μηδ'

ἐξομῶρξῃ μωρὰν τὴν σὴν ἐμοί. Goodwin, M. and T. § 298. The simplest explanation of the construction is that in full it would be οὐ (δέος ἐστὶ) μὴ φλ., ἀλλ' ἐλῆς = 'there is no fear that you will keep on playing the fool, but you will row.' There is no question, but an assertion. The full expression is found in e.g. Plat. Alc. 28 π οὐδὲν δειδόν μὴ ἐν ἐμοί στῇ, Xen. Mem. 2. 1. 25 οὐ φόβος μὴ σε ἀγάγω. [Words of fearing are followed by μὴ with fut. in the sense 'fear that one is going to . .,' and with subj. in the sense 'fear that one may . .'.] Hence there is no other distinction between οὐ μὴ ποιήσεις and οὐ μὴ ποιήσῃς. In other words, the former in effect = 'you shall not' and the latter 'you will not' or 'cannot,' the former being thus the more determined and emphatic. If now a positive assertion of what is to happen in the future is to be joined to the neg. οὐ μὴ ποιήσεις, it is connected by ἀλλὰ (sometimes δέ), but is independent of the οὐ μὴ. When another clause reverts to the neg. (as in Eur. I.c.) it is naturally connected with the οὐ μὴ clause by μηδέ, the intervening clause being parenthetical.]

φλυαρήσεις ἔχων, 'keep on playing the fool,' ἔχων (like φέρων, λαβών) being joined to verbs as an expletive, particularly to those of wasting time; cf. 512, Nub. 131 τί ταῦτ' ἔχων στραγγεῖσθαι; Ecc. 1151 τί δῆτα διατρίβεις ἔχων; Theoc. 14. 8 παῖσθεις, ὠγάθ', ἔχων.

203 205. κᾶτα . . εἴτ': the first εἴτα introduces the expostulatory question, the second = 'in such case' ('nevertheless').

204. ἀπειρος κ.τ.λ., 'unskilled, un-seasoned and un-Salamised' (Lowell). The three privatives in ἀ- represent a poetic habit which Aristoph. parodies; cf. Aesch. Cho. 53 ἀμαχὸν ἀδάματον ἀπόλεμον, Eur. Hec. 669 ἀπαις ἀνανδρὸς ἀπολὺς, Soph. Ant. 1071 ἀνοῖρον ἀκτέριστον ἀνόσιον. So in English, Milton P.L. 2. 185 unspit'd, unpitied, unrepriev'd and 5. 899 unshaken, unsolaced, unterrified. Nor is it unknown to oratory, e.g. Dem. Phil. 1. 36 ἀτακτα ἀδύρθητα ἀόριστα.

We need not press the possible differences in the meaning of the three words, but roughly they correspond respectively to a liability to clumsiness, sea-sickness, soreness. That the last is one sense at least of ἀσαλαμίνιος is made probable by Eq. 785 ἵνα μὴ τρίβῃς τὴν ἐν Σαλαμῖνι. At the same time there is a reference to (1) the battle of Salamis, of which the Athenians were never tired of hearing; (2) the Salaminia, or state mission-vessel, in which only good oarsmen could row; (3) the seamanship of the islanders of Salamis (Ecc. 39), numbers of whom would be in the theatre.

[Commentators generally consider that Di. is throughout the play meant for an embodiment of the easy-going and (as Aristoph. considered) not over-intelligent Athenian public, and that the present lines therefore glance at the decline of the Athenian navy.]

205. ἀκούσει γὰρ μᾶλλον κ.τ.λ. : i.e. you will work more easily to music (cf. marching to the band). There is nothing said about seeing the frogs, and it is an error to suppose that they actually appear. Their croaking and singing were performed from behind the scenes by the persons who are afterwards the chorus of μῖσται. They are, therefore, not a παραχορήγημα, since they imply no additional equipment. For the title Βατραχοί given to the play see Introduction p. xxvii.

206. ἐμβάλλει, 'lay on' (= 'get to work'). It is usual to supply τὰς χεῖρας τῇ κώπῃ, but τὰς χεῖρας should not be included. ἐμβάλλειν is intrans., as in Hom. Od. 10. 129, and the sense is that of Vergil's incumbite remis. The absolute use, as here, occurs in Xen. Hell. 5. 1. 13.

207. βατράχων κύκνων : cf. the combinations θῆρ λεών, δρυὶς ἀηδών, βοῖς ταύροι, ἀνὴρ ποιητής, in which one noun in apposition defines or limits another. So in comedy ἀνθρωπος δρυὶς (Ar. 169) = 'a man-bird,' κάμηλον ἀμνόν (ibid. 1559) = 'a camel-lamb.' Here 'frog-swans' are frogs which sing like swans, lit. swans which bear the shape of frogs.

κατακλίνει δὲ, 'well then, begin to set the time.' The κλευστής is the officer ('boatswain') whose κλείσμα (ὥσπ, δπ) conducts the rowing, while a τριηραῖος plays an inspiring accompaniment on the αὐλός. Cf. Plut. Alc. 32 αὐλεῖν μὲν εἰρσίαν τοῖς ἐλαύνουσι Χρυσόγονον, κλείειν δὲ Καλλιππίδην. In Latin the κλευστής is hortator and his position and function are described in Sil. Ital. 6. 30 medius stat marginis puppis | qui rora alternos mutaturum temperet ictus | et remis dictet sonitum. One sound δπ was meant for the forward and one δπ for the backward stroke, ὦ- being introductory.

209. βρεκεκεκέξ κ.τ.λ. : a sound commonly heard from the frog in Greece. The sub aqua sub aqua of the Latin (On. Met. 6. 376) represents a different hearing of κοάξ κοάξ (-co-áhah co-áhah). One Australian frog says (according to the aborigines) Dugulúk, but another has a more continuous sound, which answers very well to the spelling of Aristoph., if we read it as w-r-r-r-ek-ek-ek-esh. In the absence of digamma from Attic β is the nearest approximation to the w-sound. The termination in κοάξ meanwhile suggests the human βαβαῖδξ, πυπᾶδξ, πᾶξ, etc.

[The frogs begin slowly, but get too quick for Dionysus. The increasing rapidity appears in the metre.]

211-220. Λιμναία κρηῶν τέκνα κ.τ.λ. The fun of this passage lies in the incorporation of individual words and whole phrases taken from a serious lyric poem and partly applied humorously, partly burlesqued by the inclusion of e.g. κραίτα-λόκωμος in place of a compound of more dignity. The frogs are proud of their own singing, and after the self-complacent εὐγηρὺν ἑμὸν ('the singing for which I am justly famous') they give a striking specimen in a harsh 'κοῶξ κοῶξ.'

One may suspect (from κόκκων 209) that, in the original, swans were the subject, and that the details are travestied just enough to suit frogs. This would add point to Λιμναία τέκνα, εὐγηρὺν, and the delight of the Muses and Apollo in the singer. Also the whole passage 242-249 gains new significance when it is retranslated into its original application to the cynnae musici.

[Something of the tone may be retained in a rendering—

*Come, children of the fount, folk of the lake,
Let us awake
And in its fullest sweetness loud upraise
Our hymn of praise
—Coishsh! Coishsh!—
The hymn of Nysa's story,
Of Dionysus' glory,
The same we carolled in the Marsh that day,
When on the Feast of Pots
The noble throng of sots
Through my demeane with headaches wends its way.]*

211. Λιμναία . . τέκνα. In the pseudo-Homeric Batrachomyomachia 12 the frog is Λιμνοχαρὴς πολέφημος.

215-216. ἄμφι, 'in honour of.' Hymns and dithyrambs often began with a promise, or an appeal to the Muses, to sing concerning (ἄμφι) a god or hero; cf. Hym. Hom. 21. 1 ἄμφι Ποσειδάωνι, θεῶν μέγαν, ἀρχομ' αἰεῖν, 18. 1 ἄμφι μοι Ἑρμαίῳ φίλον γόνον ἔννεπε, Μοῖσα. So in tragedy Eur. Tr. 511 ἄμφι μοι Ἴλιον, ὦ Μοῖσα, . . δεισον.

Νυσήιον Διὸς Διώνυσον: with an eye to the imaginary derivation Διό-νισον; cf. Apoll. Rhod. 2. 905 Διὸς Νυσήιον ἰδα. As Merry remarks, 'it is impossible to localise Nysa.' Dr. Jane Harrison (Proleg. to the Study of Grk. Relig. p. 379), after observing that Homer's Νυσήιον was in Thrace—with which region the worship of Di. was originally connected—says 'as the horizon of the Greeks widened, Nysa is pushed farther and farther away to an ever more remote 'Nowhere.' It in fact recedes from Thrace to Asia Minor and thence to India or Libya.

217-219. Λίμναισιν: not λίμναισιν, which would be pointless (especially after λίμναϊα). Λίμναι was the low-lying portion of SE. Athens in which stood the old temple of Dionysus, and north of which the great theatre was built in the next century. Cf. Dem. Neser. 1370 ἐν τῷ ἀρχαιοτάτῳ ἱερῷ τοῦ Διονύσου . . . ἐν Λίμναις, Inscrit. 8. 48, Thuc. 2. 15 τὸ ἐν Λίμναις Διονύσιον, ὃ τὰ ἀρχαιότερα Διονύσια ποιεῖται ἐν μηνὶ Ἀνθεστηριῶνι. For the reference to the Anthesteria (in Χύτροισι) see Introduct. p. xlix. That festival lasted for three days, called respectively Πιθογία, Χόες, Χύτροι. On the last the drinking excesses of the previous day would have rendered the procession κραυπαλόκωμος.

ἰαχῆσαμεν, ἦνίκα . . . χωρεῖ. There is no real difficulty in the tenses. ἰαχῆσαμεν cannot indeed be gnomic in the rel. clause, and can only refer to a past act; 'we gave it loud utterance,' i.e. once, when we were frogs on earth (cf. 214). For the rest ἦνίκα χωρεῖ = 'at that time (of the year) when the crowd is wont to go.'

ἔμδον τέμενος: humorously of the marshy ground. λαῶν in plur. (cf. ἀκούετε λαῶ) dated from the time before the closer unification of the Athenian πόλις, and was retained in certain formulae and phrases.

On the day of the Χύτροι there were ἀγῶνες and the δχλος would naturally pass to them by way of the Λίμναι.

221. ἐγὼ δὲ κ.τ.λ.: Dionysus half sings this in irritated mimicry of the frogs.

222. ὦ κοῦξ κοῦξ, 'my friends (or 'Messrs.') *Κοῦξ*sh *Κοῦξ*sh.' The comedian Alexis uses a similar turn οἷχι τῶν μετρίων . . . ἀλλὰ τῶν βαβαὶ βαβαὶ ('those who are always exclaiming βαβαὶ').

226. αὐτῷ κοῦξ. It may be noted that this circumstantial or comitative dat. with αὐτός is used in comedy with or without article in both sing. and plur., but only of things; in tragedy only in plur., but of both persons and things (Starkie on Vesp. 119).

227. οἶδεν γὰρ ἔστ' ἄλλ' ἢ . . . : cf. Lys. 139 οἶδεν γὰρ ἴσμεν πλὴν Περσίδων καὶ σκάφη, ἢ γέροντες οὐδὲν ἴσμεν ἄλλο πλὴν δχλοι. The latter example might seem to point to the more logical ἄλλο here rather than ἀλλὰ, but οἶδεν ἄλλο ἢ . . . and οἶδεν ἄλλο, ἀλλὰ . . . overlapped each other and caused a confusion of expression (Kühner-Gerth ii. § 534. 6). [Though it must be remembered that accents were not in use in the time of Aristoph., and that we have, therefore, to rely upon later tradition, confusion of expression is clear in πλὴν ἀλλὰ . . . and πλὴν ἢ Also ἄλλο ἢ could not directly give us e.g. μηδετέροις δέχασθαι ἀλλ' ἢ μιᾷ νηϊ (Thuc. 3. 71), and it is clear that, however accentuated, the combination has become simply = πλὴν. We may, therefore, very well accept ἀλλ' ἢ as the probable accentuation.]

228. εἰκότως, 'I have good right to sing' (for the reasons next given).

229-233. εὐλυροὶ . . . καλαμόφθογγα . . . φορμικτὰς. The deities to whom these words belong are all indebted to the frogs, who are the proper owners of the water-side and look after its products, especially the reed. κάλαμοι were used for making the pan-pipe, and δούρακες (a smaller species, but not always distinguished, see Hymn. Merc. 47 δούρακες καλάμοιο) for forming a bridge or fret across the hollow tortoise-shell of the lyre. Over this bridge the strings were drawn from the bottom of the shell to the ζυγόν. This is the account in Did. Antiq. But Hymn. Merc. l.c. implies that the reeds were fixed across the shell to serve as a foundation for a drum-like skin. Fritzsche quotes a frag. of Sophocles ὑψηρέθη σου κάλαμος ὥσπερ Αἴρας, which illustrates the use of the κάλαμος but leaves its application indefinite.

There were two chief forms of stringed instrument, the λύρα with its oval tortoise-shell and curved horns (πήχεις), and the λιθάρα, a wooden case, more quadrangular, with hollow projecting arms instead of the πήχεις. The φόρμιγξ is commonly identified with the latter, or regarded as a particular species of it. Nevertheless its sounding-board can be referred to equally as ὑπολύριον (adj.).

230. κεροβάτας: lit. 'going upon horn' = κορνήρας, 'hoofed.' Pan is called αἰγιστάτης (Theoc. cp. 13. 6., αἰγιόδης (Hym. Hom. 19. 2), τραγόπους (Simon. fr. 33). Horace (Od. 2. 19. 4) has capripedum Satyrorum. The schol. also records the title τραγοδάμων. [Other scholiastic explanations 'horned walker' and 'walking on the mountain peaks' are fanciful, and the former practically impossible.]

καλαμόφθογγα: contained accus.: cf. Pind. O. 13. 123 ἐνόπλια παίζειν, Verg. Georg. 4. 565 carminea qui lusi pasorum. The favourite instrument of Pan was the σῦριγξ (flauta) made of seven κάλαμοι or δόνακες cut in unequal lengths so as to form an octave. These were fastened together with wax and the whole was then bound round, cf. Verg. Ecl. 2. 32 Præmunt calamos cæca coniungere plures | instituit.

παῖζον: pastoral minstrelsy was regarded as sportive and without pretensions to the higher art and themes of the harp. So Verg. Ecl. 1. 10 lulere quæ vellem calamo permisit agresti.

243. κυκίρου, 'galingale.' φλίω, 'rush.'

244. πολυκολυμβήτοισι: we may perhaps render 'many and divers strains.' In the original here parodied the word may have been e.g. πολυκάμπτοισι. The variations on the song are played by diving.

246. Διὸς ὄμβρον: a frequent expression of poetry, since Ζεὺς εἶναι (Alcæus, fr. 34).

247 sq. χορίαν . . ἐφθιγγάμεσθα, 'we sang a dance,' i.e. the dance-music. According to Plato (Leirr. 788 A. χορεία = ὀρχησις καὶ ᾠδή, and the latter element is considered here: cf. 150 (πυρρίχην). [Reversely χορεύσασθαι βοᾶν (Thesm. 103). Such expressions are part of the lyric style and do not belong to the comedian's own language. Even tragedy, which would readily use προίμιον χορεύσομαι (Aesch. Ag. 31)—since the 'prelude' is itself the dance—would be slow to use βοᾶν χορεύσομαι.] αἰόλαν = 'varied,' not monotonous.

249. πομφολυγοταφλάσμασιν: a burlesque of dithyrambic compounds (cf. 99 n.). [In pronouncing it should be remembered that φ = π, not f.] 'With bubbly plop-plop-plopping.' The dat. is not of the instrument, but of accompanying circumstances (Kühner-Gerth i. 425. 6), and is virtually modal. Cf. Hom. Il. 3. 2 κλαγγὴ τ' ἐνοπῇ τ' ἴσαν, Xen. An. 1. 7. 4 κραιγῇ πολλῇ ἐπίασιν.

251. τεντὶ παρ' ὑμῶν λαμβάνω. Dionysus makes an absurd and derisive noise and adds 'I am picking that up (or 'catching that trick') from you.' The proper word for learning a thing from a person is παραλαμβάνειν, the simple λαμβάνειν meaning 'borrow.' Cf. Arist. Pacl. 22, where the highest quality in poetic expression is τὸ μεταφορικὸν εἶναι, because μόνον τοῦτο οὔτε παρ' ἄλλον ἔστι λαβεῖν εὐφρίας τε σημείων ἔστι, Luc. I'isc. 6.

253. δεινά τὰρα πεισόμεσθα, 'it seems we are to be badly treated'; an Attic phrase of remonstrance; cf. Ach. 323 οἷα ἀποισόμεσθα δῆτα answered by δεινά τὰρα πείσομαι ('then it will be a shame'). The frogs want copyright.

258. ἡ φάρυξ ὅποσον ἂν ἡμῶν: so Bachmann for ὅποσον ἡ φάρυξ ἂν ἡμῶν of MSS. If there is one rule of Greek more certain than another it is that, when ἂν belongs to a relat. and subjunct. construction, it cannot be separated from the relative by more than the light particles μεν, δέ, γε, γάρ, and comparatively seldom even by these. There is one instance of separation by οἷν, viz. inf. 1420 ὁπότερος οἷν ἂν . . μέλλῃ. For details see Starkie on I'esp. 565 (Appendix).

χανδάνη: cf. Hom. Il. 11. 462 ἦσαν ὅσον κεφαλῇ χάρδε φωτός and French crier à pleine tête: 'as wide as our throat can hold.' The throat of frogs is proverbially wide: cf. Ov. Met. 6. 377 inflaturque colla tumescunt, | ipsaque dilatant patulos contricia rictus.

264. οὐδῖποτε: sc. ἐκρήματα, resuming his own words and ignoring theirs.

265. κἄν με δῆ: the best MSS. support this reading, and in Phut. 216 the κἄν δεῖ of MSS. plainly points to κἄν δῆ and not κεί δεῖ. In I'esp. 616 we have ἐγχεῖς (= ἐγχεῖς), and the evidence for contracted forms in the subjunct. from δεῖ is quite sufficient (see Blaydes' crit. note to this place and Kühner-Blass, Gk. Gramm. § 245. 3). Vowels of like character (ε and ε, ε and η) contract more easily than others, and for δέη to become δῆ (or χέη χῆ) no more interferes with the general rule of non-contraction of δέω χέω than do the forms δεῖς δεῖ, χεῖς χεῖ.

268. ἔμελλον ἄρα παύσειν ποθ'. The frogs stop croaking (since they are to appear through the πάροδος as the chorus at v. 316) and Di. claims a victory. Lit. 'I was to stop you, it appears, in the end': = 'I knew I should stop you.' So Ach. 317 ἐμέλλετ' ἄρα πάντως ἀνήσειν τῆς βοῆς, Luc. 1301. The idiom is as old as Homer, and the infin. is always in the future.

269. παῦε: 122 n. παραβαλοῦ: 180 n.

τῷ κωπῶ: these words (apparently superfluous) are added in the sense 'give a little pull with your oar and bring to' or 'give her a touch of the oar, etc.' This also explains the diminutive.

271. At this line the scene is supposed to change (cf. 273, 278). We have left the lake and are in the adjoining country described by Herakles (143-153). The scene was no more actually represented than the darkness of v. 273.

ὁ Ξανθίας: 40 n., 60s.

ἦ Ξανθίας, 'Hullo! Xanthias!' Cf. Nub. 105 ἦ ἦ σιώπα. Others keep the accentuation ἦ, and read as a question ἦ Ξανθίας; (sc. ὅπως ἐστίν, as the schol. explains), i.e. 'Is it really Xanthias?' But Di. cannot see Xa. in the darkness, and the slave's λαῦ (not = ιοῦ, but, as Suidas states, of disgust = 'heugh!') is heard in the distance (hence βάδιζε δεῦρο).

275. ἄλγειν: see on ἐφραζεν 182, and cf. ἐφασκ' 278.

276. καὶ νυνὶ γ' ὀρῶ: he pretends to be peering into the dark, with his eyes fixed on—the spectators. The Dionysiac festival is a time of universal flouting, and the audience must hear its share (cf. 783). In Nub. 1096 one character actually mentions the spectators (οἱ θεαταί) and asks the other what he sees among them; to which the reply is that for the most part they are a very loose lot.

277. νῦν: not superfluous, but = 'ic'd better get on.'

278. οὐ τὰ θηρία τὰ δαίν' ἐφασκ': it is difficult to supply εἶναι. The sentence should be taken as cut short by the contempt of Dionysus. οὐ can hardly be the gen. ('the place whose monsters . .') since φάσκειν does not appear to take an accus. of the kind. This verb frequently contains the suggestion of pretence. For the tense cf. 182 n.

281. εἰδώς με κ.τ.λ. The participles are to be related in the sense φιλοτιμοίμενος, ὅτι ἥδαι με . .

282. οὐδὲν γὰρ οἶτω γαῦρον . .: Euripides in his Philoct. (fr. 788) had written οὐδὲν γὰρ οἶτω γαῦρον ὡς ἀνὴρ ἐφν, a line which seems to have attracted attention through the surprise in its naïve-looking conclusion: 'There is nothing that gives itself such airs as—man.' It is quoted by other writers, e.g. Plutarch and Dion Chrysostom.

283. ἐγὼ δέ γ': the ἐγὼ of the boaster (cf. 280), implying 'but I am not that sort of person; give me adventures!' [This line and the next are tragic in metre and are delivered with an air.]

284. ἀγώνισμα: not literally a contest (which in any case λαβεῖν hardly suits), but something won (ἐπαθλον Suid.) in a struggle, i.e. 'the honours of combat'; cf. Thuc. 1. 22, 3. 82, 7. 86 and the notes of Poppe-Stahl.

τῆς ὁδοῦ, 'our journey (all this way).'

285. καὶ μὴν : lit. 'and, in fact . .,' et vero. καὶ μὴν ('by the way,' 'well') are the common particles in the dramatists for drawing attention to a new arrival just appearing or about to appear (cf. 287). The use here is much the same, but with a shade of difference. When Di. says 'I want adventures,' Xa. replies 'Of course! And, by the way (talking of adventures), I hear a noise.' [Since καὶ μὴν regularly begins its clause, it is surely more natural to punctuate οὐ τὸν Δία καὶ μὴν . . than οὐ τὸν Δία καὶ μὴν . . Xa. assents to Dionysus' bragging: 'certainly!'] Xanthias is of course only pretending to see sights and playing on the nerves of his master.

289. It is possible to punctuate ΔΙ. ποῖόν τι; δεινόν; ΞΑ. παντοδαπὸν γοῦν κ.τ.λ. This gives a natural enough sense to γοῦν, and the form of reply is that of v. 293. Dionysus would be prompted to ask if it is δεινόν by the expressions in 144 and 279. But there is no sufficient reason for deserting the traditional arrangement.

291. ὠραιστάτη τις : with adjectives τις (like quidam) practically = 'quite.'

293. Ἐμπουσα : Di. concludes that it must be Εμπουσα because of its metamorphoses. Εμπουσα was a spectre of the dark sent by Hecate, or a manifestation of Hecate herself, frightening travellers. Sometimes (at least in later Greek) the name is generic and used in the plural (= 'bogey'). The special mark of Ἐμπουσα (as distinguished from Μορμώ and other μορμολυκεῖα) is that she kept changing her shape; cf. Dem. de Cor. 130 (of the mother of Aeschines) ἡ Εμπουσαν ἅπαντες ἴσασι καλούμενην ἐκ τοῦ πάντα ποιεῖν καὶ πάσχειν καὶ γίνεσθαι, Luc. Salt. 19 τὴν Ἐμπουσαν τὴν ἐς μυρίας μορφὰς μεταβαλλομένην. One of her attributes was the leg of an ass ('ὀνόκωλος, 'ὀνοσκελὶς). In many mythologies (e.g. Indian and Arabian) demons and malevolent powers have misshapen legs, and the pede Pavana claudo of Horace is derived from the same notion.

πυρὶ γοῦν λάμπεται κ.τ.λ. : i.e. '(I should think it is Εμπουσα), at any rate it has the orthodox characteristics of the nursery description.' She is quite en règle.

294. ἄπαν τὸ πρόσωπον : rather accus. of respect than nominative; cf. Eur. I.T. 1156 σῶμα λάμπονται περὶ.

καὶ σκέλος χαλκοῦν ἔχει; Di. wishes to make sure: 'And has she a bronze leg (as she ought to have)!' In Soph. El. 490 χαλκόπους Ἐρινός denotes tirelessness (cf. χαλκέντερος).

296. βολίτινον. The point of the jest is lost and probably not worth seeking. There may be a pun upon μολίβδινον (μολίβδος being another shape of the word for 'lead'), but that in itself is insufficient. If we may trust Athenaeus (566 v) Cratinus also used the expression βολίτινον ἔχων θάτερον σκέλος, but we do not know in what connexion. There may have been some Athenian catchword of the kind.

297. ἱερεῦ: the priest of Dionysus Eleuthereus, who naturally occupied the middle seat of honour in the front row. There were numerous other seats for other priests in his neighbourhood; the inscriptions in the existing remains of the theatre (though they are of a later date, temp. Hadrian.) show at least forty-five such in the first row. See Haigh, Att. Theat. pp. 305, 309 sq. The humour of the stage Dionysus appealing to his own priest for protection scarcely requires remark.

ἐν' ᾧ σοι ξυμπότης: i.e. after the performances, when the priest of Dionysus gives a banquet, to which the successful competitors are invited, including (as is clear from this place) the actors. Cf. Ach. 1085 ἐπὶ δεῖπνον ταχὺ | βᾶδιζε . . | ὁ τοῦ Διονύσου γὰρ σ' ἱερεὺς μεταπέμπεται, Ecc. 1180, and inf. 1480. There is an amusing παρὰ προσδοκίαν in ἱερεῦ, διαφύλαξόν μ', ἐν' —ᾧ σοι ξυμπότης.

298. ὦναξ Ἡράκλεις. Xanthias uses the customary apostrophe of appeal to Herakles Alexikakos; but Dionysus is masquerading as that divinity, and he takes the words directly to himself.

300. τοῦτό γ' ἐγὼ ἦντον. Herakles was in ill odour in Hades through his previous visit (cf. 464), but it was safer to pose as the redoubtable Herakles than to be known for the coward Dionysus.

301. ἐγὼ ἥπερ ἔρχει: to the Empusa. The words were apparently a formula addressed to ghosts and supernatural powers = 'pass on your ways (we have no wish to meddle with you, and therefore do not meddle with us).' Cf. Lys. 832 ἀνδρ' ἀνδρ' ὁρῶ προσιόντα παραπεπληγμένον. | τοῖς τῆς Ἀφροδίτης ὀργαῖς εἰλημμένον. | ὦ πότνια, Κύπρου καὶ Κυθήρων καὶ Πάφου | μεδέουσ', ἐγὼ ὁρθὴν ἥπερ ἔρχει τὴν ὁδόν. Xa. pauses, and then, pretending that the goblin has passed, calls to Dionysus. [The common notion that 'go straight on' is addressed to Di. is very weak, nor is ἔρχει the proper verb.]

302. πάντ' ἀγαθὰ, 'nothing but good.' So Av. 1706, Ach. 982 (πάντ' ἀγαθ' ἔχοντας). [To be distinguished from πάντα τὰγαθὰ . .]

303-304. ἔστι θ' ὥσπερ . . ὁρῶ. Hegelochus, who acted Orestes in Euripides' play of that name, should have pronounced v. 281 as ἐκ κυμάτων γὰρ αἶθις αὖ γαλῆν' ὁρῶ (i.e. γαληνά, 'I see calm after storm'). By a slip of the tongue he said γαλῆν ('a weasel,' the animal which took the place of the cat in Greek houses). The same slip is referred to by Strattis and Sannyrion, of whom the latter has φέρ' εἰ γενοίμην . . γαλῆν | ἀλλ' Ἠγέλοχος οἷός με μνήσειεν ἄν | ὁ τραγικός, ἀνακράγοι τ' ἄν εἰς ἐχθροῖς μέγα | ἐκ κυμάτων γὰρ αἶθις αὖ γαλῆν ὁρῶ. The difference lay in the complete ignoring of the elided syllable, which should only have been slurred, and also in the accent (or pitch) of the vowel η. This is one of several passages which show how keenly the audience observed an actor's articulation and also how distinctly words were heard in the theatre. [In the confusion of τῆνδε μοῖσαν εἰσάγων with τῆνδ' ἐμοῦσαν εἰσάγων recorded by Athen. 616c there was a deliberate purpose.] Cicero (Orat. § 173) remarks of the Athenians in versu theatra tota exclamant, si fuit una syllaba aut brevior aut longior, and (de Or. § 196) in his si paulum malo offensum est, ut aut contractione brevius fieret aut productione longius, theatra tota reclamant. The voice of a tragic actor was a first consideration, and a false articulation was as bad as a false note from a great singer (see Haigh, Att. Theat. pp. 249 sq.).

ὥσπερ Ἠγέλοχος: sc. εἶπεν; cf. Thuc. 5. 29 πόλιν δημοκρατομένην ὥσπερ καὶ αὐτοί, Herond. 2. 28 δὲν χρῆν . . ὥς ἐγὼ ζῶειν, Soph. Aj. 525 ἔχειν σ' ἄν αἰκτον ὥς καγὼ φρενὶ | θελοίμ' ἄν, Lucr. 3. 455 ergo dissolvi quomodo convenit omnem animai naturam, cum sumus. It ought to be perceived that in all these instances the nom. is the proper case. Here an alternative ὥσπερ Ἠγελόχῳ would be wrong, since the meaning is not 'we may say, as Hegelochus (might) . .'

308. ὁδὲ δὲ δείσας κ.τ.λ.: either pointing to some red-haired man in the audience, or else to the statue of Dionysus, which was brought into the theatre, and of which the face was ruddled (Paus. 2. 2. 6). In the latter case the statue of Dionysus blushes for his stage representative. There is a παρὰ προσδοκίαν in ὑπερπυρρίσσε. 'How faint (and pale) I grew,' says Di., and Na. replies: 'Yes, and he yonder—(and then, instead of 'grew pale')—grew red for your sake.'

It must be remarked, however, that πυρρός is rufus, and can scarcely be used for ἐρυθρός of the complexion alone. By putting together the notes of the scholiasts and of Hesychius it has been conjectured that the priest of Dionysus was πυρρός, and ιερεὺς Διονύσου seems to have been a sobriquet for a red-headed man. If so, the priest is the man pointed at: nor would there be any rudeness in this if the priest regularly appeared at the festival with red hair and beard, and probably red face also. Cf. Tibull. 2. 1. 55 agricola et minio suffusus, Bacche, rubenti (at the country festival); Pliny, II. N. 33. 111 (of the statue of Jupiter at festivals); Plutarch, Quaest. Rom. 98 (of the ruddling of old statues in general). It is perhaps not too bold to suggest that this colour was attributed to the (Thracian) god of wine, and that originally the priest representing him must necessarily be equally πυρρός, whereas later the redness, symbolically retained, might be artificial. The priest of Dionysus might then well be said to 'get πυρρός for the sake of' Dionysus. Moreover it is otherwise hard to see why Eupolis should call Hipponicus 'priest of Dionysus' because of his πυρρότης.

310. αἰτιάσομαι: nothing is gained by altering this ('whom am I going to blame?') into αἰτιάσωμαι; cf. Eur. Ion 758 εἵπωμεν ἢ σιγῶμεν; ἢ τί δράσομεν; Ach. 312 αἶψ' ἐγὼ σου φείσομαι; Gildersleeve, Gk. Synl. § 268.

311. αἰθέρα κ.τ.λ.: see 100 n.

316 sqq. The Chorus, numbering twenty-four, is heard approaching (but is not yet visible: cf. πρὸς 319). It makes its entry (παρόδος) at v. 321 in a manner which is naturally a fair imitation of the evening (313) procession and dancing at the time of the Lesser Mysteries (see Introd. B.). Usually the comic chorus entered κατὰ στροίχους, i.e. with front of four and depth of six, probably led by the flute-player; but where some more free and realistic manner was required it was adopted (as in Ares and Ecclesiazusae). The dresses are in keeping with the customs of the procession, but, according to the convention of comedy, were rather amusing than sumptuous (cf. 403). παίζουσιν (319) shows the spirit in which they behave. It is of course the only aspect of the celebrations suited to comedy. We may assume that the order of proceedings at the Lesser Mysteries was in general similar to that at the Greater, including a πρόρρησις, the carrying of Iacchus, γεφυρισμός and πάρρυξις; but, the distance being short, the whole procession would be at night. The comedian introduces as much as he chooses of the public or exoteric part of the ceremonies. μύσται include the initiated of all grades; the completely initiated were ἐπόπται.

316. Ἰακχ', ὁ Ἰακχε: the regular shout, whence ἱακχος itself = 'the cry of the mystics' (320); cf. Eur. Cycl. 69 ἱακχον ἱακχον ῥῶδ' ἀν' μέλπω, Hdt. 8. 65 καὶ οἱ φαίνεσθαι τὴν φωνὴν εἶναι τὸν μυστικὸν ἱακχον. The word afterwards came to be made into a proper name and was applied as a title to Dionysus in his connexion with the Eleusinia (Harrison, Proleg. pp. 111, 541 sqq.). The day of his procession was also known as ἱακχος (Suid.).

[The temple of Iacchus at Athens was called the Ἰακχεῖον, and was presumably the same as that of Demeter containing 'Iacchus with a torch,' mentioned by Pausanias (1. 2. 4) as situated inside the gate entered from Peiræus. But we are not here (and 324) concerned with that Ἰακχεῖον, but with an afterworld counterpart of another shrine by the Ilissus.]

318. τοῦτ' ἐστ' ἐκεῖνο, 'this is the thing' (which Herakles told us of, viz. 154 sqq.). From this expression ἐστὶν is more idiomatically omitted (cf. 1342).

319. ἔφραζε: cf. 182, 275, 278.

320. ᾄδουσι γοῦν τὸν ἱακχον ὅνπερ δι' ἀγορᾶς: sc. ᾄδουσιν; cf. Eq. 408 βακχέβακχον ᾄσαι. The mystics in Hades are singing the same Iacchus-song which the mystics sing at Athens through the market-place (when proceeding to Agræ).

It is remarkable, not that the scholiast, but that modern editors also, should always write Διαγόρας, and imagine that the sentence is incomplete, an offensive word being generally taken as suppressed. There was, indeed, a well-known Diagoras of Melos called ὁ ἄθεος, who may possibly have flouted ἱακχος (or the Iacchus-song) in some unseemly way. The schol. on Ar. 1073 relates (with authorities) that he τὰ μυστήρια εἰτέλιζεν. Others understand another Diagoras (if it is another, and not rather the same man at an earlier and more pious stage), a lyric poet, who hymned the deities: these supply ᾄδει. But there is no apparent comic point in saying 'they are singing the Iacchus of whom Diagoras sings.' Rather the procession at Athens, in passing from the Iaccheum, sings the ἱακχος through the ἀγορά. [For the absence of the article see 129 n.]

324-326. Ἰσπαις: see 316 n. The meadow in Hades (Pind. Thren. fr. 1) is identified with (or answers to) that of Agræ.

327. ὁσίους ἐς θιασώτας: the epithet should be noted, as also the insistence in ἀγρᾶν λέγων ὁσίους inf. 335, 384. The comedian has no desire to be accused of belittling the mysteries. He respects their serious side while availing himself of their jocose element. Possibly also he is upholding the reputation of the παννυχίδες against some attack.

Θιασώτας, '(your) fellow-revellers,' like ἐμὸς πολίτης, ciris meus, etc.

329 s.l. βρύοντα στέφανον μύρτων, 'a wreath laden with myrtle-berries' (μύρτα). βρίειν is used with either dat. instr. or gen. of fulness; cf. Soph. O. C. 16 χῶρος β, | δάφνης, ελαίας. [To render μύρτων as from μύρτος (gen. . . material with στέφανον) is to leave βρύοντα but awkwardly attached.] Myrtle (μυρσίνη) was worn in the procession by at least the ιεροφάντης, δαδούχος, and other officials. The statue of the child Iacchus also wears the wreath and carries a torch (340).

330. Θρασεῖ: i.e. without fear of condemnation as ἀκόλαστοι (331).

ἐγκατακροῖων, 'beating in time to the measure' (cf. 374). τιμάν, 'rite,' 'service' (with χορείαν in explan. apposition) is cognate or internal accus.; cf. Verg. Aen. 6. 639 pedibus plaudunt choros.

331. τὸν ἀκόλαστον . ., 'the (recognised, orthodox) free . .'

335. χαρίτων: half personified. It has 'a greatest share of the Graces,' i.e. of charm and delight; cf. Ecl. 582 ὡς τὸ ταχύνειν χαρίτων μετέχει πλείστον παρὰ τοῖσι θεαταῖς. The words are both a promise to the spectators and a claim of the dramatist.

336. ὅσῳις μύσταις: the dat. does not depend directly on ἐγκατακροῖων, but is either (1) loosely joined to the general sense as dat. communis (i.e. 'as your pious mystics pray you'); or (2) with ἀγνὰν ἱερὰν, 'a dance pure and holy in the eyes of pious mystics.' The latter is simple; cf. Soph. O. C. 1446 ἀνάξια γὰρ πᾶσιν ἔστε δυστυχεῖν: Dem. 20. 54 ὁ λόγος αἰσχρὸς τοῖς σκοπομένοις.

337. Δήμητρος κόρη: to whom the Lesser Mysteries specially belonged (as was natural for the spring), while the Greater Eleusinia (of autumn) belonged to Demeter herself.

338. ὡς ἡδὺ . . κρεῶν, 'what a delightful whiff of pork!' The impera. construction as in ἡδὺ δξει, ἀπόδει τινός; cf. Plut. 1020 δξειν τε τῆς χροῦς ἔφασκεν ἡδὺ μοι. Another construction to be noted is that of Vesp. 1059 τῶν ἱματίων ὀξήσει δεξιότητος. In the mysterious pigs were the staple sacrifice; cf. Arch. 747, 764; Plut. 374 ἐς χοιρίδιόν νῦν μοι δάνεισον τρεῖς δραχμάς | δεῖ γὰρ μυθῆναι με πρὶν τεθνηκέναι.

339. ἦν τι καὶ . ., 'in case you may even . .'; cf. 175.

340 343. ἔγειρε φλογέας λαμπάδας· ἐν χερσὶ γὰρ ἦκει . . φωσφόρος ἀστήρ: this is the simplest reading for both construction and metre. The change to ἦκεις on the part of most (but not the best) MSS. was due to ἔγειρε, and the unmetrical addition of τινάσσων was caused by the inclusion of a marginal note written under a misapprehension. On the other hand the words γὰρ ἦκει cannot have been so added.

The chorus apostrophise each other, 'stir the torches to flame (φλογέας being proleptic); for in our hands there is borne—Iacch' O Iacche!—the light-bringing star of our nightly revel.' 'Iacχ' ὦ 'Iacχε is parenthetical, like Io triumphe, αἰοί, etc. In the strophe the deity was invoked to come forth; with the antistrophe he is brought out.

340. ἔγειρε: by brandishing. Cf. Stat. Silv. 8. 5 quassamus lampida mystae. [Some, keeping τινάσσων in violation of the metre, punctuate ἔγειρε· φλογέας λαμπάδας ἐν χερσὶ γὰρ κ.τ.λ. In this case ἔγειρε is used absolutely (like ἔπειγε, φαῖνε), not as = ἐγείρου, but with a relevant accus. supplied. The late position of γὰρ would in itself be justifiable: cf. Antiph. ap. Ath. 339 B ἐπὶ τὸ τάριχος ἐστὶν ὠρμηκῖα γὰρ, ibid. 572 A αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι τοῦνομα | βλάπτουσι τοῖς τρόποις γὰρ.]

ἐν χερσὶ γὰρ ἦκει: viz. of the ιακχαγωγοί or ceremonial nurses (fem.), whose title is found in connexion with the Eleusinia.

343. φωσφόρος ἀστήρ: viz. Iacchus, who bears a torch. Cf. (though in another connexion) Soph. Ant. 1146 χοράγ' ἀστρων, applied to Dionysus. There is an oxymoron in the combination of νεκτέρου with φωσφόρος ('morning-star').

344. δῆ: better than δὲ, as well as more metrical. They have called upon their comrades to 'rouse the torches,' and it is done (δῆ) = 'So! The meadow is all ablaze.'

345. γόνυ πάλλεται γρόντων. So the aged Cadmus and Teiresias dance under the Bacchic inspiration (Eur. Bacch. 184 sqq.), and Cadmus observes ἐπιλελήσμεθ' ἠδέως | γέροντες ὄντες.

348. ἐτῶν . . ἐνιαυτοῦς = ἐτῶν κύκλους (Eur. Hel. 112), since ἔτος = 'year,' while ἐνιαυτός = 'round' or 'recurring season'; cf. Hom. Od. 1. 16 ἀλλ' ὅτε δῆ ἔτος ἦλθε περιπλομένων ἐνιαυτῶν.

349. ἱερᾶς ὑπὸ τιμᾶς. 'thanks to (or 'to the accompaniment of') this holy service'; cf. 333.

350 *sq. σὺ δὲ . . μάκαρ: Iacchus (one of the μάκαρες θεοί) is now in the hands of the bearers, and he is bidden to advance with the procession into the dancing space.

351. ἀνθηρόν ἔλαιον: see Introd. p. xxiii.

354-371. The anapaestic tetrameters, recited by the coryphaeus (who is probably the hierophant, but may be the κῆρυξ), are in humorous imitation of a κήρυγμα or πρόρρησις which was made before the mystic rites proper began. Before the Greater Mysteries a proclamation was made publicly in Athens itself in the Stoa Poikile by the Hierophant or Daduchus (although one would rather have expected it to be the κῆρυξ, and our authorities may be incorrect). But there is nothing to prevent another and final πρόρρησις on the actual field of the celebrations, and at Agrae, so easy of reach from Athens, this was probably part of the proceedings after Iacchus had been brought forth. We need not suppose that Aristoph. adheres strictly to the order of ritual, but he necessarily worked upon a general basis of similarity.

While in the mysteries those are bidden to retire who are uninitiated or impure or have committed certain specified sins, the Chorus here banishes those who are uninitiated or corrupt in literary judgment or who have committed political crimes. This affords an opportunity for a number of personal hits. The double reference to the mysteries on the one hand and the comedian's views on the other is well maintained by plays upon words.

354. εὐφημεῖν χρῆ: i.e. all present must favere lingua, whereas ἐξίστασθαι refers only to those hereafter mentioned.

ἐξίστασθαι κ.τ.λ. For the interdiction itself cf. Callim. Hym. Apoll. 2 ἐκὰς ἐκὰς ὅστις ἀλιτρός, Verg. Aen. 6, 258 procul o procul este profani. We should also compare for the literary application Hor. Od. 3. 1. 1 (hæli profanum (=ἀμύητον) vulgus et arceo). | Favete lingua: carmina non prius | audita Musarum sacerdos | virginibus puerisque canto.

τοῖς ἡμετέροις χοροῖσιν. The words suit (1) the μῦσαι, (2) the comic choruses competing for the prize.

355. ἀπιπός . . καθαρεύει: an application of two clauses of the actual formula at the mysteries, viz. (Theo Smyrn. p. 22) ὅστις τὰς χεῖρας μὴ καθαρὸς and ὅστις φωνὴν ἀσύνετος.

τοιῶνδε λόγων: suiting (1) the mystic doctrines, (2) the 'fit and proper literature' of comedy.

γνώμη, 'judgment,' substituted for χεῖρας of the formula. The comedy must be judged with right taste and without bias. For the loc. or instrum. dat. in place of the accus. of respect cf. Xen. Cyr. 1. 3. 10 ταῖς γνώμας σφαλλομένοις, Eur. Bacch. 683 σώμασιν παρειμέναι, Horond. 3. 32 ὕμνασιν κάμνων.

356. γυναικῶν . . Μουσῶν: i.e. not the vulgar sort of

δρῦα . . εἶδεν: not=τὰ ἱερὰ εἶδεν with allusion to the crowning revelation to a full ἐπόπτης, since not all μύσται were such. δρῦα are not the sacred things, but the sacred rites, though these also are ἄρῃα, and could only be seen or danced by some grade of μύσται. The accus. (cognate) can therefore be joined to χορεύειν ('celebrate in dance') as well as to ὁρᾶν (direct obj.). Cf. Eur. Bacch. 488 πᾶς ἀναχορεύει βαρβάρων τὰδ' δρῦα. Here δρῦα Μουσῶν εἶδεν - 'has been a spectator of drama'; ἐχορεύσεν = 'has actually taken part in a chorus.'

357. Κρατίνου τοῦ ταυροφάγου: a compliment, as the context should show. Aristophanes wishes to be judged by those who have been initiated into the revels of Cratinus, i.e. who know what good comedy is. Cratinus had probably been dead about sixteen years, and though Aristoph. satirises him when alive, in 424 B.C., as senile and a drunkard, such satire was in keeping with the custom of comedy, and is to be discounted by the fact that Cratinus was still neither too senile nor too sodden to defeat Aristoph. himself in 423 B.C. His excellence as a comedian is proved by his nine victories unanimously adjudged. His merit in the eyes of Aristoph. is that he typically represents the 'Old' comedy, with its fearless personal satire, which was supposed to be in the interests of society (παιδαγωγικὴν παρρησίαν ἔχουσα Marc. Aurel. 11. 6). This privilege had been denied, restored, and threatened several times before 405 B.C. and was already on the decline, but our poet endeavours (as Cicero puts it de Rep. 4. 10) ut quod vellet comœdia de quo vellet nominatim diccret; cf. inf. 367-368. On the technical side also the work of Cratinus was of a high order, particularly in the choruses.

That he was a drunkard is a commonplace with his contemporaries, and was admitted by himself in his last play (Περίων); but this vice was (as often in modern times) treated rather as matter for jest than for scorn. Almost certainly along with the present compliment there goes an allusion to his tipsiness, since Κρατίνου βακχεῖα at once suggests Διονύσου βακχεῖα, and since the wine-god is himself called Ταυροφάγος (Soph. fr. Tyro). The term is borrowed from (1) the Orphic mysteries of the ὠμοφάγῃα (Harrison, Proleg. pp. 482 sqq.) at which a bull was slain and eaten in honour of Dionysus, (2) the offering of a bull to Dionysus by the Ephēbi at the City Dionysia (Haigh, Att. Theat. p. 13). Dionysus was also ταυρόμορφος, ταυρόκερως (a bull-god), and the audience would readily take the equation and realise that Cratinus was virtually being substituted for 'the wine-god.'

But ταυροφάγος has a further application to the winner in the dithyrambic contest, where the prize was a bull, which served as a feast. The lyrics of Cratinus were specially dithyrambic, although we have no knowledge as to his competing in dithyramb proper. But 'eater of bulls' may very well have become proverbial for 'prize-winner.' Add to this that the eater of a thing was supposed to be penetrated with the power or spirit of that thing; and hence probably the story of the athlete Milo, who 'ate a bull.' Thus Cratinus is full of bull-like courage in his comic attacks.

[We may sum up by saying that Κρατίνου τοῦ ταυροφάγου is substituted for Διονύσου τοῦ ταυροφάγου, the god of special mysteries, and that, as applied to Cratinus, the epithet implies (1) wine-drinker, (2) winner of victories, (3) fiercely courageous.]

γλώττης βακχεῖα: to be closely joined. His tongue was reckless, carried away with ardour and licence of Dionysiac possession. 'Those who have been initiated into the revels of Cratinus' tongue' = 'those who have learned to appreciate the free-speaking of the old school.'

βακχεῖ' ἐτελέσθη: cognate accus.; cf. Plat. Iliadr. 249 c τελεῖσις αἰεὶ τελετὰς τελοῖμενοι.

358. ἔπεισιν, 'verses,' not 'words,' is the sense of ἔπη in ordinary comic dialogue; but in anapaests, while the former is the surface sense, the latter is not excluded. 'Delighting in ribald words' has its reference to the mysteries; 'in black-guardly verses' to the drama. There is a hit at the competitors of Aristophanes (cf. 13 seq.). τὸ βωμολύχον is that which 'plays to the gallery'; cf. Nub. 970 (in connexion with music).

τοῦτο ποιεῖσιν: id agentibus, sc. βωμολοχοιμένοις, cf. 584 οἱδ' οἱδ' ὅτι θυμοί, καὶ δικαίως αὐτὸ δρᾶς and, more nearly, Plut. 522 ἔσται . . οἰδεῖς ἀνδραποδιστῆς! . . . τίς γὰρ πλοιτῶν ἐθελήσει | κωδιεύων περὶ τῆς ψυχῆς τῆς αὐτοῦ τοῦτο ποιῆσαι; See also 163 n.

359. πόλιν, 'where citizens are concerned.' The article would be more inclusive '(all) the citizens' (regarded as a πόλις).

360. ἀνεγείρει: sc. στάσιν (not αὐτοῖς). The reference is probably to Cleophon and his adherents.

361. ἄρχων, 'while holding (some) office.'

καταδουροδοκεῖται. The middle (or passive) also in Ar. Pol.

2. 9. 26 φαίνονται δὲ καὶ καταδωροδοκοίμενοι καὶ καταχαριζόμενοι πολλά τῶν κοινῶν. The simple δωροδοκεῖν classically = 'receive bribes'; in later writers it = δικάζειν or χρήμασι διαφθείρειν 'bribe' (Cobet, Nor. Lect. p. 502). The compound with κατα- expresses 'ruin (betray) a thing through bribe-taking' (cf. Lysias p. 178 ὁπόταν ταῦτα . . κλέπτωσι καὶ καταδωροδοκῶσι). The use is well-known in καθιπποτροφεῖν τι and the like. In Expr. 1035 τοιοῦτον ἰδὼν τέρας οἷ φησιν δέισας καταδωροδοκῆσαι, | ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν ἔτι καὶ νυνὶ πολεμεῖ we should supply ὑμᾶς, 'to betray you for bribes.' If a person 'corrupts himself—gives himself away—by receiving bribes' he may be said καταδωροδοκεῖν ἑαυτόν, or, as its equivalent, καταδωροδοκεῖσθαι.

362. ἡ προδίδωσιν φροῖριον ἡ ναῦς: part of a public formula; cf. Lys. 31. 28 εἰ μὲν τις φροῖριόν τι προδωκεν ἡ ναὶν ἡ στρατοπέδον τι . . . ταῖς ἐσχάταις ἀν ζημίαις ἐζημιούτο, Poll. 8. 52 ἐγίνοντο εἰσαγγελίαι κατὰ τῶν προδόντων φροῖριον ἡ στρατιάν ἡ ναῦς, Lycurg. c. Leoc. 155. 59.

τάπόρρητα, 'contraband of war' (at the same time suggesting the secrets of the mysteries). Cf. Eph. 278 τουτονὶ τὸν ἀνδρ' ἐγὼ ὑδεικνυμι καὶ φημ' ἐξάγειν | ταῖσι Πελοποννησίων τριήρεσι ζωμεύματα followed by ἐξάγων γε τάπόρρητ' (282). The forbidden exports were particularly materials for shipbuilding (e.g. ropes, sails, pitch), and corn. So Dem. de F. Leg. 433 ἔγραψεν, ἀν τις ὡς Φίλιππον δπλα δῶν ἀλφ' ἡ σκεῖη τριηρικὰ, θάνατον εἶναι τὴν ζημίαν.

363. ἐξ Αἰγίνης. Aegina was now part of the Athenian empire, the Aeginetans having been evicted at the beginning of the war and replaced by settlers from Athens (Thuc. 2. 27). Disloyal Athenians were able to make it a basis for communication with the Peloponnese, since it was τῇ Πελοποννησῶ ἐπικειμένη (Thuc. l.c.). Epidaurus was the nearest opposite port.

εἰκοστολόγος The εἰκοστή was a duty of five per cent on all goods carried by sea in the Athenian empire. It was imposed in 413 B.C. in place of the φόρος or direct quota-payment of the allies, and was collected in all their ports. Cf. Thuc. 7. 28 τὴν εἰκοστὴν ὑπὸ τούτων τὸν χρόνον τῶν κατὰ θάλασσαν ἀντὶ τοῦ φόρου τοῖς ἰπηκόοις ἐπέθεσαν, πλείω νομίσαντες ἀν σφίσι χρήματα οὕτω προσίεναι.

364. ἀσκήματα: leather pads for the oars in the rowlocks. Eligm. Mag. 155. 17 καὶ τὰ δέρματα τὰ ἐπιρραπτόμενα ταῖς κώπαις διὰ τὸ μὴ εἰσφρεῖν τὸ θαλάσσιον ἕδωρ, i.e. 'leather bags sitting over the oar at the oar-ports, to prevent the wash of the sea from entering' (Dict. Ant. ii. p. 223). Cf. Ach. 97 δσχωμ' ἔχεις που περὶ τὸν ὀφθαλμὸν κάτω (after ναίφαρκτον βλέπεις), i.e. 'a pad' or 'bagginess.'

365. χρήματα . . πείθει. Such assistance to the enemy had come from Persia (Xen. Hell. 2. 1. 11), but there can hardly be an attack here upon Alcibiades (cf. 1432). The 'persuasion' on the part of Alc., when he was estranged from Athens, had been exerted seven years earlier than this play, and the position had entirely changed.

366. τῶν Ἑκαταίων. Ἑκαταῖα are either (1) Ἑκάτης δαίπνα, messes of poor food or even offal put out at the cross-roads (ἐν τριόδοις) on the last of the month as a purificatory ceremony. These might be eaten by dogs or by the miserably poor. (2) Ἑκάτης ἀγάλματα, statues or emblems of Hecate προπιλαία (or προθηραία). (3) Ἑκάτης ἱερά, little shrines of Hecate placed ἐν τριόδοις. In the last sense most editors prefer the spelling Ἑκατεῖα (cf. Θησεῖον, Ἡρακλεῖον, Μουσεῖον, Ὀλυμπιεῖον) and this is highly probable. [There is, however, nothing to prove that Ἑκαταῖον is an impossible form in the same meaning, since the suffix was originally -ιον simply, and only spread as -εῖον through analogy with, e.g., Ἡρακλε(φισ)-ιον, Ὀησι(φ)-ιον.] But here it is not safe to make the alteration, since we do not know whether it was δαίπνα, ἀγάλματα or ἱερά which were defiled. Ac. 1051 (στήλης) suggests that it was one of the street emblems.

The defiler referred to is said by scholiasts to have been Cinesias, and, though this may be a guess, it is supported by a passage in Eccl. 330. Moreover Cinesias was a κρᾶλιοδιόδοσκαλος, composer (and teacher to the chorus) of dithyrambs, and a contemptible person (cf. 153), of whom Lysias (ap. Ath. 551 r) states that he was ἀσεβέστατος πάντων ἀνθρώπων, and that he did things ἀ τοῖς ἄλλοις αἰσχρόν ἐστι καὶ λέγειν.

κυκλίσουσιν χοροῖσιν ὑπάδων, 'leading the music of dithyrambic choruses,' is not merely a periphrasis for 'being a dithyrambic poet,' but implies that such a person should be the last to commit this profane outrage.

The κύκλιος χορὸς of fifty danced and sang round the altar of Dionysus, and is thus distinguished in name from other choruses, which were rectangular (τετράγωνοι). Five (tribal) choruses were composed of men and five of boys, and the offence is somewhat emphasised by the latter consideration. The contests of such χοροὶ took place in the theatre at the Dionysia.

ὑπάδων, lit. 'leading with singing' (or the flute) = core for tibia) praecire. ὑπο- of accompaniment strictly expresses the guidance or impulse under which a thing is done: cf. 874, Callim. H. Dian. 241 seq. (after κίχλω | στησάμεναι χορὸν εὐρίπ). ὑπείσαν δὲ λίγεια | λεπταλέον σιργίγες. The same κεισ appears in ὑπαυλεῖν, ὑπειπεῖν (fr. 479 ἐγὼ δ' ὑπερῶ τὸν δρakon = tertia praecibo). On the other hand προσάδειν is said of the chorus (Plat. Legg. 670 n).

It was theoretically the business of the κεκλιοδιδάσκαλος to train his own chorus, but he might employ a ὑποδιδάσκαλος, and it is enough to suppose that the composer here chants his words and tune in general guidance.

367. τοὺς μισθοὺς κ.τ.λ. The schol. on Eccl. 102 states that Agyrrhius 'cut down the payment made to poets,' i.e. managed to reduce the payments made to the selected writers for the dramatic and lyric competitions. The schol. on the present place blames Archinus ('and perhaps Agyrrhius'). All the competitors were paid, but on a scale proportioned to their place in the result.

ρήτωρ ὢν εἴτ' : εἴτα (practically = δμως) implies that, if any one had a right to reduce the scale, it certainly was not for a ῥήτωρ to do it. Cf. 205, Ach. 496 μὴ μοι φθονήσῃτ' . . | εἰ πτωχοὶ ὦν ἔπειτ' ἐν Ἀθηναίοις λέγειν | μέλλω. The offender was a 'professional talker,' and a poet was better than a 'talker.' Moreover a ῥήτωρ is a public man and must put up with the consequences. The ῥήτορες (= οἱ δῆμῳ συμβουλευόντες καὶ ἐν τῷ δῆμῳ ἀγορεύοντες Suid.) theoretically enjoyed no credit, but in practice were powerful.

368. κωμωδηθεὶς, 'because satirised in comedy.'

ἐν ταῖς πατρίοις . . Διονύσου: these words contain the excuse for any freedom taken with Archinus or Agyrrhius. No man ought to bear malice when the poets are simply following the old-established practice (πατρίοις) on a privileged occasion: cf. 357 n. Aristoph. chooses the word ταλαιαίς, not merely instead of ἐορτῇ as applicable to the mysteries, but in emphasis of the excuse. 'Initiation' involves more or less unpleasant probation, and the ῥήτωρ was only 'going through the mill.'

369. τούτοις προῦδῶ: an excellent correction of Blaydes (see crit. n.). Apart from the metre, τοῖτοις ἀπαιδῶ . . ἐξίστασθαι is very improbable Greek for ἀπαιδῶ μὴ παρῆναι or αἰδῶ ἐξίστασθαι. This difficulty could be partially got over by punctuating at the end of the line and treating ἐξίστασθαι as imperat. (cf. Ach. 1001 ἀκούετε λεψὶ κατὰ τὰ πάτρια τοῖς χύας | πίειν). [The change to the imperat. ἀνεγείρετε would be no embarrassment, since that word is addressed directly to other persons (with ὑμῖς), while ἐξίστασθαι is general and formal.] Nevertheless even with such punctuation ἀπαιδῶ would still be unnatural. The correction (1) explains the corruption, the crasis for προ-αιδῶ being rare and apparently restricted to this word, in which it occurs Ar. 556 ἱερὸν πόλεμον πρωιδᾶν αἰτῶ, (2) suits the notion of a πρόρρησις, as in προλέγω, προφωνῶ, (3) restores a normal construction.

καὶθις τὸ τρίτον μάλα. Join καὶθις . . μάλα. Cf. Aesch. Cho. 875 οἶμοι μάλ' αὖθις ἐν τρίτοις προσφθέγμασιν. In phrases of repetition this use of μάλα is habitual, cf. Aesch. Cho. 619, Ag. 1344, Eur. Phoen. 1067, etc.

370. μύσταισι: adj. = μυστικοῖς. Cf. Anth. Pal. 7. 219 μύστης λῆχνοι, Eur. Ion 1373 οἰκέτην βίον, Xen. An. 6. 5. 9 λόχοι φύλακες. [Not 'our rites,' but any such.]

τὰς ἡμετέρας αἰ κ.τ.λ.: words of defence or excuse (cf. 327, 335).

372 sqq. Commentators do not appear to have realised the difficulty of relating the present situation to that which has preceded. At v. 324 the mystae call upon Iacchus to come forth from his shrine; at v. 340 he is borne forth; at v. 350 he is bidden to lead the procession (i.e. the dances) into the flowery level (i.e. the orchestra); at v. 352 the coryphaeus makes the πρόρρησις before the dance begins. But immediately after commanding the mystae to 'raise the song etc.' we here find every one (πᾶς) 'now' (νῦν) bidden to move to the 'flowery recesses of the meadows.' We might take this to be a repetition of the command in v. 350; but now—if we seek a natural interpretation of words—it is daytime (376, 387, 455). The Mystae have taken their ἀριστον and go into the meads to sport and dance 'all day.' What too is the meaning of 'summoning hither Iacchus' (395), when he has already been summoned and has come (340)?

Unless we are to suppose (as we need not) that the two editions of the Frogs have been confused (Introduct. p. xxvi), it is necessary that we should here assume a change of time. After the proclamation of v. 371 the chorus perform their dance, representing the παννυχίς, and this fills the night. We are thus brought to the next day; an interval is supposed to have elapsed for rest and the ἀριστον; and the celebrations are now continued in special honour of Kore (379), next of Demeter (383), including Iacchus (396), who has been again lodged (after the παννυχίς and during the interval) in his shrine by the meadow. The assumption of a lapse of time has often to be made, and the Frogs, with its frequent changes of scene, especially demands this liberty.

372. χώρει κ.τ.λ. The metre, which is that of a slow and steady march and consists of anapaests entirely spondaic, was affected by the Spartans in their ἐμβατήρια (cf. ἐμβα 377). ἀνδρείως is playfully borrowed from the marching song of war-time: 'march like a man—to the flowery bays.'

373. ἐς τοὺς εὐανθεῖς κόλπους λειμώνων. The absence of art. from λειμώνων is due to the close connexion of κόλπους-λειμώνων into one notion, the gen. being practically an adjective. In such cases the gen. may come between art. and noun, as in Soph. Aj. 664 ἡ βροτῶν παροιμία, or after the noun, as Eur. Bacch. 29 τὴν ἀμαρτίαν Νίχους, El. 368 αἱ φύσεις βροτῶν. [Where there is already a qualification of the noun (as εὐανθεῖς here) the other attributive word (here a gen.) may naturally be expected to follow rather than precede.]

374. ἐγκρούων : cf. ἐγκατακρούων 330 n.

375 sq. ἐπισκώπτων κ.τ.λ. : with reference to the σκώματα and γεφύρισμός at the mysteries. At the same time the chorus is pleading its right of mockery in the theatre. See Lucian Prom. 6 ἡ δὲ (κωμῳδία) παραδοῖσα τῷ Διονίσῳ αὐτὴν θεάτρῳ ὠμίλει καὶ ξυνέπαιζε καὶ ἐγελωτοπολεῖ καὶ ἐπέσκωπτε, and (later) ἐπισκώπτειν καὶ τὴν Διονυσιακὴν ἐλευθερίαν καταχεῖν (τινος).

377. ἡρίσθηται δ' ἐφαρκούντως : cf. Nicostr. ap. Ath. 693 B ικανῶς κεχόρτασμαι γάρ. On the one side it means that the mystic fast has been broken, on the other it introduces a favourite jest. The meals of the Chorus were supplied by the χορηγός, and the appetite of the χορευταί was proverbial (Haigh, Att. Theat. p. 80, where the pertinent authorities are cited). Comedies were performed after the ἀριστον and the Chorus admits that it 'has had not a bad meal.' Cf. 403 sqq. for a similar reference to their clothing as supplied by the χορηγός. That the comedians could jest at their own choruses appears from Suidas (in voc. φαριγλῶδην) σκώπτοντες τὴν γαστριμαργίαν τῶν χορευτῶν Ἀπτικοὶ οἷτω λέγουσι. [The mistake of supposing that the proceedings are still those of night has caused doubts and alterations of the text.]

378. ἀρεῖς, 'uplift (in song),' 'extol' (tollere). Usually a predic. adj. is joined to the verb, e.g. μέγαν, ὑψηλὸν αἶρειν τινά : here the following words give the definition. Cf. Aesch. Pers. 549 κάγῳ δὲ μόρον τῶν οἰχομένων | αἶρω δοκίμως πολυπενθῆ.

379. τὴν Σώτηραν : i.e. Φερρέφαντα (the name specially borne by Kore at Agrae). That Persephone is meant is clear from the following mention of Demeter and Iacchus, and that she bore the title Σώτειρα appears from Paus. 3. 13. 2 καὶ τῆς Κόρης Σωτείρας (in Laconia), 8. 31. 1 (Arcadia), and from coins of Cyzicus. Cf. Aristot. Rhet. 3. 18. 1 τῆς τελευτῆς τῶν τῆς Σωτείρας ἱερῶν.

γενναίως, in 'first-rate' style: cf. 97 n.

381. σφίξω, 'acts as Σώτειρα.' This is better than σώσσω; she says 'I am your preserver for ever.'

Θερυκίων: cf. 363.

382 sq. These two anapaestic tetrameters are spoken (or chanted) by the coryphaeus. The next service is due to Demeter, and the metre is of quite another kind (ἑτέρα ἰδέα) to that of the lines referring to Persephone. The construction is ἑτέραν ὕμνον ἰδέαν κελαδεῖτε, ἐπικοσμοῦντες τὴν κ. β., cf. Pind. V. 4. 26 ὕμνον κελάδησε καλλίνικον. The form θεάν is not part of the language of sheer comedy, but belongs to the higher style admitted outside the trimeter; yet to Persephone at least this form seems to have been peculiarly applied (Meisterhans, All. Insch. § 17 a 4).

The words Δήμητρα θεάν, which are not strictly necessary, lend more solemnity and recognition of greatness: 'the fruit-bringing Queen, Demeter, goddess . . .'

384. ἄγνων: with the same insistence as in 327 n.

387. καὶ μ' ἀσφαλῶς κ.τ.λ. This use of accus. and infin. belongs to the language of prayer, and depends on the thought δὸς or εἴχομαι unexpressed (Kühner-Gerth ii. p. 22). Cf. 887, 892, Aesch. S.c. T. 239 θεοὶ πολῖται, μή με δουλείας τυχεῖν, Ach. 217 ὦ Διόνισε δέσποτα, | κεχαρισμένως σοι τήνδε τὴν πομπὴν ἐμέ | πέμψαντα καὶ θύσαντα μετὰ τῶν οἰκετῶν | ἀγαγεῖν τυχηρῶς τὰ κατ' ἀγροῦς Διονύσια.

Speaking as μίσται they mean 'may I sport and dance without offence towards the goddess and her ritual'; as χορευταὶ of the comedian, 'may I jest without offence (in the eyes of the audience) or danger (from individuals), and dance so as to win the prize.' [An allusion to safety from the Lacedaemonians is also very probable. The position was critical: see Introd. p. xxiii.]

πανήμερον: through the day's ceremonies (1) of the mysteries, (2) of the dramatic performance.

389. πολλὰ μὲν γέλωτα κ.τ.λ.: the maxim of the comedian, who claims a serious purpose. Cf. Plut. Mor. 68 π ἐπεὶ καὶ τοῖς κωμικοῖς πολλὰ πρὸς τὸ θέατρον αἰσθηρὰ καὶ πολιτικὰ ἐπεποιήτα.

392. παίσαντα . . νικήσαντα ταινιοῦσθαι, '(grant that) after jesting . . I may gain the victory and be honoured with the fillet.' For the combination of participles cf. Aesch. S. c. T. 3 οἶακα νωμῶν βλέφαρα μὴ κοιμῶν ἔπνῳ, Plat. Rep. 386δ Α λισσόμενοι ὑπερβαίνοντες καὶ ἀμαρτάνοντες πείθοντες αὐτοῖς ἀξήμιοι ἀπαλλάξομεν. i.e. πείθοντες αὐτοῖς λισσόμενοι (= τῷ λίσσεσθαι) ὑπερβαίνοντες (= ὅποτεν ὑπερβαίνωμεν).

393. ταινιοῦσθαι. The ταινία was a band or ribbon bound round the head of the victor, while the ends floated behind like streamers. In art it figures at full length in the hands of Nike. [Though this proceeding relates to the chorus in the theatre, there is at least a probability that even in the σκώμματα and παίγματα of the mysteries there was some recognition of pre-eminence.]

395. ῥαῖον: cf. Catull. 61. 251 florens . . Iacchus, Ov. Met. 4. 17 (of Bacchus = Iacchus) tu puer acerbuss, tu formosissimus.

396. τὸν ξυνέμπορον: i.e. who is (always) the (recognised) companion, etc.

397. μέλος ἰορτῆς ἡδιστον εὐρών, 'discoverer of the sweetest festal tune' (not: τῆσδε τῆς ἰορτῆς, for which at least the article would be required). The tune which Iacchus invented (viz. the Iacchus-song) is called the most grateful or welcome tune known at any festival.

400. πρὸς τὴν θεὸν: Persephone, to whose shrine they are proceeding.

401. ἄνευ πόνου κ.τ.λ. Iacchus is but a babe, and the journey is, therefore, relatively πολλή. Nevertheless he is a god, and the gods know no πόνος: cf. Hes. Op. 112, Eur. Phoen. 689 πάντα δ' εὐπετὴ θεοῖς, Lucr. 5. 1182 nullum eumque iunctum inde laborem. [Probably the expression was actually used each year when the start was made from the Iaccheum, whether to Eleusis or to Agrae.]

404. κατεσχίσσω μὲν . ., 'didst cause to be slit up.' There can hardly be a reference to the σχιστὸς χιτῶν or the shoes called σχιστάι, since these were neither ridiculous nor necessarily cheap. The allusion is rather to the old clothes which were worn (1) at mysteries (as was natural in view of the παίγματα and the night-revels), (2) frequently in the comic chorus. In the latter τὸ γέλοιον was of course consulted, but an economical χορηγός took advantage of that requirement, when he could, to supply his Chorus with hired dresses which had seen much service (Haigh, Att. Theat. p. 83). The chorus here hits satirically at this practice. Iacchus 'had our clothes slit up to create laughter—not to mention economy!' σανδαλίσκον ('bit of a sandal') and ράκος ('rag') are humorous disparagement; these things do not deserve the name of 'shoes' and 'clothes.'

κατασχίσσω μὲν . . κάξηύρες. If this reading is correct we have an instance of μὲν answered irregularly by καί (Kühner-Gerth ii. p. 271, who quote e.g. Hom. Il. 9. 53, Od. 9. 49, Xen. Cyr. 1. 4. 3). But one best MS. has κατασχίσσω μὲν . . ἐξήύρες and Kock's κατασχισάμενος . . ἐξήύρες is highly probable.

407. ἀζημίους, 'without loss' (through expense in things spoilt, but with the further suggestion of dramatic impunity in the matter of persons or things mocked).

414. ἐγὼ δ' αἶψά πως κ.τ.λ. The speaker, attracted by the last words, exclaims 'I'm in a general way rather given to escorting (taking up συνακολούθει), and I should like to dance, playing the while.' For the expression cf. Eur. Hipp. 666 αἶψά γάρ οἱ πῶς εἰσι κάκειναί κακά. The sense of πως, though it qualifies αἶψά, is felt with the adj. also. With another order Plut. 240 ἐγὼ δὲ τούτου τοῦ τρόπου πῶς εἰμ' αἶψά.

But who is the speaker? Some mss. give the words to Xanthias; editors commonly assign them to Dionysus, but some to prominent persons in the Chorus (which appears less natural). A sufficiently humorous situation is created if, when the attractions of the procession become manifest, the travellers are eager to take part. The lines being attributed as in the text, we may assume either (1) that Di. and Xa. speak them aside, or (2) that they advance and speak so that the μίστραι can hear. In the latter case we may take this as a suggestion of the γεφυρισμός proper, in which the spectators bandied jests with the procession. The next words of the Chorus would then be addressed to the two travellers, and both δῆτα and κοινῇ would lose nothing in appropriateness, while οὖν (422) would perhaps gain. Perhaps it is best to suppose that the two come forward with a display of lively eagerness.

[The mss. have μετ' αὐτῆς at the end of v. 414. For metrical reasons either these words must be omitted or their equivalent in scansion must be added to the next line so as to create a couplet of iambic tetrameters. The addition might take the shape of κἀγωγε (<βούλομαι> πρὸς or κἀγωγε πρὸς, <σάφ' ἴσθι>). But it is not easy to see why the loss should occur, whereas the addition of both εἰμι and αὐτῆς (adscript) might be foreseen if the original were the trimeters Δ1. ἐγὼ δ' αἶψά πως

ΞΑ. κἀγωγε πρὸς.]

416. βούλεισθε δῆτα . . . : spoken by the coryphaeus, 'pray, would you like . . . ?' cf. Ar. 1689 βούλεισθε δῆτ' ἐγὼ τέως | ὅπτῳ τὰ κρέα ταυτὶ μένων; If addressed to his fellow choreutae, κοινῇ = 'all together,' i.e. not jesting at one another but all alike turning on Archedemus (cf. Lys. 1042). If to Di. and Na. after their desire to 'join in,' it = 'Would you then like to join us in . . . ?' [The γεφυρισμός (cf. τὰ ἐξ ἀμάξης and the στήνια of the Thesmophoria) was a free use of rough banter, chiefly at the Cephissus bridge as the procession passed to Eleusis (Strab. 9. 400 and see Sikes-Allen on Hom. Hym. 2. 195), but of course employed in similar cases and other festivals at other bridges (e.g. over the Ilissus), and thence generically. A bridge was a convenient standing-place, since everyone must pass. γεφυρίζειν thence becomes = σκωπτικῶς ὑβρίζειν.]

417. Ἀρχέδημον: mentioned by Xenophon (Hell. 1. 7. 2) as ὁ τοῦ δήμου προεστῆκώς καὶ τῆς διωξέας ἐπιμελόμενος at the time of the battle of Arginusae, by Lysias (14. 25) as γλάμων (inf. 588) and an embezzler of public money when Alcibiades was a youth, and by Aeschines (de F. Leg. 76) as a corrupter of the people by largesses. As the accuser of Erasinides (inf. 1195) he was naturally suffering much odium at the date of the Frogs.

418. ἐπτέτης δὲ οὐκ ἔφυσε φράτερας. The last word is a punning παρὰ προσδοκίαν pronounced with a drawl, as if it were to be φραστήρας (sc. ὀδόντας). These were the second teeth, which came at seven years of age; cf. Solon, Elcg. 25. 1 παῖς μὲν ἀνηλθὸς ἐὼν ἔτι νήπιος ἔρκος ὀδόντων | φισας ἐκβάλλει πρῶτον ἐν ἔπτ' ἔτεσιν. So wisdom-teeth are called σωφρονιστήρες or κρανητήρες. For 'had not grown (his) second teeth' the comedian substitutes 'had not grown (his) clansmen,' i.e. he was no legitimate Athenian. [Such charges were very common; cf. 679 n.] A similar expression occurs in Ar. 764 εἰ δὲ δοῦλός ἐστι καὶ Κὰρ ὥσπερ Ἐξηκεστιδῆς, | φισάτω πάπποις παρ' ἡμῖν καὶ φανοῦνται φράτερες. Every true-born citizen was registered in early childhood in the φρατερικὸν γραμματεῖον of a φρατρία, i.e. in a division of a tribe which claimed a common descent and a share in a peculiar worship of special clan-divinities. A citizen by adoption of the people (δημοποίητος), but originally a foreigner or a slave, had not passed through this enrolment, but, upon his adoption, he was admitted to a φρατρία with a limited recognition (Dict. Ant. i. p. 905).

however (e.g. Steph. Byz.), tell us that φράτηρ is the Attic form, and this answers to frater and to e.g. πατήρ, μήτηρ, θυγάτηρ. Attic inscriptions always show -τηρ (Meisterhans², p. 103).]

420. ἐν τοῖς ἄνω νεκροῖσι: (1) by a surprise for ζῶσι, implying that the Athenians are stupid enough to be dead. Aristoph. elsewhere calls them πρόβατα, and νεκροί were more helpless still; cf. Sen. Ep. 60 quosdam ne animalium quidem sed mortuorum loco numeramus (quoted by Blaydes); (2) there may also be a reference to the famous lines of Euripides τίς οἶδεν εἰ τὸ ζῆν μὲν ἐστὶ κατθανεῖν, | τὸ κατθανεῖν δὲ ζῆν κἀντὼ νομίζεται; (3) meanwhile ἄνω perhaps alludes to the Pnyx and its stupid deliberations (cf. ἄνω καθῆσθαι). It is quite in keeping with the condensing genius of Aristoph. to suggest all these notions at once. [A reference to 'making political capital out of the dead at Arginusae' is not likely.]

μοχθηρίας: instead of an expected δημαγωγίας or πολιτείας (schol.); more antithetical, perhaps, σοφίας or ἀρετῆς.

431. ἔχοιτ' ἄν οὖν κ.τ.λ.: οὖν is somewhat difficult if Dionysus has not already addressed the mystae. Possibly, however, it may be a conversational idiom, 'Well now (when you have said your say), could you tell us . . .'

432. ὅπου 'νθάδ', 'where hereabouts': cf. Soph. Phil. 16 σκοπεῖν θ' ὅπου 'στ' ἐνταῦθα δίστομος πέτρα | τοιάδ'.

433. ξένω γάρ κ.τ.λ.: a line of tragic rhythm and delivered in appropriate tone. This and line 436 are perhaps taken directly from some tragedy, the latter being quoted again in Plut. 962.

435. μηδ' αὖθις ἐπανάρη: because there is no need.

437. αἶποι' ἄν: sc. τὰ στρώματα: cf. 502.

438. μ. τί ἦν: 39 n. ἀλλ' ἦ: 227.

Διὸς Κόρινθος: a proverb (cf. Eccl. 828, Pind. N. 7. 104) for nauseating repetition. Xanthias is tired of hearing nothing but αἶποι' ἄν. The origin of the expression is thus explained: A Corinthian envoy, calling upon the Megarians for certain claims, kept repeating that ὁ Διὸς Κόρινθος (legendary founder of Corinth) would have reason to be vexed if the claims were not met. Weary of the threat the Megarians shouted παῖε τὸν Διὸς Κόρινθον, and expelled him with blows.

But Xa. is also punning upon the insect (κόρις) which was the plague of Greek bedding. These are humorously called 'Corinthians' in Λυβ. 709 ἐκ τοῦ σκίμποδος | δάκνουσί μ' ἐξέρποντες οἱ Κορίνθιοι. [That στρώματα were especially manufactured at Corinth appears irrelevant].

440 σγ. χωρεῖτε νῦν . . We have reached a new stage in the proceedings. The κύκλος is the sacred enclosure (περίβολος), within which was the ἄλσος or 'lawn,' θεά being Persephone. The priest himself chooses the better part (444 sq.).

445. παννυχίζουσιν θεῶ: the dat. of the recipient of honour. Cf. Λυσ. 1277 ὀρχησάμενοι θεοῖσιν, Λυβ. 271 ἱερὸν χορὸν ἱστατε Νύμφαις, Xen. Hell. 4. 3. 21 στεφανοῦσθαι τῷ θεῷ. The order is οἷσιν φέγγος οὐ π. θ. They are not actually now at the παννυχis, but he will go with them to the usual place and will carry a torch when they revel this evening. Neil (Eq. 1319) shows that φέγγος is particularly used of mystic lights.

448. πολυρρόδους. There were several species of wild rose in Greece as well as the cultivated rose; but the word is apparently used in a wider sense than with us. In any case the ῥόδον is the typical flower (τιθῆναι ἱερὸς ἐκπρεπέστατος Chacremont, fr. 13). To the happy meadows of the μύσται (and presumably of Agrae) the expression is appropriate (cp. Prop. 4. 7. 60 mulet ubi Elysias aura brata rosas).

450. τὸν ἡμέτερον . . ξυνάγουσιν, 'sporting in our (own special) manner, the manner of loveliest dance, which (our) happy fortunes bring together,' i.e. we are blest by the dispensation of fate, which permits us to join together (here) in our dance, the finest of all dances that are. While the other departed dwell in gloom, the initiated are uniquely happy, in that they are able to meet thus in a region of special light.

ξυνάγουσιν = ξυνάγειν ἡμᾶς ποιοῖσιν (or ἐῷσιν) and ὀλβιαί μοῖραι are virtually personified (as if = ὀλβιοδόται μοῖραι). Cf. Ac. 1731 Ἦρ' ποτ' Ὀλυμπία | . . ἀρχοντα . . μέγαν | Μοῖραι ξυνεκόμισαν. There is a slight laxity in δν, which implies a previous χοροῦ in place of καλλιχορώτατον.

There is meanwhile an allusion to the present Chorus, which has a peculiar and excellent manner of dance and wit, happily put together and deserving of the prize.

454. μόνους γὰρ ἡμῖν . . : cf. 156 n., Soph. fr. 753 τρισόλβιοι | κείνοι βροτῶν, οἱ ταῦτα δερχθέντες τέλη | μόλωσ' ἐς Ἄλιδου· τοῖσδε γὰρ μόνους ἐκεῖ | ζῆν ἐστι, τοῖς δ' ἄλλοις πάντ' ἐκεῖ κακά.

457. διήγομεν : viz. when on earth.

458. περὶ τοὺς ξένους καὶ τοὺς ἰδιώτας: (1) the formulae of the mysteries in all probability insisted on εἰσέβεια towards ξένοι and (e.g.) the helpless; (2) the Choruses in Aristophanic comedy do not attack ξένοι and 'private citizens'; they confine themselves to legitimate satire of public characters. Other comedians, it is hinted, may be less scrupulous. As usual, an expression appropriate to the μίσται is deftly applied to the play, with a παρὰ προσδοκίαν in ἰδιώτας. [That ἰδιώτας should = πολίτας in opposition to ξένους is impossible. Nor can there be any natural reference to the Spartan ξενία.]

460. The scene has changed only to the extent that the door (cf. 436) now appears, and the travellers approach it. The chorus is still close by (see 532).

462. οὐ μὴ διατρίψης, ἀλλὰ κ.τ.λ.: see 202 n.

γέσσει = πειράσσει, a humorous application of the verb, which is, however, frequent enough as a metaphor with words like πόνου, κινδύνου, or of blessings (ἐλευθερίας, etc.). Nearest to the present place is Soph. Ant. 1005 εὐθὺς δὲ δεισας ἐμπύρων ἐγειρόμην.

463. τὸ σχῆμα καὶ τὸ λῆμα. 'look and pluck.' λῆμα is not a word of common life or prose. Here its use is determined by the jingle (which assists the sarcasm); cf. Ach. 269 μαχῶν καὶ λαμάχων, and (more seriously) Plat. Menc. 238 n δουλῶν κτησίν τε καὶ χρῆσιν.

Aeacus is represented as the (slave) doorkeeper; cf. Luc. Dial. Mort. 20. 1 οἶδα σέ, ὅτι πύλωρεῖς (Menippus to Aeacus, who is acting as his περιηγητής in Hades). In works of art he was depicted as carrying the keys. [The usual account, however, makes him one of the three judges in Hades, his special province (according to Plato) being to deal with Europeans.] His manners are typical of the θυρωρός (39 n.), although here his anger has its excuse.

Ἡρακλῆς ὁ καρτερός: said with an air and an attitude. καρτερός is itself a word of the higher style.

465-479. The whole of this speech is more or less a travesty of some tragic passage. The scholia tell us vaguely that the original was in the Theseus of Euripides; others suspect it to have been in the Perithous (or rather Perithous), in which Theseus is engaged, but which is quite a different play. We know hardly anything of the Theseus, except that it was concerned with the Minotaur expedition, whereas the Perithous deals with the expedition of Perithous and Theseus to Hades, and includes the descent of Herakles to fetch Cerberus. [The play was sometimes attributed to Critias.] In antiquity dramas are not rarely cited under wrong or alternative names, and the probabilities are evidently in favour of the Perithous.

465 sq. ὦ βδελυρὲ κ.τ.λ. = 'You shameless, impudent, audacious creature; You wretch, you utter wretch, you prince of wretches.' All the words (including βδελυρὲ; cf. Ach. 289, Theoph. Char. 11, Plat. Rep. 338 D) express shamelessness. The accumulation of abuse is paralleled in Pac. 182; cf. fr. 92. Similarly Hamlet says, 'O villain, villain; smiling, damned villain!' A final σὺ is part of the phrase in such cases. [See Introil. p. lv.]

467. τὸν κύν' ἡμῶν: as Aeacus is the θυρωρός, so Cerberus is the house-dog, which was under the care of the porter and was kept in the πρόθυρον or in the porter's lodge; cf. El. 1025 and Theoc. 15. 43 τὰν λύν' ἔσω κάλεισον, τὰν αὐλείαν ἀπόκλαξον.

468. ἀπῆξας . . λαβών: the tautology of grievance, the metre also being tragic in its indignation.

469. ἐγὼ: hence the special vexation, 'I was responsible for him.'

ἔχει μέσος: a frequent metaphor from wrestling; cf. Λυκ. 1017 εὐθὺς γάρ σ' ἔχω μέσον | λαβὼν ἀφυκτον ('I have you on the hip').

470. τοῖα κ.τ.λ.: τοῖα (for τοιαύτη) shows that tragic diction is beginning.

Στυγὸς . . πέτρα: the real Styx (of which a copy was transferred by the imagination to Hades) was a lonely and gloomy waterfall in N. Arcadia, near Nonacris. The precipice of the Aroanian mountains from which it fell is the sheerest and highest in Greece, and is extremely forbidding. The water itself was (and still is) considered to be deadly, whence a modern name Μαυρανέρια, 'Black Waters.' The notion in μελανοκάρδιος is that of a thing black and hard to the core. The blackness is that of iron (Hes. Op. 151 μέλας δ' οὐκ ἔσκε σίδηρος), the unbending; cf. Pind. fr. 88 δε μὴ πόθω κυμαίνεται, ἐξ ἀδάμαντος | ἢ σιδάρον κεχάλκεται μέλαιναν καρδίαν.

472. περίδρομοι κύνες: the Furies, who are 'dogging' or 'hunting' fiends; cf. Aesch. Cho. 923, Eucl. 246, Soph. El. 1387 μετὰδρομοι κακῶν πανουργημάτων | ἀφυκτοι κύνες. [But there is also an allusion (cf. 477) to γυναῖκες περίδρομοι (Theogn. 581), 'wantons,' who are κύνες as being shameless, and Κωκυτοῦ κύνες as being ruinous.]

473. Ἐχίδνα : the monster of Hesiod, Theog. 298 ἡμισυ μὲν σύμφην ἰλικώπιδα καλλιπάρηον, | ἡμισυ δ' αὖτε πύλωνος ἔφην δεινὸν τε μέγαν τε. There is no record that she was hundred-headed (an epithet of Typhon), but poets were free in such inventions. [In Eur. II. N. 883, where Γοργῶν Λύσσα employs ἐκατοσκέφαλα ὀφείων ἰαχήματα, the notion is simply of a hundred snakes hissing about her.]

475. Ταρτησία μύραινα : this sounds as if it should be something very terrible. Ταρτησία (with delay on the first part) suggests Ταρταρεία 'of Hell,' and in one of its senses μύραινα was a venomous sea-snake, between lamprey and viper, whose very touch might mortify; cf. Aesch. Cho. 992 τί σοι δοκεῖ; μύραινά γ' εἶτ' ἐχίδν' ἔφην, | σήπειν θιγοῖσ' ἄν; Ath. 312 B. With the usual condensation of Aristophanes the words suggest yet another notion. Tartessus (i.e. southern Spain about the mouth of the Guadalquivir), and particularly Cadiz, was notorious for vice, and a 'Tartesian bloodsucker' was a shameless woman (cf. γαλή Ταρτησία and the explanation of Phot. 280. 7 that μύραινα is a by-word for καταφερής, from the habits of the animal).

Meanwhile, however, μύραινα is the lamprey, of which the choicest came from Tartessus (Poll. 6. 63, Anl. Gell. 6. 16. 5). Dionysus is, therefore,—if he chooses to take it so—threatened with 'luscious lampreys.' But he is already in such a state of terror that the very sound is sufficient.

477. Γοργόνες Τειθράσαι : we do not know what adj. stood in the parodied original. Λιβυστικάι would suit the Gorgons, but bears no resemblance to Τειθράσαι. Tradition placed them variously—in the remote west, in Africa, or in Hades (Hom. Od. 11. 633). In any case Aristoph. substitutes creatures equally terrible, viz. women of the Attic deme of Teithras, who must have been of low repute.

478. ἔφ' ἄς, 'to fetch whom.' The line is fully tragic in both metre and language. ὀρμήσω is most probably intrans. with cogn. accusative; cf. Eur. Alc. 1153 νόστιμον δ' ἔλθοις πόδα. Such expression is favoured in tragedy, and the comedian makes the most of it. The same construction should be assumed in Soph. Aj. 370 οὐκ ἄπορρον ἐκνεμῇ πόδα; ibid. 40 πρὸς τί δυσλόγηστον ὧδ' ἦξεν χέρα; 42 ποίμναις τήνδ' ἐπεμπίπτει βάσιν, etc.

479. Dionysus collapses. He has a sinking in the pit of his stomach, is fainting, and requires refreshing with a sponge.

481. τίνα . . ἄλλότριον, 'some stranger' (not one of ourselves).

482. οἶσε: a unique form of Imperat. for Attic Greek (viz. with ο from an σ-aorist). This common colloquial word has alone retained a formation which was once common (Brugmann Gk. Gramm. p. 319, § 378).

πρὸς τὴν καρδίαν: apparently the usual place to apply the cold water in cases of fainting. When the old man in I. esp. 995 is about to faint he cries οἶμοι, ποῦ 'σθ' ἔδωρ;

483. προσθεῖ, 'apply it (to yourself).' The word must be said by Xanthias; as an order of Di. it would have been πρίσθες. For a good example of the difference of voice cf. Eg. 1227 καταθεῖ ταχέως τὸν στέφανον, ἵν' ἐγὼ τοιτῷ | αὐτὸν περθεῖ.

ποῦ 'στιν; viz. the sponge. On receiving it, he does not apply it to his heart, but lower.

485. εἰς τὴν κάτω μου κοιλίαν: it is a rule of Greek that, when a simple noun and article are used with αὐτοῦ, ὕμῳ, ἡμῶν, αὐτῶν, these words either follow the noun or precede the article; i.e. ἡ μου κοιλία is not Greek for ἡ κοιλία μου or μου ἡ κοιλία. The mss. of Aristoph. give one instance to the contrary, viz. Lys. 417 τῆς μου γυναικός, which all editors reject for τῆς γυναικός μου. But the rule does not apply to a case like the present, in which another qualifying word comes between art. and subst.; cf. Thuc. 1. 144 τὰς οἰκίας ἡμῶν ἀμαρτίας, Plat. Symp. 189 D ἡ πάλαι ἡμῶν φύσις.

486. ὦ δειλότατε θεῶν σὺ κἀνθρώπων: in addressing a human being Xa. would have said δειλότατε ἀνθρώπων. With a laughable novelty he is obliged to say θεῶν, but he adds—'and (for the matter of that) of men.' No human being could be worse. But he is led to this by a reminiscence of e.g. ὦ θεῶν τύραννε κἀνθρώπων Ἔρως.

487. πῶς δειλὸς κ.τ.λ.: i.e. to call for a sponge means a desire to fight it out.

490. ἀπεψήσάμην: cf. Eg. 572 (after one fell) τοῖτ' ἀπεψήσαντ' ἄν, εἰτ' ἤρνοιντο μὴ πεπτωκέναι.

491. ἀνδρεῖά γ': sc. πεπαιηκας or εἰρηκας. The γε is regular in such brachylogy (which is not always sarcastic); cf. Eg. 609 δεινὰ γ', ὦ Πόσειδον, Eur. I. T. 619 ἀζηλὰ γ', ὦ νεᾶνι.

494. ληματιῶς, 'have an itch for pluck.' The termination -ιῶν is used of morbid desires (μαθητιῶν, στρατηγιῶν) or conditions (ὀφθαλμιῶν, ραιτιῶν). But adj.-nouns in -ίας often express similar affections or dispositions. It matters little, therefore, whether we read ληματιῶς or ληματίας. In either case there is probably a pun upon λημᾶν, λήμη, the bear-eyed condition of ὀφθαλμία, the coward's excuse (192 n.). Dionysus sneers at the pretended courage of his slave.

498. φέρε δὴ ταχέως αὐτ', 'come on! quick with them!' (sc. the club and skin), elliptical for φέρε, δὸς αὐτά. [That αὐτά should mean τὰ σκεῖη, understood from σκευοφόρος, is a less likely answer, though by no means impossible in construction (cf. 1025, 1456). Moreover, he would say λαβέ, not φέρε.]

499. τὸν Ἡρακλειοξανθίαν, 'the Heraklised Xanthias,' 'Xanthias à la Herakles'; cf. μειξόλεικος = μεικτῶς λεικός, γλυκύπικρος = γλυκῶς πικρός. Doubtless there is also a suggestion of a combined statue of two deities on one pedestal, like Ἑρμαθήνη, Ἑρμηρακλῆς, Ζηνοποσειδῶν, etc. But for this directly the formation should be Ἡρακλεοξανθίαν. It is not out of the question that the comedian should venture on Ἡρακλειο-, but it is not necessary to assume this, and the sense is less good.

501. μὰ Δι': sc. οὐ δεῖλός ἔσει, 'certainly you won't, but you will be really and truly the Melitean—(hero).'

οὐκ Μελίτης μαστιγίας: the last word is a surprise for, e.g., ἥρω or ἀλεξικάκος (the proper title of Herakles in his temple at Melito (38 n.)). The expression forms an equation with Ἡρακλειοξανθίας, the 'Heraklised X.' being paraphrased by the 'Melitean rascal.' But there must be some further point, and οὐκ Μελίτης alludes to some well-known person. According to the schol. this was the licentious Callias, who lived in Melite and who wore a lion's skin à la Herakles in battle (a practice referred to by Aristoph. in 428-430 of the full text of this play. Καλλίας . . φασὶ . . λεοντὴν ναυμαχεῖν ἐνημμένον).

505. ἔπειτεν, 'set about cooking.' Persephone acts like the ordinary Athenian house-mistress, who herself does or directs the cooking, except for the special dinner-parties, when professional μάγειροι were engaged from the Agora.

κατερυκτῶν χύτρας ἔτρουε, 'pots of soup made of ground pulse.' No definite noun need be supplied, but δσπρίων or πίσων would come nearest; cf. fr. 88 ἔπειτ' ἔρειξον ἐπιβαλοῦσ' ὁμοῖ πῖσιν, Colum. 2. 10. 35 cicera frum. For the fondness of Herakles for ἔτρος cf. 62 n. [The spelling of μασ. varies between ἐρυκτῶν and ἐρικτῶν, and the question (as with στιπτός στειπτός) can hardly be settled. On the one side we have ἀλειπτός, ζευκτός, μεικτός, δεικτός, and on the other πιστός, ἄφικτοι. The rule is for the diphthong to be retained, but probably both forms were often in use.]

507. κολλάβους. 'scones' or 'rolls' (μικροὶ ἀρτίσχοι schol. Pac. 1196). One comic fragm. describes them as γαλακτοχρῶτες. It is best to mark an aprosiopesis. The maid is describing with gusto, but on reaching κολλάβους she thinks it useless to continue the catalogue, and cuts herself short with —ἀλλ' εἰσιθεῖ. This accounts for the apparent abruptness of the single word. [Those who have felt this abruptness have joined πλακοῦντας κολλάβους (cf. βοῦς ταῦρος and 207 n.); but κόλλαβοι are apparently not πλακοῦντες.]

508. κάλλιςτ', ἐπαινῶ: a polite refusal (made to tease Dionysus). Xa. is acting up to his new dignity. For 'No, thank you' Greek said also καλῶς or (512) πάνυ καλῶς (sc. λέγεις = 'you are very kind'), and καλῶς ἔχει or κάλλιςτ' ἔχει (sc. μοι = 'I am quite content'). With κάλλιςτ' here we must supply λέγεις, not ἔχει, which cannot be omitted. Latin says benigne (Hor. Ep. 1. 7. 16, 62), but its nearest equivalent to κάλλιςτ', ἐπαινῶ is bene (rocus), tum gratia est (Plaut. Men. 2. 3. 36).

508 sq. μὰ τὸν Ἀπόλλω οὐ μὴ . . . περιόψομαι πελθόντα: for these strong instances of synecphonesis and crasis see Introd. p. xlii. For περιορῶ with aor. participle see Goodwin, M. and T. § 148. In ultimate analysis the phrase = ἐὰν ἀπέλθῃ, σὶ περιόψομαι.

510. τραγήματα = τρογάλια. bellarin, 'dessert,' including fruits (walnuts, chestnuts, figs, beans, etc.) and sweetmeats. φρύγειν ('roast') refers to the fruits.

512. ἄμ' ἐμοί: the form ἐμοί is pleading ('to please me').

513 αὐλητρίδες: flute-players and dancing-girls come in at the πύτος or symposium.

515. ἑτεραι differs from ἄλλαι ('as well') by implying opposition or comparison. These women are different, a second set, with other points and performance.

πῶς λέγεις; ὀρχηστρίδες; It spoils the attitude if these words are read as surprised and eager. They are said in a reflective manner, as if, after all, the matter were worth considering: 'Ah, dancers, eh?' or 'H'm! dancing-girls!'

518. ἀφαιρεῖν: sc. from the fire, as we say 'take off (the kettle)', or from the spits (ὀβελοί, ὀβελίσκοι); cf. Ach. 1119 and ἀφέλκειν (ibid. 1005 ἀναβράττετ', ἐξοπτᾶτε, τρέπετ', ἀφέλκετε | τὰ λαγῶα ταχέως).

ἡ τράπεζα: not αἱ τράπεζαι; there is to be no dinner-party, but only a meal for Herakles.

εἰσέφερετο = εἰσεφέρετο. The word αἶρειν = φέρειν was commonly applied to the light tables, which were lifted up and carried in at the beginning of a meal, removed again for the sweeping before the πότος, and once more brought in. But colloquially (in the imperative especially) αἶρειν was synonymous with φέρειν in certain phrases by survival of an old use. Cf. Pac. 1 αἶρ' αἶρε μᾶζαν ὡς τάχος τῷ καθάρῳ, Pherecr. fr. πεταλ. 7 πρόσαιρε τὸ καοῦν, εἰ δὲ βοῖλει, πρόσφερε, Soph. Aj. 545 αἶρ' αὐτῶν, αἶρε δεῦρο.

519-520. πρώτιστα: other matters may hide their time. The pompous fulness of expression in ταῖς ὀρχηστρίσιν ταῖς ἐνδον οὖσαις should be noted: 'your said dancing-girls, who are within.'

ὅτι εἰσέρχομαι: for the hiatus see Introd. p. xlii.

522. σπουδὴν ποιεῖ, 'take it in earnest'; cf. ὀργὴν ποιεῖσθαι = ὀργίζεσθαι and the like. But here ποιεῖσθαι bears more obviously the frequent mental sense 'consider' (cf. συμφορὰν π., δεινὸν π.). [The support of the mss., however, is in favour of σπουδὴν ποιεῖς, and this is quite possible in the purely objective sense 'you are making it into (forcing it to be) real earnest.']

523. σε . . Ἡρακλέα ἐνσκεύασα, 'dressed you up as Herakles'; cf. Ach. 383 ἐδάσατε ἐνσκευάσασθαι μ' ὁδὸν ἀθλιώτατον. So far as ἐνσκευάζω differs from σκευάζω it is in the limitations of the former, which is applied only to dress and equipment, while the latter is used also of preparing food, etc. [Ach. 1096 is recognised as corrupt.]

For the construction (Ἡρακλέα proleptic) cf. Ach. 739 χοίρωι . . ὑμεῖς σκευάσαι. It is identical with e.g. παιδεύειν τινὰ σοφόν (= ὥστε σοφὸν εἶναι).

527. οὐ τάχ', ἀλλ' ἤδη ποιῶ = 'I'm not going to do it; I'm doing it'; cf. Eur. Supp. 551 εἰτιχοῦσι δὲ | οἱ μὲν τάχ', οἱ δ' ἐσαῦθις, οἱ δ' ἤδη βροτῶν.

528. ταῦτ' ἐγὼ μαρτύρομαι . . ἐπιτρέπω: the language (including the formal ἐγὼ) is legal. The loosely constructed ταῦτα with μαρτύρομαι recurs in Plut. 932. Usually we have either μαρτύρομαι τινα, 'call to witness' (analestari), or μ. ὅτι (Nub. 1222). But neut. pronouns (originally internal accus.) are rather freely used where English would say (1) 'herein,' e.g. τοῦτο χαίρω, ταῦτα πείθεις με; cf. inf. 703, 748 n., or (2) 'therefore'; cf. Nub. 318 ταῦτ' ἄρ' . . ἡ ψυχὴ μου πεπόνηται, Soph. O. T. 1005 τοῦτ' ἀφικόμεν, ὅπως . . εὖ πράξαιμί τι.

529. ποίοις θεοῖς; a familiar form of retort; cf. Nub. 367. 'What gods (are you talking about)?' = 'Gods, indeed!' Dionysus can mock-mock an appeal to his like.

530. τὸ δὲ προσδοκῆσαι σ' κ.τ.λ. It is doubtful whether we should take this as simply = οὐκ ἀνόητον δὲ καὶ κενόν ἐστὶ τὸ προσδοκῆσαι σε, ὥς . . ; or, more vigorously, and perhaps more in keeping with the order of the words, as an exclamation, τὸ δὲ προσδοκῆσαι σε . . ὥς broken by a parenthetical explosion οὐκ ἀν. καὶ κενόν: i.e. 'But the idea of your expecting—Isn't it ridiculous?—that you. . .' The exclamatory infin. may either take the article, as inf. 741, Nub. 268 (τὸ δὲ μηδὲ κινήν . . ἐλθεῖν ἐμέ . . ἔχοντα), or not.

531. ὥς δοῦλος κ.τ.λ. A tragic line, and probably a quotation. The art. is not required (i.e. ἀλκμήνης), the sense being 'a son of Alcmena.'

532. ἀμείλι, καλῶς· ἔχ' αὐτ': sulkily: 'Never mind! all right! take 'em.' αὐτ' (cf. 498) is probably for αὐτά (sc. τὸ δέρμα καὶ τὸ ρόπαλον) rather than αὐτό (sc. τὸ δέρμα of 528).

533. ἐμοῦ δεηθείης ἂν κ.τ.λ.: another tragic line, but θέλοι is good Attic for ἐθέλοι in this particular phrase (see Introd. p. xxxvi). Elsewhere, unless in parody, it is rare. Yet cf. Eq. 713 ἐγὼ δ' ἐκείνου καταγελῶ γ' ὅσον θέλω, Lys. 1216.

534. ταῦτα μὲν: there is no answer to μὲν, since δὲ of 538 only carries on the same notion.

νοῦν ἔχοντος καὶ φρένας. It is only in this combination that φρήν is a word of ordinary life. Cf. Thesm. 291. Orators sometimes use it in their higher style (see Rutherford, New Phryn. p. 9).

535. πολλὰ περιπεπλευκός = 'one who knows his way about.' Much experience teaches the modern traveller (particularly the commercial) how to make himself comfortable in trains, ships, or hotels. Long journeys among the Greeks were chiefly by sea. There may be an allusion to the πολύτροπος or πολίμητις Ὀδυσσεύς (ὅς μάλ' ἀπολλὰ πλάγχθη Hom. (Hl. init.)), but we need not press it; cf. 1113.

536. μετακυλίνδων. It is disputed whether Attic writers used κυλινδέω = κυλίνδω, and some assert that κυλίνδω is the only active form, while in the middle the choice is between κυλίνδομαι and καλινδοῦμαι. But this dictum can only be upheld by considerable and arbitrary changes of Mss. See Kühner-Blass ii. p. 453 against e.g. Collet (N. L. 454, 459, 637). Still καλινδω is the better supported for Aristophanic dialogue.

537. πρὸς τὸν εὖ πρᾶττοντα τοῖχον, 'to the comfortable side (of the ship)'; cf. Eur. fr. 89 Σθένελλον εἰς τὸν εὖτυχῇ | χωροῦντα τοῖχον, Or. 895 ἐπὶ τὸν εὖτυχῇ (sc. τοῖχον) | πηδῶσ' αἰεὶ κήρυκες.

γεγραμμένην εἰκόν': like the English 'a graven image.' The notion is of lifelessness. Blaydes quotes Hamlet 2. 2 So like a painted tyrant Purrhus stood, | And, like a neutral to his will and matter, | Did nothing. Cf. Aesch. Ag. 253, ἀνδράντας ἀφωνότερος.

541. Θηραμένους, 'and a natural—Theramenes,' an effective παρὰ προσδοκίαν for e.g. φρονίμου; cf. 363 Θωρεκίων ὦν. Theramenes, called the κόθορος (the boot which fits either foot), was treated by his opponents as a political weathercock. Modern historians are, however, inclined to regard him rather as the most far-seeing statesman of the day. In 411 B.C. he was one of the revolutionaries who established the 400 with the understanding that the number of voters in the constitution should be 5000. Finding that a narrow oligarchy was being threatened, he worked for the recognition of the 5000, and assisted the overthrow of the 400 and the subsequent restoration of the democracy. In 406 B.C. he was a trierarch at the battle of Arginusae, and, among the charges and counter-charges between generals and captains, he became a prominent accuser of the generals. [The truth of the Arginusae matter will probably never be known.] His connexion with the oligarchy of 401 B.C. and his temperate behaviour in it belong to the year after this comedy. Aristotle (Ath. Const. c. 28) expresses a high opinion of him and sums up the position excellently. He was not so much concerned with the forms of government (of which the best might depend on temporary conditions) as with their wisdom and justice. Such a man is sure to please no party.

549. A female innkeeper appears upon the scene (the inn itself not being visible), and taking Di. for Herakles, calls to her servant. It is usual to speak of two innkeepers, presumably partners, and some texts mark them as πανδοκεῦτρια α' and β'. This strange notion is apparently based on a wrong attribution of v. 570 (q.v.). The schol. rightly describes Plathane as the maid. The business of innkeeper was one in low repute. Travellers of position were generally housed by ξένοι. Those who resorted to an inn brought their own σπρώματα, which they laid on mats (ψαθοί). They might also bring their own provisions, or give the landlord money to purchase them, or 'board.' Theophrastus (Char. 6) gives it as a mark of ἀπόνοια that a man is δεινὸς πανδοκεῖσαι . . . καὶ μηδεμίαν ἐργασίαν αἰσχρὰν ἀποδοκιμάσαι; cf. Plat. Legis. 918 D. A πανδοκείτρια required a shrewish tongue. Sometimes Athenian women undertook this occupation, but the woman here is, more characteristically, a μέτοικος (see 569).

Πλαθάνη: invented from πλάθανον, a kitchen 'shape' or 'mould' (πλάσσω). Cf. Theoc. 16. 115 εἶδατα δ' ὅσσα γυναῖκες ἐπὶ πλαθάνῳ πορεύονται. We may perhaps render 'Patty!'

ὁ πανούργος οὗτος, 'yonder is the rascal.'

551. ἑκαῖδεκα. Greek frequently says 'sixteen' (cf. Luc. Prom. 3, Tim. 23, etc.), for our 'baker's dozen' or 'score.' For a smaller indefinite number it uses τέτταρες (914).

552. ἐκείνος αὐτὸς δῆτα, 'yes, (it is) that man's very self.'

κακὸν ἦκει τινί, 'somebody is in trouble' (viz. Di.). The allusive τις (cf. 554) is common in threats and sly or malicious references; cf. Theoc. 5. 120 ἤδη τις, Μόρσων, πικραίνεται, Soph. Aj. 1138 τοῦτ' εἰς ἀνίαν τοῦτος ἔρχεται τινι, Aesch. S.C.T. 389, etc.

553. κρέα. The plural of κρέας would naturally be κρέᾱ (i.e. κρεα-α), but κρέᾱ (from the analogy of neuters of other stems) is the only comic scansion.

554. ἀν' ἡμιωβολιαῖα, 'at the rate of half-obol pieces each time' or 'in mouthfuls worth half-an-obol each.' Those who render 'twenty plates of meat worth half-an-obol each' are confusing ἀν' ἡμιωβολιαῖα with either the simple ἡμιωβολιαῖα or (τὰ) ἀν' ἡμιωβόλιον or (τὰ) ἡμιωβόλιον. It might be urged that, to a πανδοκείτρια, such confusion of expression is quite possible. In fact, however, the comedians do not make vulgar people talk a vulgar Attic, the normal language being broken only in the case of ξένοι. [Others write as a compound ἀνημιωβολιαῖα, in a sense 'three-farthings-apiece plates of meat,' the adj. being = (τὰ) ἀν' ἡμιωβόλιον. For the price itself cf. Eupolis ap. Ath. 328 E ἡμιωβελίου κρέα. The compound is nevertheless curious and illogical, and cannot be supported by e.g. καλοκάγαθια. Such an expression as that of Timocles (Καιν. 1) τῶν ἀν' ὀκτὼ τοῦβολου might just conceivably, but not very probably, be converted into an adjective in which the termination -αῖος (as in δραχμαῖος) is combined with the ἀν(δ) which is synonymous with it. But since the ἀν- is, after all, redundant, another specimen should be forthcoming before we accept such a form.]

ἡμιωβελία. The spelling of Attic inscriptions is ἡμιωβέλιον, the o being used only where another o immediately follows the λ. Thus τριώβολον, but διωβελία (Meisterhaus², p. 18).

555. τὰ σκόροδα, 'those cloves of garlic.' The supply of garlic was part of the business; cf. Lys. 458 ὦ σκοροδοπανδοκεν-τριαρτοπώλιδες.

556. εἰ. οὐ μὲν οὖν . . . ἔτι: not a question, but = 'nay, you fancied . . .'. The idea that the κόθορνοι (18) would form a disguise is facetious enough.

εἶχες: assimilated to the tense of προσεδόκας. The clause ὅτι εἶχες might be represented by ἔχων, the time of which is that of προσεδόκας.

ἂν γινῶναι σ' ἔτι. The difficulty of ἀναγινῶναι is not in the tense without ἂν, since προσδοκᾶν with aor. is good Greek (Goodwin, M. and T. § 135), but ἀναγιγνώσκω is not used for 'recognise.' Moreover, the break with stop in the anapaest of fourth foot is of doubtful allowance.

559. οὐδὲ τὸν τυρόν γε. The characteristic feminine emphasis (or vocal underlining) is well illustrated by the recurring γε here and in 562, 564, 565, 567.

τάλαν, 'dear O dear!'; a favourite word with women. But τάλαν is scarcely to be taken as voc. of τάλας used as feminine (Theom. 1038 proves nothing). It may very well be neuter, equivalent to (ὦ) τάλαν πάθος (χρῆμα etc.) = 'dreadful!'. This would account for its use in commiseration of one's self, e.g. Lys. 102 ὁ γοῦν ἐμὸς ἤδη πέντε μῆνας, ὦ τάλαν, | ἀπεστίν; cf. the identical interjectional use of Latin malum.

560. τοῖς ταλάροις: wicker baskets (πλεκτοὶ τάλαιοι Hom. Il. 18. 568, Od. 9. 247) into which fresh cheese was put to drain (Theoc. 5. 86).

κατήσθιν: the imperf. is 'panoramic': 'There he was, eating (or trying to eat) it, baskets and all.'

561. ἐπραττόμην, 'tried to get from him.'

564. μάλισθαι δοκῶν, 'with the appearance of a madman' (not 'pretending'). The words have a tragic sound and suggest the Mad Herakles of Euripides. [The certain use of δοκεῖν as = προσποιεῖσθαι is practically confined to negative sentences, in which οὐ δοκῶν ποιεῖν 'not seeming to do' (what one is doing) = 'seeming not to do,' as Pac. 1051 μὴ νυν ὄρᾶν δοκῶμεν αὐτόν; cf. σὺ φημι, οὐ βούλομαι, etc. But, as in English, while 'seeming not to . . .' often = 'pretending not to . . .', the positive use of 'seem' in this sense is by no means so familiar. Apparent exceptions must be regarded carefully. Thus Lys. 179 θεῖν δοκοῦσαι really = 'being thought to be at sacrifice,' and similarly Eupolis 159. 10. But here 'being thought' is not in point.]

565. νὼ δὲ δεισάσα γέ τον. The particles are exculpatory. [The fem. dual form δεισάσα is denied for Attic by many critics (see Cobet, I. L. p. 70), who quote Plat. Phaedr. 238 D δύο τινέ εἶστον ἰδέα ἀρχόντε καὶ ἀγόντε, and maintain that the dual possessed but one form in nom. and acc. Many (but not the best) mss. have δείσασαί, and it is suspected that δεισάσα has been substituted for this because of νὼ. Similarly in Soph. O. C. 1600 τὼ . . μολοῦσαι of the best ms. appears as τὼ . . μολοῖσα in others; ibid. 1676 ιδόντε καὶ παθοῖσα seems impossible (παθοῖσαι some mss.), and it is argued that the same copyist who altered παθόντε would have altered ιδόντε if metre had permitted. In Ecc. 1087 ἐλκόντε is fem. Inscriptions do not help much (Meisterhans², p. 96). Cf. Kühner-Gerth ii. pp. 73 sq. We may conclude that the form in -όντε was clearly the older, but we know that usage (beginning among the people) did create an analogical form in -οῖσα, and there must have been a time during which both were used, -όντε being the more strictly literary.]

566. κατήλιψ, 'loft.' Hesychius defines κατήλιψ either as the beam supporting the roof or 'better (as he says) ἐκπύωμα (scaffolding or raised platform) τὸ ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ.' Second storics were common enough in Greek houses, but humbler buildings, or certain rooms, would have a half-floor or loft (like those of barns) accessible by a ladder or stairs. This would be used for stores, and, according to the schol., the domestic poultry roosted upon it. Another name was μεσόδμη.

567. τὰς ψιάθους : supplied in the inns to sleep upon.

568. ἐχρῆν : like tempus erat (Hor. Od. 1. 37. 24). '(Instead of standing still) you should have been doing something.' The tense looks to the time of making the choice of conduct.

569. τὸν προστάτην Κλέωνα. In Hades the dead demagogue would naturally be μυτρον of the same vulgar class which he affected in life. A μέτοικος, or a manumitted slave, could have no legal standing except through a προστάτης, who represented the alien to the δῆμος, and was also in a measure responsible for the conduct of his client. The characters of patron and client were judged by each other. [The technical expression for the μέτοικος was προστάτην νέμειν.] Cleon died in 422 B.C., but had not been forgiven by Aristophanes. For his patronage of the rabble cf. Vesp. 409.

570. σὺ δ' ἔμοιγ'. It is usual to give these words to an alleged 'second hostess,' who also sends a slave. Besides being extremely unnatural, this spoils the joke. On being threatened with Cleon, Di. turns to Xanthias and says sarcastically 'and you fetch me Hyperbolus.' Dionysus (an alien in Hades) pretends also to have a patron, and one who can out-Cleon Cleon. Hyperbolus, who had a worse character with less ability than Cleon, had died in 411 B.C. (Thuc. 8. 74). Cf. Eg. 1303 ἄνδρα μοχθηρὸν πολίτην, ὀξύνην Ὑπέρβολον.

571. φάρυξ; in place of the usual κεφαλὴ. Latin also has gula of a person.

573. κόπτειμ' ἄν. It does not appear why a Greek should not say 'I should like to hit your teeth with a stone' as well as 'knock out your teeth.' Though Phryn. may have τοὺς γομφίους ἀπαντας ἐξέκοψε and Semonid. (fr. 7. 17) οἷδ' εἰ χολωθείς ἐξαράξειεν λίθῳ | ὀδόντας, there are no argument against κόπτειν. [Of course κόπτειν cannot itself = ἐκκόπτειν.]

574. ἐγὼ δέ γ' ἐς τὸ βάραθρον ἐμβάλομαι σέ. The line should be thus assigned and accented, as a retort. Omission of ἄν is not infrequent when the previous context supplies it. Cf. Plat. Rep. 352 E. Ἔσθ' ὅτῳ ἄν ἄλλῳ ἰδοῖς ἢ ὀφθαλμοῖς; (ὃ) δῆτα. Τί δέ; ἀκούσαις ἄλλῳ ἢ ὤσιν; Λεων. Ag. 1049 πείθοι' ἄν, εἰ πείθοι' ἀπειθοίης δ' ἴσως. Kühner-Gerth i. pp. 248 sq.

τὸ βάραθρον: properly a pit (δριγμα) or gully, about 60 ft. deep, outside the wall to W. of the Prnyx, into which criminals and the bodies of the executed were thrown. To use this expression is equal to calling a person a κάθαρμα, but βάραθρον itself eventually came to possess little more definiteness than e.g. ἐς κόρακας.

577. ἀλλ' εἰμ' κ.τ.λ. She has already sent the maid (569); here she goes herself.

τήμερον: a frequent use in threats, expressing certainty. So hodie in e.g. Verg. Ecl. 3. 49 numquam hodie effugies, Ter. Phorm. 5. 3. 22.

578. ἐκπηνιῖται: from weaving. πηνιον is the bobbin from which the thread of the woof (κρόκη) is wound off. To wind upon the reel is πηνίζεισθαι, ἀναπηνίζεισθαι; this is the contrary.

προσκαλούμενος: πρόσκλησις is the regular term for the serving of summons, but the simple κλήσις and καλεῖσθαι are also used.

579. [Exit Landlady. An awkward pause follows; then Di. speaks an intentionally audible aside.]

580. παῦε τοῦ λόγου : see 122 n. ; cf. Av. 1213 παῦε τῶν παφλασμάτων.

581. οὐκ ἄν γινοίμην Ἡρακλῆς ἄν. It is quite arbitrary to read αὐ for the second ἄν. It is in any case doubtful whether the comedian would use the simple αὐ for πάλιν (or πάλιν αὖθις, αὐ πάλιν, αὖθις αὐ or even αὖθις αὐ πάλιν). Moreover the repeated ἄν helps the tone, 'I wouldn't—no!--I wouldn't.'

582. ὦ Ξανθίδιον : from ξανθός. From Ξανθίας the dimin. would have been Ξανθι-ίδιον Ξανθίδιον (Introcl. p. liii). Ξανθίας itself is but a formation from ξανθός (= 'Tawny Boy') and the wheedling diminutive goes back to the primitive. Analogy also assists (cf. Σωκρατίδιον, Ἑριπ(δ)ιον).

καὶ πῶς κ.τ.λ. Retorting vv. 530 sq.

584. αὐτὸ δρᾷς, 'you do it,' is as good Greek as English ; cf. Thuc. 1. 69, Plat. Rep. 358 c.

585. κἄν εἰ κ.τ.λ. A sentence of this kind illustrates the origin of the use of κἄν as simply emphatic καί. Here ἄν may indeed be said to look forward to ἀντίποιμι, but in many sentences no verb follows to which ἄν could refer. Particularly was a combination κἄν εἰ favoured for καί (e.g. Plat. Men. 72 c κἄν εἰ πολλαί εἰσιν, ἔν γε τι εἶδος ταῦτόν ἀπασαί ἔχουσι), the development being probably assisted by a dim feeling of κἄν as = καί ἔάν . . . As this use was established before the date of Aristophanes (Kühner-Gerth i. pp. 244 sq.) it may be the actual one here.

586. τοῦ λοιποῦ χρόνου : the gen. is regular in negat. sentences, while the accus. is as regular in the positive. The explanation is simple : 'I will not do a thing at any point of the future,' but 'I will do a thing throughout the future.' This equally accounts for the apparent exceptions. Thus τὸ λοιπὸν οὐ ποιήσω = 'I will, throughout the future, abstain from doing' (Thuc. i. 56 ἐκέλευον . . τὸ λοιπὸν μὴ δέχεσθαι οὐδ' . . ἔπειπον), and, conversely, in the present place, 'if at any point of the future I rob you.'

σε . . ἀφίλωμαι : sc. αὐτά (skin and club).

587 sq. αὐτός. ἡ γυνή, τὰ παῖδια. This, with ἡ οἰκία, is the fullest curse invoked in an oath. Cf. Dem. 1160 εἰ διομεῖ . . αὐτός καὶ ἡ γυνή καὶ τὰ παῖδια, καὶ καταράσσεθε αὐτοῖς καὶ τῇ

οἰκία. Humour lies in the fact that Dionysus has no wife or children. For a climax he adds the παρὰ προσδοκίαν, '—and so may the blear-eyed Archidemus' (417 n.). This would naturally be a great inducement to Xa. to risk it. γλάμων is applied to Arch. by Lysias also (c. Alc. 536).

ἀπολομένην: sing. as if his εἶς included the parts αὐτός, ἡ γυνή etc.; cf. 1408 sq., Xen. An. 1. 10. 1 βασίλειός τε καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ διώκων εἰσπίπτει.

589. λαμβάνω: sc. the skin and club (not τὸν δοκον)

590-604. These lines convey a suggestion of the admonition and the answering pledge at some initiatory proceeding.

590-591. ἐπειδὴ . . . ὦληφας . . . ἐξ ἀρχῆς πάλιν, 'since you have once taken (lit. begun by taking) back . . . πάλιν (or αἰθις) ἐξ ἀρχῆς (or ὑπαρχῆς) is a common phrase, cf. Plut. 221 οἶκ, ἦν γε πλοιτήσωσιν ἐξ ἀρχῆς πάλιν. [We should not join πάλιν pleonastically with ἀνανεάζειν, nor untruthfully with εἶχες.]

ἀνανεάζειν: syllables — υ υ — are missing. Scholia supply the note σεαυτὸν πρὸς τὸ σοβαρόν. Of this σεαυτὸν is merely a way of saying "ἀνανεάζειν is here intrans. for ἀναν. σεαυτὸν" and πρὸς τὸ σοβ. explains in what sense Xanthias can be said to grow young again. Meineke and others actually read πρὸς τὸ σοβαρόν in the text, treating the words as a marginal restoration of something accidentally omitted. Such omission is, however, difficult to account for, and more probably there has been a loss of another verb in -άζειν.

593. τὸ δεινόν, 'that terrible look' (familiar to Herakles).

595. κάβαλεις τι μαλθακόν, 'let slip any weak (cowardly) word.' The verb implies either inadvertence or recklessness. Cf. Aesch. Cho. 48 φοβοῦμαι δ' ἔποι τόδ' ἐκβαλεῖν, Hom. (Il. 4. 503 ὑπερφιάλον ἔπος ἐκβαλε, Il. 6. 69 (ἀνοίη ἐκβ.), Vesp. 1289.

ὅτι . . . περάσεται . . . εἰ οἷδ' ὅτι. The phrase εἰ οἷδ' ὅτι 'I know that (it is so)' at the end of a sentence, or parenthetical, came to be regarded as simply = 'I'm sure.' Cf. J. H. S. 154 σπονδὰς ποιήσαιντ' ἂν ταχέως, εἰ οἷδ' ὅτι. So σάφ' οἷδ' ὅτι, εἰ ἴσθ' ὅτι. The ὅτι thus lost separate recognition, and hence here (especially at the distance) the first ὅτι does not prevent the second. For the hiatus see Introd. p. xlii.

603. βλέποντ' ὀρίγανον, 'looking marjoram' (cf. 'looking dagger', 'look thunder'), i.e. with a tart or pungent look. βλέπω takes contained accus. in the shape of a neuter adj.

(δρμι' 562) or a noun. Familiar are βλέπειν νᾶπι, κάρδαμα, σκίτη, δμφακας. Cf. the tragic φόνον βλ., Ἄρη δεδορκώς, and the pretty ἔαρ ὁρώσα of Theocritus. [Sometimes an infin. is used, e.g. τιμᾶν βλέπω Vesp. 847.]

604. θύρας . . ψόφον. Greek doors (in two leaves) moved on pivots (στροφῆς) working in sockets in the threshold and lintel, and unless these were frequently oiled a considerable noise was made in opening. Cf. foris concerepuit in Plautus (= ἐψόφηκεν ἡ θύρα of his original). It is incorrect to say that the door opened outwards in the classical time (Dict. Ant. i. p. 987).

καὶ δὴ, lit. 'even as it is' = iam nunc. Cf. 647, Pac. 942 ὁ γὰρ βωμὸς θύρασι καὶ δὴ, Soph. O. C. 173 ΟἶΔ. πρόσθιγέ νῦν μου. ANT. ψαίω καὶ δὴ.

605 sqq. Aeneas, who had gone to fetch the officers (485), reappears with two policemen, and afterwards calls for more (608).

606 ἀνύτετον. 'be quick.' The dual shows that there were a pair of them.

ἦκει τῷ κακόν: D. retorts upon Xanthias (552).

607. οὐκ ἐς κόρακας μὴ πρόσσιτον. This has been misunderstood, or editors would never have meddled with it. For οὐ μὴ πρόσσιτον see 202 n. ἐς κόρακας is inserted expletive (like the familiar Latin malum) = 'You shan't come near me, confound you!' For the separation οὐκ . . μὴ cf. Soph. Aj. 560 οὔτοι σ' Ἀχαιῶν, οἶδα, μὴ τις ὑβρίσῃ, Ant. 1042 οἷδ' ὡς μίasma τοῦτο μὴ τρέσας ἐγὼ | θάπτειν παρήσω. For the interpolation of the expletive cf. Aesch. S. c. T. 238 οὐκ ἐς φόβον σιγῶσ' ἀνασχέσῃ τάδε; and Nicophon (Mein. Com. Frag. ii. p. 848) οὐκ ἐς κόρακας τῷ χεῖρ' ἀποισεις ἐκποδῶν;

εἰεν: pronounced eien, and not as opt. of εἶμι (Kühner-Blass i. pp. 113, 639). 'So!'

καὶ μάχα; 'fighting, are you?' Xanthias begins knocking them about with his club.

608. ὁ Διτύλας κ.τ.λ. The Athenian police (τοξόται) were Scythians, and the names in -ίας and -όκας are to match (see Blaydes crit. n.). In a country where the police are mostly Irishmen one may perhaps render 'O'Rourke, O'Reilly, and O'Rafferty!'

610. εἴτ' οὐχὶ δαυδὰ κ.τ.λ., lit. 'Now isn't this frightful, that this fellow should be dealing blows, when he is, besides, a thief and a robber?' To assign these words to Dionysus, who is now acting the slave of Xanthias, is to put him in a very unnatural position. It is sufficient if he annoys X. by responding sympathetically with μη ἀλλ' ἐπεφύα.

τύπτειν: used absolutely, as in the Homeric Ζεφύρος λαίλαπτι τύπτων (Il. 11. 306).

611. κλέπτοντα, 'being a thief,' the present (of a condition) in a quasi-perfect sense. Cf. φείγων, ἀδικῶν (617), νικῶν and (poetically) τίκτων, θνήσκων (Kühner-Gerth i. p. 137).

πρὸς = προσέτι: cf. 415. μη ἀλλ': 103 n.

616. βασάνει: he neatly punishes D. for his remark. The torturing of slaves was permitted only with the consent of the master, either on his offer or after a challenge (in either case πρόκλησις ἐς βάσανον). The conditions were determined by him (καθ' ὃ τι ἔσται ἡ βάσανος Dem. c. Stroph. 1120), and compensation had to be made for damage done to the slave (Dem. c. Panlacen. 978). The usual form was racking (στρεβλοῦν) on the wheel (τροχός), but whipping and other methods might be adopted by agreement.

618. ἐν κλίμακι δήσας . . μαστιγῶν. The rendering is uncertain; either (1) 'by whipping him with a cat-'o'-nine-tails after fastening him to a ladder or hanging him up,' the aorists being antecedent to μαστιγῶν, and κλίμαξ being a ladder on which the subject is fastened (man-o'-war fashion), or (2) 'by fastening him on a κλίμαξ, by hanging him up (i.e. with a weight on his feet), by whipping him' (the aorists representing single actions, left to take their effects, while the present denotes a continuous proceeding).

The latter is distinctly the better for two reasons: (a) the variety of methods is increased, (b) the κλίμαξ was apparently a kind of rack. Suidas explains as ὄργανον βασανιστήριον which διαστρέφει τὰ σώματα. Cf. Com. Incert. iv. 622 τῇ κλίμακι διαστρέφονται κατὰ μέλη στρεβλοῦμενοι. In its action this answers to the Latin fidicula (Dict. Ant. i. p. 858), but we know very little of ancient instruments of torture. [Probably the κλίμαξ was a framework which gradually widened out in sections.]

619. ἐστριχθεῖ: cf. Puc. 746. The word is dimin. of ἐστριξ ('porcupine') and the instrument was evidently full of bristling points. This was more severe than the ordinary leather μάστιξ, but less so than the μάστιξ ἀστραγαλωτή, a knout with knuckle-bones strung on the thong.

621. πλίνθους ἐπιτιθείς: cf. the prine forte ei dure.

πλὴν πρὸς κ.τ.λ.: a ludicrous reservation, delivered with solenity, as if some very extreme method were to be forbidden. φύλλον πράσου was a proverb for the extremely weak or brittle. Cf. Plut. Symp. 1. 5. 1, where he quotes φύλλον πράσου | τὸ τῶν ἐρώντων συνδέεται βαλλάντιον. But there is an allusion also to the practice of whipping with shoots of plants in certain ceremonies, in which a symbolic castigation was substituted for one that had been originally of a serious nature. In the case of the φαρμακοί, or human scapegoats, who were annually beaten out of Athens, the ritual required that it should be done with shoots of fig and squills (σκίλλαι), which were considered purgative (Harrison, Itridg. pp. 100-102). The μαλάχη (mallow) was also used: cf. Theoc. 7. 106.

623. ὁ λόγος, 'the proposal' or 'terms.'

κείσεται = καταβεβλήσεται, 'shall be paid at once.'

625. οὕτω = sic, 'just' (take him and torture him). Cf. ἀπλῶς οὕτως, Soph. Aj. 1204 κείμεν δ' ἀμέμμενος οὕτως, Plat. Symp. 176 E οὕτω πίνοντας πρὸς ἡδονήν.

626. κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς: cf. prepositional phrases κατὰ στόμα, ἐς χεῖρας, ἐπὶ θύραις etc. without article, and see 197, 199 n.

628 sq. ἀγορεύω τινί, 'I give notice to people (all and sundry)'. A point has been commonly overlooked. ἀθάνατον (otherwise rather pointless) plays on Ἀθηναῖον, and the whole is a protest of the civis Romanus sum order. An Athenian citizen could not be tortured. Dionysus gives his pedigree (cf. 22 n.) in v. 631.

The lengthening ἀθάνατον is epic, but is found in comic trimeters in Ach. 53 and in anap. tetr. Ar. 688; here Di. is uttering the word with the dignity of a whole Iliad.

632. φήμ' ἐγώ: sc. ἀκοίαν, 'Yes, I hear.'

635. τί . . . οὐ τύπτει; = quin tamulias? equal to an imperative.

639. εἶναι τοῦτον ἡγοῦ μὴ θεόν: not identical with μὴ τοῦτον ἡγοῦ κ.τ.λ. The position of μὴ is determined by the sense, not by metrical convenience: 'consider that one to be no god' (ἀλλ' ἀνθρώπον). Cf. 1416 ἴν' ἔλθῃς μὴ μάτην (ἀλλὰ προὔργον), Soph. El. 992 εἰ φρενῶν | ἐτύγχαν' αὐτῇ μὴ κακῶν (ἀλλ' ἀγαθῶν).

643. πληγὴν παρὰ πληγὴν, 'stroke for stroke': an adverbial expression like γῆν πρὸ γῆς (ἐλαύνομαι), the first πληγὴν being strictly a contained (or cogn.) accus. with βασανῶ understood.

644. ἴδού, 'there you are!' Aeacus gives him a blow; Xanthias pretends to be waiting for it: 'well now, look out, in case I wince' (not indirect question, cf. 175, 339); and Aeacus answers 'I've hit you already.'

645. οὐ μὰ Δί' κ.τ.λ. The reading of mss. οὐ μὰ Δί' οὐδ' ἐμοὶ δοκεῖς is difficult. If correct, we must distribute thus: ΞΑ. οὐ μὰ Δί'. ΑΙ. οὐδ' ἐμοὶ δοκεῖς (sc. αἰσθέσθαι, which must be very awkwardly supplied from the general context), i.e. 'No. I don't think you did either' (viz. feel it). Others read οὐ μὰ Δί', οὐκ ἐμοὶ δοκεῖς (sc. πατάσαι).

The reading in the text = 'well, I can only say you don't seem to me to have done it.'

646. πηνίκα; 'at what o'clock (does the performance begin)?'

647. καὶ δὴ: 604 n., 1205.

κῆρα πῶς οὐκ ἔπταρον; 'Then I ought to have sneezed' A lash with a whip might have been expected to affect him at least as much as a tickling straw or feather (Plat. Symp. 185 E) or a draught of air. A sneeze comes of external influences which are often imperceptible. Probably there was a saying at Athens 'it did not even make me sneeze.'

649. ΞΑ. οὐκ οὐν ἀνύσεις τι; ἀττάται. ΑΙ. τί ἀττάται; mss. agree in οὐκ οὐν ἀνύσεις, but the rest is variously written and distributed. Editions commonly give οὐκ οὐν ἀνύσεις; λαττάται λαττάται, but the text is far preferable, since (1) it is obviously better for X. to be driven only so far as one ejaculation (cf. 657, 659, 664), (2) the formula would rather be ἀττάται λαττάται (Thesm. 223), (3) ἀνύσεις τι is livelier than ἀνύσεις, (4) the confusions are explained.

τί ἀττάται; 'What's the meaning of "Oh dear"?' Cf. Diph. (Com. Frag. 4. 419). Α. πάξ. Β. τί πάξ; Eur. Alc. 806 HP. δοῦναι γὰρ ζῶσι τῶνδε δεσπόται. ΘΕ. τί ζῶσιν; Phoen. 1725 ΟΙΚ. δεινὰ δειν' ἐγὼ τλάς. ΑΝ. τί τλάς; Plant. Rud. 736 TR. nunquam minus hasce esse oportet liberos? LA. Quid liberos?

650 ηγ. ἐφρόντισα ὅπου 'Ἡράκλεια κ.τ.λ., 'an anxious thought struck me, as to when my festival at Dioncia takes place.' Dioncia was a deme forming the NE. suburb of Athens, and contained a temple of Herakles outside the walls. The celebration of his festival had been interrupted by the war: cf. Dem. 19. 86 τὰ Ἡράκλεια ἐν τῷ τείχεϊ θύειν (a resolution of war-time).

We might have expected γενήσεται, but a present is often used with a future reference, cf. Hq. 127 ὁ χρησμός ἀντικρὺς λέγει | ὡς πρῶτα μὲν στιππειοπώλης γίνεται, 1087 ἔστιν ἐμοὶ χρησὺς . . | αἰετὸς ὡς γίνεται καὶ πάσης γῆς βασιλείς, Euripol. fr. 182 ἄκουε νῦν Πείσανδρος ὡς ἀπόλλυται (Kühner-Gerth i. p. 138). Such a use is, however, almost restricted to prophecies (prophetic realisation), and we should understand that suggestion here. The pseudo-Herakles is not simply wondering 'when it will take place,' but making up his mind when it is to take place. 'Let me see; when does my festival take place?' = 'when do I decide that it will . . ?' His ἀτταταῖ is due to his sudden recognition of a neglected duty.

652. ἀνθρώπος ἱερός: editors mostly write ἄνθρωπος. Yet the former is in no way improbable: '(He) is a sacred being.' Cf. 968 Θηραμένης; σοφός γ' ἀνὴρ καὶ δεινὸς ἐς τὰ πάντα, where the metre has prevented similar alteration to ἀνὴρ.

ἱερός, 'extraordinary,' as being under special protection of some god. Cf. Plat. Ion 534 B κοῦφον γὰρ χρῆμα ποιητῆς καὶ ἱερόν.

653 sq. τοῦ τοῦ: an exclamation of various emotions, depending upon the tone. Dionysus explains it as a cry of admiration or surprise, 'Ho! Ho!' But his tears need further explanation.

ἱππίας ὄρω: the actor would look at a portion of the audience.

κρομμύων ὀσφραίνομαι. Aristoph. probably means a compliment to the warlike behaviour of the ἱππῆς. With the common people onions formed a staple article of military food (and perhaps, like the garlic, were supposed to impart spirit). Cf. Pac. 529 τοῦ μὲν (sc. the knapsack) γὰρ ὄζει κρομμυοξυρεγμίας. In Eg. 596-610 the knights are praised for undertaking the same hard labour and eating the same poor food as the humbler classes.

655. ἐπεὶ προτιμᾷς γ' οὐδέν, '(you say that) because, of course, you don't mind (the beating) at all.'

657. οἶμοι . . τὴν ἀκανθὰν ἔξελε: it is absurd to suppose that X. pretends to have a thorn in his foot. If he were a god he 'would not feel it' (631). Nor is there any humour in the excuse. As a simple explanation of a passage which seems to have baffled commentators, it may be suggested that there was a current song containing the words οἶμοι τὴν ἀκανθὰν ἔξελε, and that, having let οἶμοι slip out, he breaks into the song to complete his sentence. The device is thus the same as in v. 659 [as if, e.g. 'O (!) to be in England!'].

659-661. Ἀπολλόν: sc. ἀποτρόπαie. The cry is forced from him, but he immediately turns it into the beginning of the quotation of 'an iambic line which I was trying to recall.' According to the schol. the verse was not by Hipponax, but by Ananios. Hipponax of Ephesus (circ. 540 B.C.) ranks after Archilochus and Semonides as poet of iambi. Ananios was a contemporary, and the two were evidently coupled, since the invention of the scazon (or choliambic line) is attributed to each. The ancients were no more infallible than moderns in the ascription of lines to their authors.

ὅς ποῦ Δῆλον κ.τ.λ., 'whose dwelling is somewhere in Delos or Delphi,' the exact sense of ἔχειν being to 'hold' (as owner, occupier, or tutelary deity); cf. Thesm. 316 χρυσολύρα . . Δῆλον δὲ ἔχεις ἱεράν. Aesch. Eum. 24 Βρόμιος ἔχει τὸν χώρον. The next lines (as quoted by schol.) ran ἡ Νάξον ἡ Μίλητον ἡ θείαν Κλάρον, | ἴκον καθ' ἱέρ', ἡ Σάβας ἀφίξεαι. ['O gracious (!) —emperor, O gentle Aaron!'] (Shak. Tit. And. 3. 1.).

662. οὐδὲν ποιεῖς γάρ: nihil enim agis, 'you are doing no good.' γάρ refers to the thought, '(He can act so) because . . . σπώδει: Introd. p. li.

663. μὰ τὸν Δί': κ. οἱ τὰς λαγόνas σποδήσω, ἀλλὰ . .

τὴν γαστέρα: cf. Hesiodas 5. 33 καὶ χιλίας μὲν ἐς τὸ νῶτον ἐγκόψαι | αὐτῷ κλείσω. χιλίας δὲ τῇ γαστρὶ.

664. Πόσειδον . . : as if, e.g. 'Caesar (!)—thou canst not die by traitors' hands | Unless thou bring'st them with thee' (Shak. J. C. 5. 1).

665. ὅς Αἰγαίου . . βένθισιν: comedy does not object to departing from the iambic trimeter or other regular metre in a quotation or an established formula of prayer or proclamation (ἐπειδὴν εὐχήν ἢ ψήφισμα εἰσάγωσιν says schol. on the prose passage in Thesm. 295 (q.v.)).

The schol. tells us that these words come from Sophocles' Laocoon (fr. 342), but he quotes thus: ὅς Αἰγαίου μέδεις | πρῶνας ἢ γλαυκᾶς μέδεις | εἰανέμου λίμνας ἐφ' ὕψηλαῖς σπιλάδεσσι στομάτων. Dionysius also is 'trying to remember.' In the text of schol. the first μέδεις is plainly an error, and in neither text has πρῶνας any construction (since μέδεις requires genit.). The emendation <περὶ> πρῶνας is based upon the case of losing περὶ in its form ρ . [στομάτων in schol. may be a misreading for Σποράδων.] For the whole cf. Soph. Anth. 1118 κλιτὰν δὲ ἀμφέπεις | Ἰταλίαν, μέδεις δὲ | παγκοίνοισι Ἐλευσινίας | Διοῖς ἐν κόλποις. A question arises as to whether πρῶν (cf. sinus) is a spur of the sea (i.e. a gulf) or into the sea (a cape). The former occurs in e.g. Aesch. Ag. 318 Σαρωνικοῦ |

πορθμοῦ κάτοπτον πρῶτα. Here it is more naturally the latter, with special reference to the worship of Poseidon at Sunium and Geraestus: cf. Εἰ. 560 ὦ δελφίνων μέδων Σοινιάρατε, | ὦ Γεραίστιε παῖ Κρόνον, Eur. Cycl. 291.

670. γνῶσεται: cf. Hom. Od. 5. 79 οὐ γάρ τ' ἀγνώτες θεοὶ ἀλλήλοισι πέλονται.

671. Φερρέφατθ': the Attic form (Meisterhans², p. 76). Other forms, chiefly poetical, are Φερρέφασσα, Περρέφασσα, Φερσεφόνη, Περσεφύνη.

673. πρότερον . . πρὶν . . 'earlier . . (namely), before . .'; not the mere pleonasm sometimes found.

674-737. Dionysus, Xanthias, and Aeacus have entered the palace. There follows the interlude known as the Parabasis, a usual (but not indispensable) portion of the play, in which the Chorus 'comes forward,' leaving the proper theme of the piece and addressing the audience on contemporary matters, whether concerning the poet or the state of politics. It consists here of στροφή or ψδῆ (674-685), ἐπιρρημα (686-705), ἀντιστροφή or ἀντψδῆ (706-717), ἀντεπιρρημα (718-737). This is the simplest structure of a παράβασις, consisting of what is technically known as the 'epirrhematic σῆζυγία,' without certain occasional additions, e.g. the πνῆγος. The strophe and antistrophe (sung with dance by half-choruses facing each other) are attacks on the two popular leaders, Cleophon and Cleigenes; the epirrhema and antepirrhema (or parabasis in the narrower sense) give good advice to the public. It is doubtful whether these (which were in recitative) were delivered by the coryphaeus alone, by the coryphaeus and παραστάτης, or by half-choruses. The second seems on the whole the most probable.

We must understand that throughout the lyric strophe and antistrophe there is parody of passages known to the audience, but at which we can only guess. [For the political attitude of Aristophanes see Introd. p. xvi, xxi sq.]

674 685. An onslaught upon Cleophon. By both Aristoph. and the comedian Plato (who wrote a Cleophon) he was regarded with animus, as a low-born and self-seeking demagogue; but these are the one-sided views of the aristocratic section of Athenian society. History tells us only that he was consistently opposed to the peace with Sparta which was desired by the oligarchical party. After the successes of Cyzicus (410 B.C.) and Arginusae, and also (later in this year) after the defeat of Aegospotami, Cleophon would hear nothing of peace. He was made away with late in 405 B.C.

In these lines the comedian charges Cleophon with lack of public spirit, with foreign birth, inability to talk Greek, and enmity to peace. The charge of foreign descent was one of the commonest at Athens. It might mean that a man was only δημοπαῖς (418 n.), that he had got his name foisted on the rolls without claim (παρέγγρατος), or that he was only of citizen birth on one side and therefore νόθος. The last was the alleged position of Cleophon, whose mother was said to be Thracian. Such assertions could easily be made in a city where μέτοικοι, ξένοι, and slaves were numerous, and where 'purification of the rolls' was no infrequent necessity. Against Cleophon, however, the charge seems to have been made with some consistency; cf. Aeschin. F. L. 76 Κλεοφῶν . . . παρεγγραφείσιν αἰσχρῶς πολίτης καὶ διεφθαρκῶς νομῇ χρημάτων τὸν δῆμον, ἀποκόψειν ἡπείλει μαχαίρᾳ τὸν τράχηλον εἰ τις εἰρήνης μνησθήσεται.

675. χορῶν: with ἐπίβηθι; cf. Hes. Op. 659 (of the Muses) ἐνθα με τὸ πρῶτον λιγυρῆς ἐπέβησαν αἰδοῖς ('set me upon singing'), Soph. Phil. 1463 δόξης οὔποτε τῆσδ' ἐπιστάντες, Hom. Od. 23. 52, etc. χορῶν combines the notions 'dances' and 'bodies of dancers,' and ἐπίβηθι is used of (1) 'entering upon,' (2) 'mounting upon' (to guide like a steed or car). It is thus neither possible nor desirable here to separate the senses 'enter upon sacred dances' and 'guide (the) sacred chorus.'

ἐρῶν: apart from its primary application to the mysteries, the word implies a claim to protection for freedom of speech.

ἐπὶ τέρψιν, 'for delight of . . .'; including both 'to find' and 'to make' pleasure in . . .

676. τὸν πολὺν . . . λαὼν ὄχλον, 'yon mighty throng of folk,' viz. the spectators, practically the whole body of citizens. For λαὼν see 219 n.

ὁφειμένη: the sight is worth seeing. σοφίαι, 'talents' (of all sorts); a more or less ironical compliment on their literary taste and political wisdom.

677. μυρία, 'countless.' The word describes the sorts of ability; it is not a literal calculation (10,000) of the number of the audience, which Aristoph. would rather exaggerate than the contrary. We do not know precisely how many persons could be seated in the theatre of 405 B.C. Plato (Symp. 175 E) puts the spectators of a play of Agathon at τρισμύριοι, and this, in round numbers, answers to the calculation of 27,500, which some have gathered from the remains of the stone theatre of the next century. There can be no doubt that the seats were closely packed. [Demosth. (Androt. § 35) calls 'the citizens'

πλείους ἢ μυρίους (if the text is sound), but this is not meant to be all-inclusive (see Wayte, ad loc.). They are commonly calculated at 20,000 at least; cf. Vesp. 700 διὸ μυριάδε. Aristot. Ath. Const. 24. 10, but Ecc. 1132 πλείονων τρισμυρίων.]

678. φιλοτιμότεραι, 'more public-spirited.' For this favourable sense cf. Lycurg. Lac. 15 πρὸς τοὺς θεοὺς εἰσερχώσας καὶ πρὸς τοὺς γονεῖς ὁσίως καὶ πρὸς τὴν πατρίδα φιλοτίμως, Xen. Mem. 2. 3. 16.

ἀμφιλάλους: as speaking (1) a jargon, half-Greek, half-Thracian; (2) with duplicity; cf. ἀμφίγλωσσοι (= δίγλωσσοι, which has both these meanings). For the former cf. ἀμφιμήτριος, for the latter ἀμφιπρόσωπος.

680. δεινὸν ἐπιβρέμεται, 'cries terribly.' For the middle verb cf. Pind. N. 11. 8 λῦρα δέ σφι βρέμεται καὶ αἰοιδά, Aesch. S. c. T. 335 βλαχαὶ . . τῶν ἐπιμαστιδίων . . βρέμονται.

681. Θρηκία χελιδών: for the inarticulate swallow cf. 93 n. Θρηκία is doubly appropriate, alluding (1) to Cleophon's mother, (2) to the story of Progne and Philomela, and their successive marriages to the Thracian Tereus. [In the parodied original the nouns, adjectives, and verbs would refer to the nightingale; here they are travestied to fit the swallow.]

682. ἐπὶ βάρβαρον ἐξομένη πέταλον: the phrase recalls a commonplace concerning the nightingale; cf. Ar. 215. Hom. Il. 19. 520 ὥς δ' ὅτε . . ἀηδὼν | καλὸν αἰδέησιν . . | δεινδρίων ἐν πετάλοισι καθεζομένη πυκινοῖσιν, and (of the swallow) Iuc. 800 ὅταν ἤρηνά . . χελιδὼν ἐξομένη κελαδῇ. For ἐξομένη ἐπὶ with accus. cf. 199. The πέταλον βάρβαρον is Cleophon's tongue. Those who quarrel with the expression 'on whose lips a swallow cries . . seating itself upon a foreign leaf' are hardly constituted to deal with comic parody. [In the original it may have been the χείλη of some stream on which the Daulian nightingale sang her loss of Itys.]

683. ῥύζει: so Dindorf for κελαρύζει (with variant κελαδεῖ). Cleophon 'snarls you as 'twere any nightingale.' The word is exactly of the condensing sort which the comedian would use, if Cleophon's manner was of the kind. An interlinear adscript κελαδεῖ to ῥύζει would account for the mss. readings.

ἀηδόνιον νόμον: (1) he is a swallow trying to act the nightingale (a barbarian trying to talk Greek), (2) ἀηδόνιος νόμος itself implies tearfulness, (3) we may suggest that there is an allusion to Ἠδωνοί, a Thracian people, whose name was often given to Thracians in general.

684 sq. ὡς ἀπολείται, κὰν ἴσαι γένωνται : generally rendered 'he is sure to perish, even if there prove to be equal votes (ψηφοί),' it being assumed that he was at this time threatened with a trial (or with ostracism, a process which had been discredited by the case of Hyperbolus, but which had probably not been abolished). We know nothing of any such trial; nor is it easy to see how—unless possibly as a moral result—Cleophon could be undone by equal votes. By Athenian law equality of votes meant acquittal: cf. Eur. El. 1268 καὶ τοῖσι λοιποῖς ὁδε νόμος τεθήσεται, | νικᾶν ἴσαις ψήφοισι τὸν φεῖγοντ' αἶψ', Aesch. Eum. 744, Aeschin. (Ver. § 252. It appears, it is true, (from Hesych. and elsewhere) that σώζεσθαι κὰν ἴσαι γένωνται was proverbial for 'escaping by the skin of the teeth' (or rather 'a miss is as good as a mile'). It might, therefore, be suggested that ἀπολείται is substituted παρὰ προσδοκίαν for e.g. σωθήσεται. Yet, to have any point, the order would need to be 'that, even if the votes prove equal, he will—he done for.'

We shall do better to supply σπονδαί in place of ψηφοί: 'that he will be done for, even if fair terms are got' (from Sparta). The comedian thus humorously applies the proverbial κὰν ἴσαι γένωνται in a new sense. Cleophon's political position depends on the continuance of the war, and he will be ruined by peace, even if just and fair (or 'equal') terms are obtainable. Ellipsis of a noun (γνώμη, ψήφος, δίκη, πληγή, μοῖρα, etc.) occurs where the word would naturally suggest itself. No further rule can be laid down, nor does the context necessarily contain the cognate verb: cf. Soph. O. T. 810 οὐ μὴν ἴσην γ' ἐταίρην.

*O Muse, inspire our sacred choir,
And lend all joy to my song:
See, wisdom and wit, without end they sit
In this grand Athenian throng.
Of higher sort their aim
Than Cleophon's selfish game;
On whose lips, that babble their mongrel Greek,
A swallow doth gabble with fearsome shriek,
And sits on a leaf,
And snarls its grief,
Its Thracian tale of the nightingale:
That tearful strain hark, when we're won
The fairest of terms, he's dead and done.]*

686. ἰσθὲν : 675 n.

687. ἑυπαρκεῖν : more modest than παρκεῖν ; the chorus simply 'lends its help' to the good cause. The force of ξιμ- is felt with διδάσκειν also. Cf. Soph. Ant. 537 καὶ ξιμμετίσχω καὶ φέρω τῆς αἰτίας, Xen. Cyr. 7. 1. 1 προσήμεγκαν ἐμπιεῖν καὶ φαγεῖν.

ἡμῖν δοκεῖ, 'we move that . . '

688. ἔξιςσαι: explained by the following words. There is no special reference as yet to the franchise (692), but to the removing of prejudice and party oppression.

689. καὶ τις . . παλαίσμασιν. Phrynichus is treated as the prime mover (with Peisander and Theramenes) in the oligarchical revolution of the 400 in 411 B.C. Cf. Thuc. 8. 68 παρέσχε δὲ ὁ Φρύνιχος ἑαυτὸν διαφερόντως προθυμότερον ἐς τὴν ὀλιγαρχίαν. He was the most stubborn in upholding it, and was assassinated in the Agora in consequence. Aristoph. is not without sympathy for the party, and it is convenient to blame the dead Phrynichus. The feeling of the δῆμος had not died out in the intervening years, and the justice of its suspicions was proved by the events of 404 B.C.

σφαλεῖς . . παλαίσμασιν . . ὀλισθοῦσιν: sustaining a familiar metaphor from the palaestra. Phrynichus had been too clever for simpler people.

691. αἰτίαν ἐκθείσει. The legal expression 'declared cause' dispenses with the article. The poet does not wish them to rake up old questions, but merely to 'state a case' which shall amount to an acknowledgement, a plea, a request for pardon. For the active λύσαι, of 'undoing' an obligation by paying, cf. τέλη λύειν and Soph. Phil. 1224 λίσων δὲ ἐξήμαρτον, Ath. 227 F.

692. εἴτ') (πρῶτον 687.

ἀτιμον κ.τ.λ. This advice was followed when, later in the year, Athens found itself besieged by Lysander: Xen. Hell. 2. 2. 11 τοῖς ἀτίμοις ἐπιτίμοις ποιήσαντες ἐκατέρωθεν. Public enemies and debtors, embezzlers, persons bribed, deserters, insulters of magistrates, etc. were visited with ἀτιμία in various degrees of severity. To propose formally in assembly the restitution of citizenship in a particular case brought a severe penalty on the mover, but Aristoph. suggests it in the theatre as a general policy under cover of his ιερός χορός.

693. τοὺς μὲν ναυμαχήσαντας κ.τ.λ. The sentence begins as if an antithetical τοὺς δὲ πολλὰ δὴ ναυμαχήσαντας ἀτίμοις μένειν (or τοῖς δὲ π. ναυμαχήσανσι μὴ παρῆναι μίαν συμφορὰν) was to follow. But after v. 694 the writer thinks it well to prevent misconception as to his attitude, and so begins a parenthetical

694. Πλαταιᾶς. Long after their assistance to Athens at Marathon the Plataeans had shown extraordinary loyalty to the Athenian cause in 427 B.C., when the Peloponnesians besieged and destroyed their town. They had then been allies for ninety-three years (Thuc. 3. 68). Those who escaped, to the number of 212, made their way to Athens (ibid. 24). By a decree of the people (ap. Dem. Νέστωρ. 1380) it was resolved Πλαταιᾶς εἶναι Ἀθηναίους ἐντίμοις καθάπερ οἱ ἄλλοι Ἀθηναῖοι καὶ μετεῖναι αὐτοῖς ὥνπερ Ἀθηναῖοι μετέστι πάντων; cf. Iys. 23. 2. The sense of the present line has sometimes been strangely misunderstood. It does not mean that the slaves were not made full Athenians, but had only qualified 'Plataean' rights. There is nothing to show that the Plataeans were in any such position. The sufficiently obvious meaning is that the slaves were treated as heroes, receiving as much recognition as the brave and much enduring people of Plataea.

697. πρὸς δὲ: adverbial, 'but in addition' (τούτοις depending on παρεῖναι). Cf. Eur. Med. 410 πρὸς δὲ καὶ πεφύκαμεν γυναῖκες. [It is less neat to join πρὸς δὲ τοῖτοις and supply a dat. antecedent to οἱ.]

698. χοὶ πατέρες: grammatically parenthetical, otherwise strictly χὼν οἱ π. or ὥσπερ καὶ οἱ π. would be needed.

699. τὴν μίαν: which disfranchised them. μίαν: stressed in contrast to πολλὰ δὴ. ταύτην is added with a certain contempt (12, 724 n., 1533). εὐφρορὰν: euphemistic for ἁμαρτίαν, as if it had been more their misfortune than their fault.

αἰτουμένοις. It is hard to decide between this and αἰτουμένων (passive with ὑμᾶς). For the middle cf. Aesch. (Cho. 2 σωτὴρ γενοῦ μοι ξίμμαχος τ' αἰτουμένω (= inf. 1127), S. c. T. 246, and for the pass. Cho. 478 αἰτούμενός μοι δὲ κράτος τῶν σῶν δόμων, Theoc. 11. 63.

700. σοφώτατοι φύσει: i.e. naturally sensible, but misled by demagogues.

701. ἐκόντες: ultra. They should rather offer than wait to be importuned or forced.

συγγενεῖς κτησώμεθα κ.τ.λ.: not merely = ποιησώμεθα, but 'let us get them (for we need them) for kinsmen, and for fully franchised, and for citizens.' The three words are intended to cover all the ground. Aliens (μέτοικοι and ξένοι), ἄτιμοι and slaves are all to be raised to (1) σιγγενεῖς, (2) ἐπίτιμοι, (3) πολῖται.

703. ταῦτ' ὀγκωσόμεσθα, 'if we are to be on our dignity in these matters.' Cf. 528 n., 748 (καὶ τοῦθ' ἡδομαι), Hom. Il. 5. 185 τάδε μάλνεται, and in Latin e.g. illud stomachor.

704. τὴν πόλιν καὶ ταῦτ' ἔχοντες κ.τ.λ. : (1) lit. 'and that too though our country is in the trough of the waves,' the last words being from Archilochus (ψυχὰς ἔχοντες κυμάτων ἐν ἀγκάλας); cf. Eur. Hel. 1062 πελαγίους ἐς ἀγκάλας, Aesch. Cho. 585 πόνται ἀγκάλας (= κοιλότητες schol.). For the metaphor cf. 361 τῆς πόλεως χειμαζομένης. καὶ ταῦτα, when praesertim cum, usually begins its clause, but there is no binding rule. Blaydes quotes Dielsch. (Comm. Frag. ii. 546) τὴν ἐσομένην καὶ ταῦτα μέτοχον τοῦ βίου. In any case emphasis will justify unusual order, and τὴν πόλιν is emphatic. (2) It is not unlike Aristoph. to pack with this another sense: 'though we hold our country in the arms of the sea,' i.e. though our existence depends on our sea-power.

[The punctuation ἀποσημννούμεθα τὴν πόλιν, καὶ . . . makes a strange accens., gives ἔχοντες, though without adv., the sense of ὄντες, and ignores the evidence of Archilochus for joining τὴν πόλιν ἔχοντες.]

706. εἰ δ' ἐγὼ ὀρθὸς ἴδῃν κ.τ.λ. From the Phoenissae (or Chalcensis) of Ion of Chios (schol.), but Aristoph. substitutes ἡ τρόπον . . . οἰμώζεται for ὧ πολίηται of his original. The infin. follows ὀρθὸς as it might ἱκανός, δυνατός, ἀγαθός, δέξιος (Thuc. 1. 70).

δοῖς: not = δς, but either (1) describes the class or (less naturally) (2) is indirect question.

707. οὐδ' : no more than Cleophon (681).

ὁ πίθηκος οὗτος: οὗτος of the well-known and with contempt (699, 724). πίθηκος to the Greeks was the type not so frequently of mimicry as of malicious cunning. According to Eubulus (Comm. Frag. iii. 260) it is ἐπίβολον κακόν. Cf. Ach. 907 ἄπερ πίθακον ἀλιτρίας πολλὰς πλέων, inf. 1085. In Er. 887 οἷς πιθηκισμοῖς με περιλαύνεις some ancients explained by ἀπάταις, others by μιμήμασιν (Neil). It here includes both.

708. Κλειγένης: nothing is known of him beyond this passage. The nickname ὁ μικρός was not rare (cf. 55 n.), but C. need not actually have borne it. [There is, of course, parody throughout these lyrics, and the original— we may perhaps guess— contained references to βασιλεῖς ὁ μέγας (= βαλανεῖς ὁ μικρός), χρηστότατος (= πονηρότατος), who ruled over the Lydian river which brought down the golden sand from the Tmolian soil (e.g. Λυδο-, κόνιος, Τμωλίας γῆς - ψευδο-, κονίας, Κιμωλίας γῆς). This would also give a point to κρατούσι.]

A βαλανεία was held in low esteem (Eq. 1403).

710-713. ὁ πονηρότατος, 'most niggardly' (cf. malignus). The keeper of public baths, to whom a small fee was paid, could be mean with the soap (ρόμμα), which might be adulterated or made with inferior materials. Modern soap is a compound of fats with (in the ordinary kinds) potash and soda. For Greek ρόμμα potash and soda formed a powder, and sometimes this, sometimes Cimolian clay (which contained soda), was used as soap.

The κονία is called κυκηστήφρος because the making involves the stirring of wood-ashes in water to produce 'lye' by extracting the alkaline salts. After evaporation the result is potash. To this is added νίτρον (or, in Attic, λίτρον), 'carbonate of soda.' In cheap soap the νίτρον would be bad, and the 'lye' (or κονία) mixed with such adulterated νίτρον is ψευδόλιτρον.

710. πονηρότατος . . . ὁπόσοι: i.e. τοίτων (or πάντων) ὁπόσοι . . . Cf. Hom. Od. 6. 150 εἰ μὲν τις θεὸς ἐστί, τοὶ οὐρανὸν ἑρὶν ἔχουσι, Xen. An. 5. 1. 8 εἰδέναι τὴν δύναμιν ἐφ' οὗ ἂν ἴωμεν.

ἄνευ ξύλου βαδίζων. Surely this means 'without his staff (or baton) of office,' not his 'walking-stick' (which every Athenian carried), but such as was borne by the dikasts, etc. We do not know what his office was, but it is certain that many citizens secured public positions through the war and would lose them if peace were made. In such a case Cleigenes would be at the mercy of his enemies. The official staff was a protection, since to assault a magistrate meant ἀτιμία. Aristoph. chooses to put it humorously that, 'with his drunken habits,' he might perhaps, 'if he had no stick,' meet with a footpad.

*If I can scan the life of man,
And tell who shall smart and how,
Not long shall we see that chimpanzee
Who is such a nuisance now,* and 707. The χαλκία ('mean bits of bronze') are referred to in Ecl. 815 τοῖς χαλκοῖς δ' ἐκείνοις ἦν ἵκα ! ἐψηφισάμεθ' οὐκ εἶσα, to which the reply is καὶ λακόν γέ μοι τὸ κόμυ' ἐγένετ' ἐκεῖνα, for, when in the act of using it, the purchaser was prevented by a proclamation that bronze was to be out of currency and silver money to be used. The schol. tells us that the bronze coins were struck 406 B.C., while the Εκτετακτικὴ belongs to the year 392. [Those who have thought that 'the new gold coinage' is attacked have been obliged to take χαλκίαι as a contemptuous term for gold debased with bronze.]

726. χθές . . ποτίσας: not τοῖς χθές κ.τ.λ., but 'though struck . . .' or 'struck as they were . . .'

τῷ κακίστῳ κόμματι, 'with that most vile stamp of currency (known to us all).'

729. παλαίστρας: i.e. properly trained in γυμναστικῇ: χοροῖς, in religion and its ceremonies: μουσικῇ, in music and letters; i.e. well-educated gentlemen. Cf. Xen. Pol. Lac. 2. 1 τίμποισιν εἰς διδασκάλων μαθησομένοις καὶ γράμματα καὶ μουσικὴν καὶ τὰ ἐν παλαίστρῃ. Only citizens could take part in the gymnasia or dance in the χοροί.

730. χαλκοῖς, cheap and worthless; ξένοις, of foreign birth; πυρρίαις, 'red-headed,' i.e. quondam slaves from Thrace and Scythia. While the three words are applied to the new citizens they are equally suitable to the base coins, as being of bronze, foreign to Attic usage, and red in tint. Πυρρίαις (like Xanthias) was a frequent name for a slave (cf. Luc. Tim. 22), and was even used generically for δοῦλοι (e.g. Pherecr. in Com. Frag. ii. 327 Μελήσιός τις πυρρίαις). Cf. the comic Latin rufus, implying seruus. Among comic masks red hair and red cheeks were 'the mark of a roguish slave' (Haigh, Att. Theat. p. 239, from Pollux). Van Leeuwen suspects that Cleophon was red-headed. For a similar metaphorical application of words of the coinage cf. Ach. 517 ἀνδράμα μαχθηρά, παρακεκομμένα,] δῖμα καὶ παρσίσημα καὶ παράφρενα.

*Our Cleigens the small,
Most mean of bathmen all
Who wickd their way o'er the ash stirred lye
And Cimolia's soil and bad alkali,
With this fact in his mind
He's to peace disinclined,
For fear some day, as he wends his way
The worse for drink and without his stick,
The footpads may play him a nasty trick.]*

718. πεπονθέναι ταῦτόν = τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον διακεῖσθαι, 'to be in the same state of mind toward . . .'

719 sq. ἔς τε . . . ἔς τε . . . 'on the one side towards those citizens who are gentlemen, on the other towards the old currency and the new gold coinage.' The 'new gold coinage,' struck in the previous year from the figures of Nike (as the schol. tells us on good authority), appears (like the 'old currency') to have been exceptionally pure, to judge by the extant specimens. These are opposed to the debased currency consisting of bronze pieces coined 'the day before yesterday.' [Prof. Murray in his translation rightly accepts this complete explanation from Mr. G. Macdonald.]

721. οὔτε . . . ὅ' (727), 'as we do not . . . so . . .'

τούτοιςιν: viz. the ἀρχαῖον νόμισμα (of silver) and the καιρὸν χρυσίον.

οὔσιν οὐ κεκιβδηλευμένοις. The treatment of participle as adj. is not specially rare, and hence another participle (of εἰμί) comes to be attached. Cf. Xen. Hell. 2. 1. 28 διεσκιδασμένων . . . τῶν ἀνθρώπων ὄντων, frag. papyrus. 470 βίον διώκησ' ὄντα πρὶν πεφυρμένον. The development is a natural outcome of e.g. κεκιβδηλευμένοι εἰσί. So in act. Eur. Hec. 358 οὐκ εἰωθὸς ὄν.

722. καλλίστοις: in purity (rather than in form).

723. ὀρθῶς κοπέισι, 'honestly struck.' Contrast with Lucian, Alc. Indoct. 2 κίβδηλα καὶ νόθα καὶ παρακεκομμένα.

κεκοδωνισμένοις: 79 n.

724. πανταχοῦ: as in modern times certain coins (e.g. the English sovereign and the French twenty-franc piece) are readily accepted and even sought for abroad. Xenophon (Vect. 3) tells how the Athenian silver coin was exchangeable πανταχοῦ at a profit.

725. τούτοις τοῖς πονηροῖς: for the contempt in τούτοις cf. Plat. Crit. 45 A οὐχ ὀρᾷς τούτοις τοῖς συκοφάντας, ὡς εὐτελεῖς;

and 707. The χαλκία ('mean bits of bronze') are referred to in Eccl. 815 τοῖς χαλκοῖς δ' ἐκείνοις ἦν ἡμεῖς | ἐψηφισάμεθ' οὐκ οἶσθα, to which the reply is καὶ λακόν γέ μοι | τὸ λόμυ' ἐγένετ' ἐκεῖνο, for, when in the act of using it, the purchaser was prevented by a proclamation that bronze was to be out of currency and silver money to be used. The schol. tells us that the bronze coins were struck 406 B.C., while the Εκκλησιάζουσα belongs to the year 392. [Those who have thought that 'the new gold coinage' is attacked have been obliged to take χαλκίους as a contemptuous term for gold debased with bronze.]

726. χθές . . κοπίσι: not τοῖς χθές κ.τ.λ., but 'though struck . . .' or 'struck as they were . . .'

τῷ κακίστῳ κόμματι, 'with that most vile stamp of currency (known to us all).'

729. παλαίστρας: i.e. properly trained in γυμναστική: χοροῖς, in religion and its ceremonies: μουσικῇ, in music and letters; i.e. well-educated gentlemen. Cf. Xen. Pol. Lac. 2. 1 πέμπουσιν εἰς διδασκάλων μαθησομένοις καὶ γράμματα καὶ μουσικὴν καὶ τὰ ἐν παλαίστρᾳ. Only citizens could take part in the gymnasium or dance in the χοροί.

730. χαλκοῖς, cheap and worthless; ξένοις, of foreign birth; πυρρῆαις, 'red-headed,' i.e. quondam slaves from Thrace and Scythia. While the three words are applied to the new citizens they are equally suitable to the base coins, as being of bronze, foreign to Attic usage, and red in tint. Πυρρῆας (like Xanthias) was a frequent name for a slave (cf. Lac. Tim. 22), and was even used generically for δοῦλος (e.g. Pherecr. in Com. Frag. ii. 327 Μιλήσιός τις πυρρῆας). Cf. the comic Latin rufus, implying seruus. Among comic masks red hair and red cheeks were 'the mark of a roguish slave' (Haigh, All. Theat. p. 239, from Pollux). Van Leeuwen suspects that Cleophon was red-headed. For a similar metaphorical application of words of the coinage cf. Ach. 517 ἀνδράρια μοχθηρά, παρακεκομμένα, | ἄτιμα καὶ παπάσημα καὶ παράξενα.

732. ὑστάτοις ἀφιγμένουςιν: without article (cf. 726) = 'last arrivals as they are.'

733. οὐδὲ φαρμακοῖσιν ἐκῇ ῥαδίως κ.τ.λ., lit. 'would not without scruple even have used at random as scarecrows.'

ῥαδίως has the sense seen in ῥαδιουργοί ('with a careless conscience'), while ἐκῇ means 'without picking and choosing among them.' For the absence of ὡς from proleptic φαρμακοῖσιν cf. Antiph. Com. Frag. iii. 57 τῶν δ' ἀκορτίων | συνδοῦντες ὀρθὰ τρία λυχναῖω χρώμεθα.

φαρμακοί, sometimes called loosely by the more general word καθάρματα, were two persons (one for the men and one for the women) kept in readiness, beaten, driven out, and put to death in purification of the state at the festival of the Thargelia (May). At this date they were in all probability condemned criminals, utilised for a rite which would otherwise have become merely symbolised. According to the schol. deformed persons were chosen. [The original notion of φαρμακός was 'medicine man' or 'magic man,' whose expulsion and destruction were supposed to have the effect of magic 'medicine' in curing the community (Harrison, Proleg. pp. 95 seq.).]

735. χρήσθαι τοῖς χρηστοῖσιν : a jingle intended to bring home the etymology ; utimini utendis ; cf. 1155.

καὶ κατορθώσασι γὰρ : καὶ does not belong to γὰρ, but answers to κἀν. 'on the one hand . . . on the other . . .'

736. ἐξ ἀξίου γοῦν τοῦ ξύλου. There was a proverb ἀπὸ καλοῦ ξύλου κἀν ἀπάγξασθαι (schol.) ; cf. Publ. Syr. 911 vel strigulari pulchro de ligno iurat. It is an aggravation of hanging to be hanged ex infelici arbore (like John Brown 'on a sour apple-tree'). Herodotus (5. 11) has the similar ἐπὶ ἀξιοχρεῶ καὶ ἀποθανεῖν ἡμίσεα συμφορῇ.

737. ἦν τι καὶ πάσχητε, πάσχειν κ.τ.λ. The tenses should be noted ('If you come to any grief) you will, even if you are (in that case) suffering anything, be thought by the wise to be suffering "on a respectable tree."')

740. τὸ δὲ μὴ πατάξαι σ' : exclamatory ; cf. 530 n.

741. ὅτι . . . ἔφασκες : a construction naturally substituted here for the more typical ἐξελεγχθῆναι with participle. ἐξελεγχθέντα φάσκοντα is by no means impossible Greek, but it would have been intolerable to combine ἐξελεγχθέντα δοῦλον ὄντα φάσκοντα εἶναι δεσπότην.

742. τοῦτο μέντοι δουλικόν εὐθὺς κ.τ.λ., 'now, in doing that, you have at once done a thing which marks the slave,' viz. in the useless and vapouring threat that the master 'would have suffered for it.'

εὐθὺς in the sense 'to begin with' includes that of 'for instance,' the notion being that we need not wait any longer for an example; cf. Aristot. Rhet. 3. 4. 6 ὥσπερ ζῶον εὐθὺς. So αὐτίκα (Ar. 166) and αὐτίκα πρῶτον (Plat. Gorg. 472c).

745. χαίρεις, ἱκετεύω; ἱκετεύω is an expletive = 'pray' (sc. tell me). 'Do you really, now?'

ἐποπτεύειν, 'to be in the seventh heaven.' The ἐπόπτης was the highest grade of μίστης, who had beheld the most sacred arcana and made sure of his place in the future life; cf. 155, 154. According to Plutarch (Isometr. 26) the step was from the Little Mysteries to the Greater, and then ἐπώπτειον τοῦλάχιστον ἀπὸ τῶν μεγάλων ἐνιαυτὸν διαλείποντες. At the mysteries themselves the ἐπόπτης was filled with an ecstatic rapture.

747. τί δὲ τονθορύζων; sc. ποιεῖς (or rather πᾶσχειν δοκεῖς, to be supplied from the last words).

748. καὶ τοῦθ' ἡδομαι: 703 n. Kühner-Gerth i. 298 sq.

749. ὥς μὰ Δί' οὐδὲν οἶδ' ἐγώ; sc. ἡδόμενος, lit. 'in such degree as I do not know (that I rejoice) in anything (else)' = 'more than in anything I know of.' For the absence of ἄλλο cf. Plut. 901 ΔΙ. σὺ φιλόπολις καὶ χρηστός; ΣΤ. ὥς οἶδεις γ' ἀνὴρ. ibid. 247.

750. ὁμόγνις Ζεῦ: an exclamation of growing excitement. The exact point of the humour of this passage appears to have been missed. There is a burlesque of the tragic ἀναγνώρισις or 'recognition-scene.' In melodrama the 'long-lost' relative used to be discovered by various indications. ['Have you a strawberry-mark on your left arm?' 'Yes!' 'Then come to my arms, my long-lost child' (which is here represented by 752 sq.).] Xanthias recognises his brother by common family traits. 'Do you mutter? Are you meddling? Do you eaves-drop?—Then you are he!'

ὁμόγνις Ζεὺς is Zeus in his capacity of guardian of the rights of kinship; cf. Ζεὺς ξένιος, φίλιος, ἐρκεῖος, Soph. Ant. 670 Δία ξύναιμον, Eur. Andr. 922 ἀλλ' ἀντομαί σε Δία καλοῦσ' ὁμόγνιον. Conversely a kindred clan recognise the common patron (deus gentiliticus).

755. ὁμομαστιγίας: a surprise for e.g. δμαιμος, ὁμοπάτριος, ὁμομήτριος. For 'the patron of our common birth' there is substituted 'the patron of our common worthlessness.' We must by no means render pointlessly and irreverently 'who is a μαστιγίας like us.' Fellow μαστιγίαι have as common patron in this relation a Ζεὺς ὁμομαστιγίας (see last note). We might perhaps render, 'God of the bond that lashes us together.'

757. τίς οὗτος κ.τ.λ. This, as a schol. saw, was not the question which X. had meant to ask, but the noise within breaks off his sentence. He might perhaps have continued with e.g. 'What have you been doing all these years?'

759. δ. πῶγμα πῶγμα κ.τ.λ. The mention of the tragedians suggests a tragic expression, the present couplet with its repeated words (cf. 1353-1355 n.) being plainly a parody. To give δ to Xanthias is to weaken the impressive solemnity of Aeneas.

πῶγμα probably contains the sense (also found in πῶγος of tragedy) 'legal action' or dispute (αἰσα); cf. 1099, Aesch. Ag. 1537 ἐπ' ἄλλο πῶγμα . . βλάβης.

761. ἐστὶ κείμενος: cf. 35 37 n., 'there exists a law in force,' whereas κεῖται would = 'a law is in force.'

762. ἀπὸ τῶν τεχνῶν κ.τ.λ. It is an error to join these words to κείμενος, as if ἀπὸ could mean ἐπὶ. They belong to what follows. The use of the resumptive αὐτὸν (764) shows that the preceding line (763) belongs to ἀπὸ κ.τ.λ. Thus lit. 'There is a law that the best among his fellow-craftsmen out of (de) all the arts which are distinguished and require ability (that man) is to receive . . .' Had the order really been νόμος τίς ἐστὶ κείμενος ἀπὸ τῶν τεχνῶν, (viz.) τὸν δριστὸν κ.τ.λ. there would have been no occasion for αὐτὸν. The best artist is 'taken from' each department.

764. σίτησιν κ.τ.λ. Rewards to Athenians who had deserved well of their country included σίτησις ἐν πρυτανείῳ and προεδρία at public gatherings. Among such persons were Olympic and other victors, and the same rule here holds in Hades.

αὐτὸν: the resumptive is more commonly τοῦτον, but cf. Eur. Bacch. 202 πατρίοις παραδοχὰς ὥς θ' ὁμήλικας χρόνῳ | κεκτήμεθ', οὐδεὶς αὐτὰ καταβαλεῖ λόγος, and Eubul. ap. Ath. 8 n. [It is possible, though far less natural, to render αὐτὸν as ἰμῶν, i.e. solūm, 'by himself,' apart from the ruck of his confrères.]

ἐν πρυτανείῳ: equally good with ἐν τῷ πρυτανείῳ: cf. 129, 320, Ely. 709 τὰν πρυτανείῳ σιτία.

765. μανθάνω. The dramatist puts a word into Xanthias' mouth simply in order to break his inaction, since there is no by-play or 'business' to engage him during this narrative. Good instances of this technical device may be seen in the conversation between Prospero and Miranda (Shak. Temp. 1. 2).

766. ὥς ἀφίκοιτο κ.τ.λ. For the opt. (as if ἐτέθη ὁ νόμος had preceded) see 21 n., and particularly the quotation from Demosthenes. Add Ελ. 133 κ καὶ τί τόνδε χρή παθεῖν; | Α. κρατεῖν, ὥς ἑτερος ἀνὴρ βδελυρώτερος | αὐτοῦ γένοιτο. For the same reason we get ἴδαι (sc. ὡς ἔφη ὁ νόμος).

768. τί δῆτα . . Αἰσχύλον; a quiet assumption that Aeschylus is of course safe enough. His νυνὶ δὲ τίς; is spoken with amazement.

769. τὸν τραγῳδικὸν θρόνον, 'the chair for tragedy,' i.e. the προεδρία in that particular department.

771. ὅτε δὴ κατήλθ', 'no sooner did Eur. come down.' The death of Euripides occurred fifty years after that of Aeschylus (456 B.C.). For Aristoph. and these poets see Introd. pp. xv sqq.

ἐπεδείκνυτο (= ἐπιδείξιν ἐποιεῖτο), 'he began to show off' to his favourite and congenial audience, one which would appreciate his immoral casuistries.

772. βαλλαντιοτόμοις. The βαλλάντιον (marsupium) was a leather pouch hanging from a girdle. Thieves cut this purse away (hence Plat. Rep. 348 ν τοὺς τὰ β. ἀποτέμνοντας). When the money was carried in the girdle (ζώνη) itself, the girdle was cut (sceler zonarius Plaut. Trim. 4. 2. 20).

774. ὅπερ ἔστ' ἐν Ἀίδου πλῆθος: an attraction for ὅπερ εἰς πλῆθος ('who are a multitude') rather than ὥν περ ἔστι . . (cf. Hdt. 5. 108 τὴν ἀκρην, αἱ καλεῖνται Κληίδες, Verg. Aen. 6. 611 quae maxima turba est (after plurals), and e.g. Pompeius, quod populi Romani lumen fuit (Cic. Phil. 5. 39).

775. τῶν ἀντιλογιῶν, 'his argumentations.' Λυγισμοί and στροφαί are words from the wrestling-school, the latter being so frequently applied to tricks of argument or rhetoric that it was borrowed by Latin (strophæ). Aristoph. is not thinking of the dialectic skill so much as of the casuistry, encouraging a loose morality welcome to these criminals.

778. καθῆστο. The allowable forms of the 3rd pers. are in Attic καθῆστο (most common), καθῆτο, ἐκάθητο (but not ἐκάθηστο). Kühner-Blass,² ii. p. 227. [The root is ἥσ- and the forms in -ητο are later than καθῆστο.]

κούκ ἐβάλλετο; 'and did he not find himself pelted?' (impers.).

779. ὁ δῆμος: as if there was an ἐκκλησία in Hades.

κρίσιν ποιεῖν: not = κρίνειν (which would require ποιέσθαι), but 'to institute (arrange) a trial.' Cf. 785 and ἐκκλησίαν ποιεῖν) (ποιέσθαι).

781. οὐράνιον γ' ὄσον: sc. ἀνεβόα. The shout went 'sky-high' (cf. it clamor caelo). So Luc. 357 οὐρανομήκη ῥήξατε φωνήν, Vesp. 1492 σάκος οὐράνιον γ' ἐκλακτίζων.

783. ὥσπερ ἐνθάδε. Aeneas and Xanthias can boast of little χρηστόν between them. The actor meanwhile makes a gesture including the audience: cf. 276 n.

785. ἀγῶνα ποιεῖν: 779 n. The division of the tribrach after the second syll. in αὐτίκα μάλα is permissible through the close union of the two words. See Starkie, Vesp. Introd. p. xl.

787. Σοφοκλῆς. Aristoph. does not use the contraction Σοφοκλῆς. The sole exception occurs in anapaestic dimeters inf. 1516 Σοφοκλεῖ (q.v.). But he uses Ἡρακλῆς, as do even the old inscriptions (Meisterhans², p. 164), and Θεμιστοκλῆς. The variation appears to be purely rhythmic, i.e. the contraction may be used in words in -κλῆς when the fourth syll. from the end is long, but not (in comedy) when it is short. Hence Ξενοκλῆς (86), Ἡρακλῆς (Arch. 530).

788. μὰ Δέ' οὐκ ἐκεῖνος: exactly our English 'not he!'; lit. 'not that (right-minded) man'; cf. 1144 οὐ δῆτ' ἐκεῖνος, ἀλλὰ . . and 1456.

ἔκυσσε μὲν: answered by νυνὶ δ' (791); 'but he kissed Aeschylus, I mean (δῆ) when he came down . . and now . .'

790. καὶ ἐκεῖνος ὑπεχώρησεν κ.τ.λ., 'and he' (once more emphatically, Sophocles) 'conceded the chair to him (Aeschylus).' The conduct of ἐκεῖνος is thus strongly opposed to that of Euripides. [The rendering 'and he (Aeschylus) yielded him a share in his seat' can only have been offered in desperation, through failure to note this force of ἐκεῖνος. Two persons cannot share a θρόνος, and if Aristoph. had meant anything so improbable as that Aeschylus was prepared to make such an offer, he would have said ὑπεχώρει.]

791. νυνὶ δ' ἔμελλεν, 'and now (in the present circumstances) he was (viz. when I left them) intending . .'

ὥς ἔφη Κλειδημίδης. We can only guess at the meaning. Alternatives are (1) that Cleidemides was a gossip, who knew all the latest news, or at least the news about Sophocles, (2) that we should render 'as Cleidemides once said' = 'to quote (the famous remark of) Cleidemides,' the allusion being to a person of that name who had once declared his intention to sit as ἐφεδρος, probably in circumstances suggesting the modern political attitude of 'sitting on a rail.' For a similar use of (ὡς) ἐφη cf. I'esp. 1183 ὦ σκαίε κάπαιδευτε, Θεογένης ἐφη, | μὺς καὶ γαλᾶς μέλλεις λέγειν ἐν ἀνδράσι ;

792. ἐφεδρος, 'third man out' (suppositicius), who waits, not necessarily (as the present place shows) to fight the winner, but to take the place of the beaten man if that man is the one whose cause he favours ; cp. [Eur.] Iliac. 119 νικῶν δ' ἐφεδρον παῖδ' ἔχεις τὸν Πηλέως ('you have him to contend with in turn'), Xen. An. 2. 5. 10, Aesch. Cho. 865 n.

794. πρὸς γ' Εὐριπίδην : the γε is contemptuous, 'with (a) Euripides, at any rate.'

796. κἀνταῦθα δὲ, 'and therefore, be sure . . .' [The line suggests a tragic origin.]

τὰ δυνά : the generic or comprehensive article, as in Soph. Aj. 312 (= 'the whole range, or all sorts, of clever devices') ; cf. Aesch. S. c. T. 581 ἐξ ἧς τὰ κεδνὰ βλαστάνει βουλευματα, Dem. 1017 φανερώς τὰ ψευδῆ μεμαρτυρήκασιν.

797. μουσική : not 'their (ῆ) literary art,' but generic.

798. μειαγωγῆσουσι τὴν τραγῳδίαν ; 'are they going to test Tragedy by butcher's weight ?' lit. 'to act the μειαγωγὴς by tragedy ?' The verb takes accus. partly on the analogy of γερονταγωγεῖν, παιδαγωγεῖν τινα, but more because of the sense, which approximates to ιστάναι 'weigh.' See also τιροπωλῆσαι τέχνην 1369 n. The usual explanation of μειαγωγεῖν is that on the third day (κουρεῶτις) of the Apaturia, when a child was enrolled in its φρατρία (418 n.), a sheep was offered as ιερεῖον (i.e. certain parts were to be burned in sacrifice, the rest to be eaten by the φράτερες). On the sheep being brought to the scales—since it was not permitted to exceed a certain maximum, in order to avoid invidious distinctions, and, on the other hand, must not fall below a certain minimum—the φράτερες called out μεῖον, μεῖον ('too small !'). That such a sacrifice was actually offered and called μεῖον is undoubted, but the explanation of the latter word is probably a Volksetymologie. The κουρεῖον was different.

799. κανόνες, 'rules,' i.e. straight pieces of wood or metal placed along surfaces to see that they are level or in line ; πήχες, 'cubit-rules' for measuring ; πλαίσια ξύπτυντα :

oblong frames, built so as to open or shut into wider or narrower shapes, in order to test the angles of rectangular bodies, or to serve as moulds. [The reading ξύπηκτα is less to the purpose and was less likely to be changed.] διαμέτρους, 'mitre-squares' (Merry) or 'bevels,' for measuring or making angles of various widths; σφήνας, to split the big words and phrases.

802. κατ' ἔπος, 'verse by verse.'

804. ἔβλεψε γοῦν: a tragic line, and in all probability taken from Aeschylus himself.

806. ἠύρισκέτην: preferred to ἠύρέτην. The process of seeking was protracted and 'they found themselves discovering a want of competent persons.' The sense is perhaps similar to that of the neg. imperf. (i.e. οἶχ' ἠύρισκέτην σοφοὺς ἀνδρας) of disappointment (Gildersleeve, Gk. Synt. § 216), but both this and the following imperfs. are best taken as descriptive or panoramic.

807. οὔτε γὰρ Ἀθηναίοισι συνέβαιν' Αἰσχύλος. The imperf. refers in the first instance to the same time as ἠύρισκέτην, not to the time of Aeschylus' life on earth. He 'refused to meet (come to terms with) the Athenians (in Hades),' i.e. to accept them as judges; cf. 175 ἐὰν ξυμῶ τί σοι. The reason of this refusal is to be sought in the alternative interpretation of which οὐ συνέβαινε admits, viz. 'he did not agree with the Athenians (when alive).' It is quite in the manner of Aristoph. to play thus upon a primary and a secondary meaning in a set of words. [The real cause of his disagreement could hardly have lain in their want of appreciation of his poetry, for the proofs of that appreciation were numerous both before and after his death. More probably it was due to their dislike of his aristocratic attitude, which was doubtless one of the reasons for bringing up against him the convenient charge of ἀσέβεια in divulging mysteries. His withdrawal to Sicily was apparently due to this unpopularity, which may also have caused some unfairness in judging his plays. It is true that Plutarch (Cim. 8) has νικήσαντος τοῦ Σοφοκλέους λέγεται τὸν Αἰσχύλον περιπαθῆ γενόμενον καὶ βαρέως ἐνεγκόντα χρόνον οὐ πολὺν Ἀθήνησι διαγαγεῖν, εἴτ' οἴχεσθαι δι' ὀργὴν εἰς Σικελίαν, and Athenaeus (347 κ) speaks of his being ἡττηθεὶς ἀδίκως, but λέγεται is not convincing, and there is nothing in our passage to show that it is the taste of the Athenians which is impugned.]

809. λῆρόν τε τᾶλλ' ἤγειτο κ.τ.λ., 'and he thought everything else (the rest of the world) a farce in the matter of forming an opinion about poets' abilities'; cf. Lys. 861 λῆρός ἐστι τᾶλλα πρὸς Κινησίαν. περὶ in this sense is more often joined with accus., yet cf. Plat. Alp. 19 c εἰ τις περὶ τῶν τοιούτων σοφός ἐστι, Xen. Cyr. 1. 5. 15 φρονίμοις περὶ τούτων.

811. ἐπέτρεψαν : sc. διαίτητῃ.

ὅτι . . ἔμπερος ἦν : as being the god of the Dionysia. ἦν refers to the time of their decision ; cf. ἔδει 767.

812 sc. ὡς ὅταν . . γίγνεται : a moral reflexion, ending the speech and scene after the sententious manner of Euripides ; probably a parody.

ἐσπουδάκωσι is perf. of a state or condition (cf. τεθαύμακα, πεφρόντικα, πεφόβημαι). There is a resemblance to the familiar quicquid delirant reges, plectuntur Achivi (Hor. Ep. 1. 2. 14), which might suggest a common source.

814-829. This chorus is of course a parody, but we do not know of what. There is no sign that it travesties the style of Aeschylus, nor should it be expected to do so, since the reference is no more to him than to Euripides. Their styles are contrasted, and we should not omit to observe how, in describing the behaviour of Euripides (826-829), the language is delicately made to slip along in sibilants (τὸ σῖγμα τὸ Εὐριπίδου), while in describing that of Aeschylus (822-825) there is a no less deliberate massiveness of sound. As we have lost the original we are compelled to miss most of the humour of the burlesque.

In point of arrangement it seems best to attribute the four-lined stanzas alternately to ἡμιχόρια α' and β'. Thus the half-chorus A describes Aesch. as the lion preparing to fight with the boar ; B then depicts a battle of chariots and horses rather from the point of view of Euripides (820) ; A returns to Aesch. with a mixture of metaphor between a lion and a storm-wind ; after which B pictures Eurip. weathering the storm. [We may, perhaps, be permitted to guess here and there at the original words. Thus in stanza 1 (814-817) ἀντιτέχνου suggests ἀντιπάλου and ὀξύλαλον perhaps ὀξύλαβῃ ; in stanza 2 (818-821) λόγων may = λόχων, σκιδναμένων παραξονίων is probable, and ῥήματα possibly answers to ἄρματα ; in stanza 4 (826-829) πλεωμόνων represents πνευμάτων, and it is probably a ship which is sterced (ναὺς ἀνελισσομένη) dividing the waves (κύματα δαιομένη).]

814. ἐπιβραμέτας. The context (cf. 822) shows that the allusion is not to Zeus (Il. 13. 624) but to the lion, the noun being understood, as in φερύκοις ('snail'), ἰδρῖς ('ant'), etc.

815. ἡνίκ' ἂν . . παρὼδῃ, 'when he takes a side-long glance at' ; cf. Aristot. H.A. 9. 45. 5 εἰ τὸ πλάγιον παρορᾷ. The construction of θήγοντος is either (1) gen. absol., or (2) after ὀδόντα, i.e. παρίδη ὀξύλαλον ὀδόντα (τοῦ) ἀντιτέχου, θήγοντος (αὐτόν). [περ ἴδη of most MSS. gives an unusual position to περ, which should belong to ἦνικ' ἀν. One similar instance is, however, found in Hom. Il. 11. 86 ἡμος δὲ δριτόμος περ ἀνὴρ ὠπλισσατο δειπνον (i.e. ἡμός περ).]

ὀξύλαλον . . ὀδόντα: the adj. is humorous; the goring tusk consists of sharp talk. [If ὀξύλαβῃ were in the original it would mean 'keen to seize an opportunity.'] θήγοντος ὀδόντα: a commonplace concerning the wild boar; cf. Eur. Phoen. 1380, [Hes.] Scut. 386, Verg. G. 3. 255 dentescue Sabellius exacuit sus.

818 sq. ἵππολόφων . . λόγων: with a change of metaphor to a chariot-fight. The language of Aesch. on the one side (τε 818) is heroic, wearing the glancing helm and the horse-hair plume (cf. 925) of the epic; that of Eur. on the other (τε 819) is 'axle-boxes of quibbles' and fine 'carvings of deeds.' These latter expressions are difficult, and, without the original, their choice can hardly be appreciated. But ἔργα are deeds in battle (ἔργα μάχης, πολεμῆα ἔργα, ἔργων ἔχουσθαι), and σμιλεῖματα ἔργων are 'fine chisellings' = 'subtle finessings' in the way of such operations. παραξόνια are either 'linch-pins' or 'naves (axle-boxes),' and this part is used for the whole ('chariot-wheels') by a common poetic device in order to direct attention to the 'whirling' of the words. The gen. defines the peculiar παραξόνια in this case: 'there will be whirling wheels—of quibbles.'

σχιναλάμων. For the application of 'splinters' to quibbles cf. Nub. 130 λόγων ἀκριβῶν σχιναλάμοις, and inf. 881. [σχινδ-, not σκινδ-, is the Attic spelling, being the nasalised form of σχιδ- 'chop.']

820. φωτὸς ἀμυνομένου κ.τ.λ.: either (1) 'of Euripides as he defends himself from the mounted phrases of Aesch., the craftsman of brain,' or (2) 'of Eurip. the subtle, as he defends himself from the hero's mounted phrases.' The former is much to be preferred since (a) the bare ἀνδρὸς would be awkward and unrhymical without a qualification and unrelated to the adjoining gen., (b) φρενοτέκτονος sounds more like a distinct compliment, Euripides being στοματοργός (826). The stock-in-trade and teacher of Aesch. are his own brain, whereas Eur. is the product of sophistry. φωτός, when placed in antithesis to ἀνδρός, naturally suggests a certain attitude of pity.

821. ῥήμαθ' ἱπποβάμονα, 'phrases mounted on horseback' (or 'in chariots'); cf. 929 ῥήμαθ' ἱπποκρημνα. The expressions of Aesch. are anything but πεζά (πεζαία). ῥήμα is wider than δρῶμα ('word'), and includes either a phrase compressed into a word or a phrase itself (cf. 1155). The reference is not to the length of the compounds of Aesch. (for in point of fact examination shows that these do not exceed those of Eur.), but partly to the boldness of these, partly to the boldness of his condensed metaphors; cf. Pac. 521 ῥῆμα μυριάμφορον and the expression ἀμαξιαῖα ῥήματα.

822 823. φρίξας . . βρυχώμενος. We return to the lion (cf. Il. 17. 1136 πάν δέ τ' ἐπισκύνιον κάτω ἔλκεται ὅσσε λαλίπτων, and note βρυχώμενος), but he is speedily confused with a Giant storm-wind. Though φρίσσειν is strictly intrans., it may of course take accus. of the hair or other part affected; cf. Hom. Od. 19. 446 φρίξας εὖ λοφίην. [Hes.] Scut. 391.

αὐτοκόμου. There is nothing artificial (no πηνίκη or φανάκη) about Aeschylus. When his terrible hair bristles up, it is his own.

824-825. ῥήματα γομφοπαγῇ . . φυσήματα. It is impossible to relate this logically to what precedes. The φύσημα is that of a γίγας, e.g. Τυφῶς (845) or other hurricane-powers; cf. Aesch. Aq. 696 Ζεφύρου γίγαντος αἶσα. Such a wind tears off the close-rivetted timbers (δοῦρατα γομφοπαγῇ) of ships and buildings. Here, since the ῥήματα are those of Aesch. himself, we must take it that they are heavy phrases from his own works, which he rips off and sends whirling at the enemy. With ἀποσπῶν cf. 802.

826. στοματοργὸς)(φρενοτέκτονος (820).

827. ἀνελισσομένη, 'unwinding itself' (as being supple); but there is also an allusion to a ship in a storm, which ἐλίσσεται in answer to the rudder. In χαλινοῖς the nautical metaphor ('tackle') also underlies the more obvious sense of 'shaking the reins' (i.e. giving full speed; cf. σελεῖν χαλινοῖς). By 'tacking about' and dexterously 'managing the ropes' the ship brings to nought the 'labour of breath' of the storm.

828. ῥήματα δαιόμενη : breaking up the ῥήματα of Aeschylus and whittling them away by critical carping in detail.

A. *With dreadful wrath of his inmost heart
Will he rage, that lion of mighty roar,
When he looks askance at his rival smart
Giving his tusk, like a cunning boar,
Its keenest edge for a wordy war.
In frenzy of soul
His eyes will roll.*

- B. *Then will he frays where the helmets shine,
Frays of words with the horse-hair crest :
A whirl of quibbles, and chisellings fine
Of the chiel' who does his manful best
To repuls' each charge of the prancing line
Manœuvred amain
By the man of brain.*
- A. *But up will he bristle his bushy mane,
The crest that is all his genuine hair ;
He'll grimble frown and he'll roar again ;
From their clamps like so many planks he'll tear
The massive words, and hurl 'em amain
With a blast loud blown
As the Titan's own.*
- B. *The other his slippery tongue will unwind,
Fine taster of words, fine judge of effect :
To envy and malice and all that's unkind
He'll give loose rein ; he'll mince and disswet, Till he quibbles away all the sense he can find Contained among
That labour of lung.]*

830 sq. The scene is now the interior of Pluto's palace. There would be a number of κωφὰ πρόσωπα present besides the principals Aeschylus, Euripides, Dionysus, and Pluto. The two slaves, Xanthias and Aeacus, are now performing the parts of the poets. μὴ νουθέται is plainly not addressed to Aeschylus nor to Dionysus, but to some one represented as dissuading Euripides. [μεθείην cannot stand, since the act., as in ἀνίημι, is only used with gen. when one lets go 'some degree' of a thing, e.g. χόλον, μάχης.]

832. τοῦ λόγου, 'the plea' or 'statement of the case,' not 'his words,' which would be flat and would require τῶν λόγων.

833 sq. ἀποσεμνυνεῖται (sc. ταῦτα) . . ἄπερ . . ἐτεπατεύετο. For the contained accus. cf. 12 n. 'He will put on the fine airs of reserve with which he used to act the wonder-monger.'

835. ὦ δαμόνι' ἀνδρῶν: in remonstrance (175) to Euripides, μὴ μεγάλα λίσαν λέγε, 'do not take too high a tone.' We should not render 'boast,' since there was none in the remark. μέγα (and μεγάλα) λέγειν takes its precise meaning from the context.

836. ἐγῶδα τοῦτον: sc. ὁποῖός ἐστι; cf. Eur. Med. 39 ἐγῶδα τήνδε, δειμαίνω τέ νιν.

διασκεμμαι πάλαι: not to be confused with the idiomatic present πάλαι διασκοπῶ. The perf. represents a conclusion long ago reached.

837. ἀγριοποιόν. Since all the rest of the terms refer to style and expression, we must not take this of his subject matter in the sense of the schol., ἀγρίους εἰσάγοντα καὶ ὤμοις τοὺς ἥρωας, but as = ἀγρίως ποιῶντα, 'writing like a savage' (as Voltaire said of Shakespeare).

838. ἀχάλινον ἀκρατὲς ἀθύρωτον: see 204 n. With ἀθύρωτον cf. ἀθυρόστομος, Eur. Hipp. 886 ταδε μὲν οὐκέτι στόματος ἐν πύλαις καθέξω, and the Homeric ποιόν σι ἔπος φήγεν ἔρκος ὀδόντων;

839. ἀπεριλάλητον: a word commonly misinterpreted. Lit. 'uninstructed in περιλαλία,' just as in the famous μηδεὶς ἀγεωμέτρητος εἰσὶν the adj. = 'uninstructed in γεωμετρία.' To Euripides the true style is that of the περιλάλος—chatterbox and circumlocutory. Of that poet himself the comedian Teleclides (Com. Frag. ii. 372) has Εὐριπίδης δ' ὁ τὰς τραγωδίας ποιῶν τὰς περιλαλοῦσας οὕτως ἐστὶ τὰς σοφάς. The schol. is, after all, right, though inadequate, with his οὐκ εἰδότα λαλεῖν. [The usual rendering loquacitate non superaudium (Blaydes), 'not to be out-talked' (Merry), can indeed be got from the word, but is quite inappropriate.]

κομποφακελορρήμονα: i.e. he makes ρήματα which are sagittae (φάκελοι) of condensed expression and are bold and pretentious (κομπώδεις). The reference is not to compound words but to close-packed phrases.

840. ὦ παῖ τῆς ἀρουραίας θεοῦ, 'O son of the agricultural goddess.' Cleito, the mother of Euripides, is called by Aristoph. (Theam. 387, cf. ibid. 456) λαχανοπωλήτρια ('green-grocer'), and, according to Aulus Gellius (15. 20), she was said by Theopompus (fourth cent. B.C.) agrestia holera vendentem victum quasivisse. Cf. Ach. 478, Eq. 19. For the same taunt the comedian here utilises one of Euripides' own verses, ἀληθες, ὦ παῖ τῆς θαλασσίας θεοῦ; (i.e. Achilles, son of Thetis), probably from the Telephus.

841. σὺ δὲ μὴ ταῦτ'; ac. λέγεις. MSS. have δὴ με; but the sense is manifestly 'don't talk that way of me!' Cf. Ach. 568 ταῦτα λέγεις σὺ τὸν στρατηγὸν πτωχὸν ὦν; στομυλίσσυσλεκτάδη. Comedy is fond of patronymics (cf. 966) used with various belittling implications: 'you (son of a) scraper-together of baubles' = 'you poor gleaner of small talk'; i.e. the matter of Eur. is often trivial chatter, and unoriginal at that.

842. πτωχοποιὲ καὶ ῥακιοσυρραπτάδῃ. 'poet of beggars and stitcher of rags.' Aristoph. dislikes the stage-devices of Euripides for exciting compassion by outward signs of misery. The true artistic manner of arousing the ἔλεος καὶ φόβος of the spectators is, according to the best Greek taste and the reasoning of Aristotle, by means of the structure (σύστασις) of the piece and the inherent appeal of the tragic situation itself. Eurip. had brought Oeneus, Philoctetes, Bellerophon, Telephus, Thyestes, Ino and others upon the stage in poverty and rags; Bellerophon, Philoctetes and Telephus were also lame (hence χωλοποιόν 846). The whole passage in the Acharnians 410-455 should be read. Cf. inf. 1063.

843. οὐ τι : no longer part of current Attic (for οὐδέν) except in this phrase.

844. καὶ μὴ . . κότῳ : evidently a line of Aesch., quoted against himself.

845. οὐ δῆτα : sc. παίσομαι.

846. χωλοποιόν : 842 n. Note, however, that χωλός can be used of any maiming.

847. ἄρν' ἄρνα μέλανα κ.τ.λ. Victims (σφαγία) to the Chthonian powers, including the Titanic and Earthborn (e.g. Typhos), were black; the animals offered (ιερεῖα) to the celestials were white. In Verg. Aen. 3. 120 nigrum Hicmi pseudem, Zephyris felicibus albam the distinction implies that the Zephyrs, being kindly, are treated as celestial (Harrison, Proleg. c. ii σφαγία).

848. Τυφῶς : personified, otherwise παρασκευάζεται would scarcely be used. Typhos (or Τυφών, Τυφωεύς) was son of Tartarus and Gaia.

ἐκβαίνειν : ἐξέρχεσθαι is a vox propria of winds; Eq. 430 ἔξειμι γάρ σοι λαμπρὸς ἤδη καὶ μέγας.

849. Κρητικὰς . . μονωδίας. The allusion appears to be double: (1) to what were considered the immoralities in plays of Euripides dealing with Crete or Cretans (e.g. the Κρήτες, Κρήσσαι, and possibly Phaedra in the Hippolytus), (2) to what was regarded as inartistic innovation in his introduction of Cretan ὑπόρχήματα into his tragedies. In the Cressai Acropolis, in the Cretes (apparently) Pasiphae, were concerned in matter open to reproach. In the latter piece there was a μονωδία of Icarus (schol.). The ὑπόρχημα consisted of a solo in which the singer accompanied his song with a more or less pantomimic δραχσις. Instances are to be seen in Or. 960 seq., 1369 seq., Phoen. 301 seq. By introducing these Euripides reduces the

συλλέγων: the word denies his originality.

851. ὦ πολυτίμητ': addressing him as if he were a god - the god of hail. Cf. Ach. 759 (corn is) πολυτίματος, ὅπερ τοι θεός. Plato (Euthyphr. 296 n) has ὦ πολυτίμητε. Εὐθύδημε, but the ironical application of words in Plato has always to be taken into account.

852. πόνηρ, 'wretched'; cf. Thuc. 8. 97 πονήρων τῶν πραγμάτων γενομένων. [The grammarians tell us that πονηρός, μοχθηρός is the accentuation in the moral sense, otherwise πόνηρος, μόχθηρος.]

854. κεφαλαίῳ ῥήματι: variously interpreted as (1) 'a phrase as big as your head,' the termination -αῖος (regularly -αῖος) being suggested by e.g. ἀμαξιαῖος, πηχιαῖος. If this were so, we might suspect that exceptionally large hailstones were sometimes called κεφαλαῖαι; (2) 'a topping phrase' (capitali), i.e. one fit to form the κεφαλὴ of a structure; cf. κεφαλῆς λίθος, γωνίαῖον ῥῆμα. The latter has the better warrant, and includes the point 'with a stone which is a head-stone indeed' (in that it strikes the head).

855. Θενὼν ὑπ' ὀργῆς: the line is tragic in metre and is evidently a semi-quotation.

τὸν Τήλεφον: humorously for τὸν ἐγκέφαλον. Euripides' brains are represented by his Telephus (and, in the opinion of Aristophanes, that does not say much for them).

857. Ἐλεγχ' Ἐλέγχου: cf. 861 δάκνειν δάκνεσθαι. The vivacious omission of καὶ or τε καὶ (Plat. Gorg. 462 A ἐλεγχέ τε καὶ ἐλέγχου) occurs chiefly with words expressive of either reciprocity or antithesis. Cf. Eur. Suppl. 700 ἐκτεῖνον ἐκτείνοντο.

859. ὥσπερ πρίνος ἐμπρησθεὶς βοᾷς. The rhythm rather makes for joining the participle to σὺ than to πρίνος, and the sense 'you at once, when you get on fire, begin crying out, like holm-oak' is in the Greek manner. In any case εὐθύς belongs to βοᾷς, since it is not the kindling of πρίνος which is immediate, but the crackling which ensues immediately upon the kindling. Among plants which made a loud crackling were πρίνοι, δάφνη (Diogen. Com. Frag. vi. 52), ἀμπέλως (Luc. 612). For the πρίνος cf. Ach. 667.

861. δάκνειν δάκνεσθαι: 857 n. The metaphor is from cockfighting or quailfighting. Cf. Eg. 495 μέμνησόνιν | δάκνειν, διαβάλλειν, τοῖς λόφους κατεσθίειν. The words τᾶπη, τὰ μέλη etc. (accus. resp. with δάανεισθαι) answer to parts of the bird's body. μέλη ('lyric tunes') manifestly puns on the sense 'limbs,' and νεῦρα = 'sinews' in both the physical and metaphorical meanings. The other words (Πηλέα etc.) doubtless also contain similar puns which we cannot trace.

862. τᾶπη, 'the verses' (of the dialogue), i.e. their qualities as such. τὰ μέλη: the lyrics and their music. τὰ νεῦρα: the firm-knit structure of the piece. Together these cover what Aristotle in the Poetics calls λέξις, μελοποιία and μῦθος (or σίστασις τῶν πραγμάτων).

863. καὶ νῆ Δία τὸν Πηλέα κ.τ.λ., lit. 'yes, and my Pelus etc.' Of all these plays we possess fragments. The tone in καὶ νῆ Δία does not imply that Eur. thinks less of these plays than others (though Ar. may), but rather the contrary. The Acrolus and Telephus have (at least by implication) been assailed by Aeschylus, and Eur. is willing to submit them to the test. In καὶ τὸν Τηλέφον he permits even his chef-d'œuvre to be treated in this way.

Πηλέα: either Πηλέα (a quantity occasionally found in Euripides, e.g. φονέα Hec. 882, El. 763) or Πηλέα (cf. 76, Soph. Aj. 104 Ὀδυσσεά etc.). The scansion here (whichever it may be) is identical with that in Soph. fr. 434 Πηλέα τὸν Αἰάκειον οἰκουρὸς μόνῃ . .

866. ἐβουλόμην: not = ἐβ. ἄν but lit. 'I was wanting (before the decision was come to).' The idiom is not rare in this word; cf. Aeschin. Ctes. 2, Lucian, V.A. 17, Tim. 52 etc., and the similar uses of ἔδει, ἐχρῆν etc. Goodwin, M. and T. §§ 415 sq.

868. ὅτι ἡ πόησις οὐχὶ συντέθνηκέ μοι: a neat turn. When Eur. died, his poetry died, while that of Aesch. lived on. There is also an allusion to the unique distinction bestowed upon Aeschylus in permitting his plays to be reproduced after his death in competition with the 'new tragedies' (schol. on Ach. 10 says this was done ψηφίσματι κοινῷ). See Haigh, Tragic Drama etc. p. 59. During the next century, however, when old plays were habitually reproduced, it was Sophocles and Euripides, not Aeschylus, who were popular (ibid. p. 121).

869. ὥσθ' ἔξει λέγειν, 'so that he will be in a position to quote.'

871. λιβανωτὸν κ.τ.λ.: trials and contests, like other great undertakings, were inaugurated with sacrifice; cf. Vesp. 860. Dionysus is here the ἀγωνοθέτης of a wrestling-match.

872. ὅπως ἂν εὐξωμαι: Aristoph. uses ὅπως ἂν with subjunct. or ὅπως with fut., but not ὅπως alone with subjunctive.

σοφισμάτων: substituted for e.g. παλαισμάτων, as in the next line μουσικώτατα for e.g. δικαιώτατα or ὀσιώτατα.

873. ἀγώνε . . τόνδε κ.τ.λ. The line is tragic in metre and in the omission of the article. [For the latter, however, it must be said that, since the article proper was no part of the older language, the omission may have been familiar in an old-established formula of prayer.]

ὑψάσατε, 'sing to accompany (my offering).'

875 sqq. In these lyrics we must assume a play upon certain agonistic or gymnastic words at which we can only guess. This is sufficiently indicated by στρεβλοῖσι παλαισμοῖσι and the general tone, which is in keeping with the last speech of Dionysus; cf. 902 sqq. n. [γνωμοτύπων (877) suggests ἀντιτύπων or the like, στομάτοι (880) represents σωμάτοι, and probably ῥήματα (881) = ἄμματα or στρέμματα. The word παραπρίσματα (881) is at least connected in the mind with πρίω in the sense 'grip,' for which cf. Soph. Aj. 1030 ζωστήρι πρισθεις ἱππικῶν ἐξ ἀντίγων and πρισμός = βίαία κατοχή (Hesych.). Jobb quotes Oppian, Hal. 2. 138 ἰσχει τ' ἐμπρίει τε. See editor's note also on Aesch. (ho. 424 ἀπρικτόπλακτα.) In wrestling the Greeks (like the Japanese) laid special emphasis on nimble devices as opposed to mere strength. These were carefully studied (hence the suitability of ξυνετὰς, ὀξυμερήμοις, πορίσασθαι). Plutarch (Symposiaci 2. 4:) has it that wrestling is τεχνικώτατον καὶ πανουργώτατον τῶν ἀθλημάτων.

877. γνωμοτύπων: cf. Elj. 1378 σινερκτικός γάρ ἐστι καὶ περαντικός, ; καὶ γνωμοτυπικός καὶ σαφής καὶ κροιστικός, Theom. 53 (of Agathon) γνωμοτυπεῖ. It was an aim of sophistic training in rhetoric that the student should coin γνώμαι (sententiae). Cratinus invented a word γνωμοδιώκτης; cf. 1059.

879. δύναμιν: cf. λόγων δύναμις (eloquence), δυνατὸς λέγειν.

880. πορίσασθαι: with δαινοτάτοι.

881. ῥήματα: this word refers specially to Aeschylus, παραπρίσματα to Euripides. The '(big) phrases' of Aesch. (839, 851) are compared with the other's '(fine) bits sawn off' (for this seems the natural meaning of παραπρίσματα, not 'sawdust'). With the latter cf. Plat. Hipp. Ma. 301 ἀ κρίσματα τοῖ ἐστι καὶ περιτμήματα τῶν λόγων. ἐπὶν belongs only to παραπρίσματ'. [For the play on wrestling terms see note to 875 sqq.]

886. Δήμητερ κ.τ.λ. The schol. calls this a line of Aeschylus, and Fritzsche naturally guesses that it comes from his Eleusini. The tragedian was born at Eleusis, or, as the technical phrase went, ἦν Ἐλευσίνιος τῶν δῆμων (τὸν δῆμον wrongly schol.).

887. εἶναί με κ.τ.λ. : 387 n.

888. καλῶς, 'No, thanks!' cf. 508.

889. ἑτέροι κ.τ.λ. There is no justification for this charge in the extant works of Euripides. He is a sceptic as to the traditional character of the gods of the myths, and sometimes clearly expresses such philosophic doubt (e.g. Tro. 884 sqq.), but he introduces no new deities.

θεοῖς : the attraction (for θεοί) is hardly to be illustrated by 891 (q.v.) but rather by e.g. Aesch. Suppl. 1040 πόθοι ᾗ τ' οὐδὲν ἄπαρρον | τελέθει θέλκτορι Πειθοῖ, Eur. Hec. 771 πρὸς ἀνδρ' ὅς ἀρχεῖ τῆσδε Πολυμήστωρ χθονός, Thesm. 502 ἐτέραν δ' ἐγὼ δ' ἢ φασκεν ὠδίνειν γυνή, Ter. Andr. (prol.) populo ne placcent quas fecissent fabulas.

890. κόμμα καινόν, 'a new coinage'; cf. Λυβ. 248 θεοί | ἡμῖν νόμισμ' οὐκ ἐστί. So Socrates was alleged καινὰ δαιμόνια εἰσάγειν.

891. ἰδιώταις : not = ἰδίους. The word takes its meaning from the context, being opposed either to a public man or to any sort of τεχνίτης, as the layman or non-expert to the professional. The gods of Euripides are 'unprofessional,' not in public 'practice.'

892 sq. αἰθήρ κ.τ.λ. The sounds are made suggestive of real divinities. Thus ὀσφραντήριοι recalls such titles as προστάτηριοι, ἀλεξητήριοι, and μυκτήρες has a formal kinship with e.g. σωτήρες. In view of βόσκημα it is perhaps natural to find in γλώττης στρόφιγξ a play on γλώττης τροφεῖς, especially as στροφεῖς is another form of στρόφιγξ. It was common to deify Γῆ; then why not Αἰθήρ? The divinities chosen are those of sophistic acuteness and glibness. Euripides is classed with Socrates as belonging to the school of Anaxagoras, of which the popular conception was, of course, quite inaccurate. In the Clouds Socrates says (264) ὦ δέσποτ' ἀναξ ἀμέτρητ' Ἀήρ . . λαμπρὸς τ' Αἰθήρ, and ibid. 424 he enumerates as a trinity τὸ Χάος τοῦτ' καὶ τὰς Νεφέλας καὶ τὴν γλῶτταν, τρία ταῦτ'. In the case of Euripides it was easy for a contemporary to suppose that 'Air' was his god; cf. his frag. incert. 941 ὁρᾷς τὸν υἱοῦ

τόνδ' ἀπειρον αἰθέρα | . . . τοῦτον νόμιζε Ζῆνα, τόνδ' ἡγοῦ θεόν (translated by Cicero, N. D. 2. 25. 65). Democritus also identifies αἴθρ with Ζεὺς (fr. 5).

ἐμὸν βόσκημα, 'my nutriment'; cf. Nub. 569 μεγαλώνυμον ἡμέτερον πατέρ' | αἰθέρα σεμνότατον βιοθρέμμουα πάντων and ibid. 330. It is implied that the air is an unsubstantial and flatulent diet, fit for a sophist's brain.

γλώττης στρόφιγξ: cf. Nub. 792 γλωττοστροφεῖν.

893. μυκτῆρες. On the one hand we have μυκτηρίζειν, μυκτηρισμός of sneering or 'turning up the nose' (cf. Hor. S.
1. 6. 5 nasus supercilios adhaerco), on the other the sense (shown in ὀσφραντήριοι) of sagacious sniffing or 'nosing out' a matter (ῥῖνα κριτικὴν Poseid. fr. 1). The two meanings may very well go together.

894. ὀρθῶς μ' ἐλέγχειν: 387 n., 887.

ὦν ἂν ἀπτωμαι λόγων. Though this may be taken as an attraction for λόγους (cf. 889 n.), it is equally possible to construe 'that I may bring confutation, whatsoever arguments I come to grips with.' ἀπτωμαι keeps up the wrestling metaphor.

895. καὶ μὴν ἡμεῖς γ', 'well, we may tell you, we . . .'; cf.
106 n.

896. τίνα λόγων ἐμμέλειαν ἔπιτε δαίαν ὁδόν: so MSS. Apart from the uncertain metrical question, the construction (which is taken from some parodied lyric) is simple enough. Lit.
'what λόγων ἐμμέλεια you will enter upon, (in) hostile onset.'
δαίαν ὁδόν is the cognate or adverbial accus. with ἔπιτε, while ἐμμέλειαν is the direct accus. of the thing traversed or treated (obire). [Some might prefer to call δαίαν ὁδόν 'accus.
in apposition to the verbal action.'] There is a play upon different senses of ἐμμέλεια as (1) τὸ ἐμμελές, elegance of speech,
(2) the tragic dance (opposed to the comic κόρδαξ and σίκιννις),
'(tragic) dance of argument.' We may perhaps render by 'what elegant tragic dance you are going to lead each other.'

897. γλῶσσα . . . ἡγρίωται. If we reduce these words to terms of the palaestra, γλῶσσα stands for σῶμα and ἡγρίωται for ἡκρίβωται ('trained to perfection')

899. οὐδ' ἀκίνητοι φρένες, 'nor are their wits (for stratagems) sluggish.' That this is the meaning of φρένες should appear from the natural list of a wrestler's qualities, viz.
condition (σῶμα, here γλῶσσα), pluck (λῆμα), quick wit (φρένες); cf. note to 875 sqq.

901. sq. τὸν μὲν: Euripides.

κατερρινημένον, 'sined down,' with a play upon the senses of 'siling' a literary or rhetorical style (cf. limatus, limae labor) and of sinning down the body; cf. Aesch. Suppl. 717 θάλπει βραχίον' εὖ κατερρινημένοις, where the schol. explains by καλῶς ἐν ἡλίῳ γεγυμνασμένοις.

903 κρη. τὸν δ' ἀνασπῶντ' κ.τ.λ. The wrestling style of Aeschylus is less cunning but more vehement. A clear and consistent sense of the whole passage is rather difficult to elicit. That the metaphor of the palaestra is kept up is evident from ἀλινδήθρας. The ἀλινδήσις or κύλισις was the form of wrestling in which, as opposed to the πάλη ὀρθή, the opponents struggled on the ground. The ἀλινδήθρα is the place for such a contest (ἡ κατὰ πάλην κοίσις Eustath. ; cf. κρεμάθρα, κολυμβήθρα etc.), and there is no authority for making it equivalent to ἀλινδήσις itself. The explanation of a schol. στροφάς, πλοκάς τοῦ Εὐριπίδου is but a loose guess, and the 'long-rolling words' of Liddell and Scott is untenable. [The rendering cannot be 'wrenching up (sc. the words), will rush in and scatter many rolling-places of verses with words root and all.' This does not correspond to anything done in wrestling, nor is the construction of σισκεδᾶν defensible. The only natural rendering of σισκεδᾶν ἀλινδήθρας is 'scatter the wrestling-ring all about' (i.e. the sandy ground). Nor can we accept 'falling upon him with words (torn up) root and all, he will make havoc of many a rolling-place of verses.' In wrestling one does not fall upon an opponent with a club after the manner of the giant Eucelaus (evulsis truncis Hor. lil. 3. 4. 55).]

We are therefore reduced to a choice between (1) 'Snatching him up, with his arguments root and all, he will fall upon him and make havoc of many a wrestling-ground of verses'; i.e. Aesch. will lift his opponent, throw him, and go through the ἀλινδήσις, scattering the ἀλινδήθρα about in his vehemence: = ἀνασπᾶσει αὐτὸν καὶ ἐμπεσὼν σισκεδᾶ, the present ἀνασπῶντα expressing the repeated action of the several bouts, while ἐμπεσόντα is modal with σισκεδᾶν; or (2) '(but the other) using his words root and all, as he tears them up, will fall upon him etc.' In this case ἀνασπῶντα . . . λόγοισιν (modal dat.) is descriptive of the style of Aeschylus in the verbal wrestling, not of any weapon. This gives to ἀνασπᾶν a sense elsewhere found of language (λόγοις ἀνέσπα Soph. Aj. 302), makes an antithesis of the great unpolished diction (λόγοι αὐτόπρεμοι) of Aesch. with the 'sined' language of Euripides, and is therefore to be preferred.

The several sets of verses which are to be treated form the wrestling-grounds for successive bouts.

905. οὕτω. We might construe (1) οὕτω δὲ (χρὴ λέγειν), ὅπως ἐρεῖτον . . . , (2) ὅπως δὲ οὕτω(ς) ἐρεῖτον ἀστεῖα ('see that you just say bright things,' (3) 'see that you talk in the following way, viz. smart things.' The last is rather awkward; the second is easily supported, so far as οὕτω is concerned (see 625 οὕτω δὲ βασάνιζ' ἀπαγαγών and note), but the position of ὅπως is unusual; the first is without objection, and οὕτως ὅπως was a recognised combination; cf. Soph. El. 1296 οὕτω δ' ὅπως μήτηρ σε μὴ 'πιγνώσεται (i.e. οὕτω δὲ ποιεῖ ὅπως . . .), Ach. 929 ἐνδύσον . . οὕτως ὅπως μὴ καὶ φέρων κατάρξει.

906. ἀστεῖα: 5 n. In this line Aristoph. virtually reassures his audience as to what is coming.

εἰκόνas: not 'similes,' but 'drawing comparisons,' in the sense of the εἰκασμα which was σκῶμμα καθ' ὁμοιότητα; cf. Iscr. 1308 εἶτ' αὐτὸν ὡς εἶδ', ἤκασεν Λυσίστρατος ('drew a comparison'). "Ἰοίκας, ὦ πρεσβῦτα, νεοπλοῖτ' Φρυγί, | κλητῆρ' τ' εἰς ἀχυρμόν ἀποδεδρακότι." Such 'odious comparisons' were a familiar exercise of Athenian wit, and were one form of the hackneyed (οἶ' ἂν ἄλλος εἰποι); cf. Nub. 559 where the comparison of El. 864 is called εἰκὼν. [Otherwise we might render 'neither similitudes (such as Aesch. is fond of), nor platitudes (such as Eur. affects'). But this is rather too much to extract from the words. Moreover Euripides and Aeschylus both employ similes and metaphors, and at least metaphors are freely used in the coming altercation.]

907. καὶ μὴν . . γε: to be joined; cf. 106 n.

908. ἐν τοῖσιν ὑστέτοις κ.τ.λ. This, with the forensic τοῦτον, sounds like a commonplace in rhetorical exordia.

910. μέρους κ.τ.λ.: the opinion of the innovator Euripides, not of Aristophanes, who admired Phrynichus.

παρὰ Φρυνίχῳ, 'in the school of Phrynichus.' Phryn. produced plays 511-476 B.C. In the development of tragedy he lies between Thespis (circ. 535) and Aeschylus (flor. 499-456), and may be regarded as the first to give it a true artistic shape, by constructing a serious (though slender) plot, composing lyric choruses of a higher type in both language and music, and devising dances of greater excellence. His chorus (consisting still of fifty persons) sang the bulk of the play. His best known pieces were the Μιλήτου ἄλωσις and the Φοίνισσαι. For the appreciation of his songs cf. Ar. 750, Vesp. 220. To him belongs the famous line (borrowed by Gray) λάμπει δ' ἐπὶ πορφύραις παρῆσι φῶς ἔρωτος.

911. ἕνα τιν' ἄν καθίσεν: for the iterative ἄν with nor. see Goodwin, M. and T. § 162, and inf. 914, 920. [καθίσεν is the older, ἐκάθισα the later Attic form. καθεῖσα is epic and lyric.] ἕνα is to be reckoned with: 'some solitary person.'

ἐγκαλύψας: in sign of grief; cf. Hom. Od. 8. 92 κατὰ κράτα καλυψάμενος γοάσκειν, Eur. Suppl. 110.

912. Ἀχιλλεία: in the Φρίγες (= Εκτορος λίτρα) says the schol., and the writer of the Life of Aeschylus states that in this play Ἀχιλλεὺς ἐγκεκαλυμμένος οὐ φθέγγεται πλὴν ἐν ἀρχαῖς ἀλίσσας πρὸς Ἑρμῆν ἀμοιβαῖα.

Νιόβην: in the Niobe she is represented as sitting speechless at the tomb of her children for the third part of the play (Auct. Vit. Aesch.).

τὸ πρόσωπον κ.τ.λ., 'not showing who the character (persona) was' (rather than 'their face').

913. πρόσχημα: the sense of the word depends on the context. It is something 'put forward,' whether as a pretext or a fine sample. In Plat. Hipp. Ma. 286 ἄ πρόσχημα δέ μοι ἐστι καὶ ἀρχὴ τοιαύδε τις τοῦ λόγου the use is similar to that here, which is rather hard to crystallise in English, but amounts to 'a showy introduction.' The picture in front of a modern show, or the setting-out of a shop-window (cf. Fr. italer), would be a πρόσχημα. In Aeschylus the piece (ἡ τραγωδία) which is to come is thus showily advertised.

γρύζοντας οὐδὲ τουτί, 'without even thus much of a mutter' (= 'without so much as a mutter'). Cf. Plut. 17 καὶ ταῖτ' ἀποκρινομένῳ τὸ παράπαν οὐδὲ γρύ. The lax plural is adapted to the sense. τουτί is deictic, with a snap of the fingers: cf. τιννοίτω 139.

914. οὐ δῆθ': sc. ἐγρύζον οὐδέ.

ἤραδεν . . ἄν, 'would go on hurling' (cf. 911). The 'strings of lyrics' are sufficiently illustrated in the Suppliants and Agamemnon. Any recognised arrangement of the lyrics, e.g. strophe + antistrophe + epode, would form one 'string.' τέτταρας is not to be taken literally, but = 'three or four' (Eq. 412, Ach. 2); cf. the use of ὀκτώ, ἐλααίδεα (551).

918. ὁ δαίνα. 'What's-his-name,' 'our gentleman,' 'the party.' The expression may (but does not necessarily) imply contemptuous or irritated impatience or forgetfulness (cf. Thesm. 620 sq.). Here it is commonly taken to refer to Aeschylus, but there is nothing dramatically natural in making Dionysus appear to have forgotten that poet's name, and, if it really so refers, we must regard it as a colloquial indirectness (like τις 552, 554) = 'why did a certain person act like this?' But why should it not rather mean the silent character in his plays?

919. καθῆτο. MSS. give καθόιτο, but there is no doubt about the real 'athematic' form (= καθ-η-ι-το) as in κεκλήμην, κεκτῆμην, μεμνήμην, in which the -η- is an indispensable part of the root. Copyists found these forms strange, and corruption was made easier by the identical pronunciation of -η- and -οι- in later Greek. [In Lys. 149 the MSS. have kept εἰ . . καθήμεθ' simply because the word was thought to be indicative. In Plut. 991 all good MSS. have μεμνήτο.]

920. τὸ δρᾶμα δ' ἂν διήει, 'the play would be getting on' (towards its end, while the spectators were still waiting for the figure to say something).

923. ἐπειδὴ ληρήσειε καὶ . . μεσοίη: the tenses in the frequentative opt. are as much to be distinguished as in ἐπειδὴ ἐλήρησε καὶ τὸ δρᾶμα (ἤδη) ἐμέσου.

924. βόεα. 'fit for an ox,' i.e. of ponderous size and bellowing sound. The writer doubtless had in mind the magnificatory compounds in βο-, e.g. βοῦλιμοι, βοῶπις.

925. ὀφρύς ἔχοντα κ.τ.λ.: i.e. of haughty and intimidating sort: cf. ὀφρύς αἰρεῖν, ἀνελεταῖς ὀφρύσι σεμνός and supercilium. Antipater (Anth. Pal. 7. 39) says of Aesch. ὁ τραγικὸν φῶνημα καὶ ὀφρυόεσσαν ἀοδὴν | περιώσας. With λόφους cf. 818. In Aesch. S. c. T. 517 Tydeus τρεῖς κατασκίους λόφους | σείει in terrorum.

926. οἰμοὶ τάλας: in self-commiseration, with impatience.

928. ἀλλ' ἦ: either (1) in continuation, σαφές δ' ἂν εἶπεν οὐδὲ ἐν ἀλλ' ἦ . ., 'nothing else except' (cf. 227 n.), or, simpler and better, (2) beginning a new sentence, 'but (he gave utterance to) either Scamanders, etc.'

'Σκαμάνδρους' ἢ 'τάφρους.' It is not easy to realise the precise objection here. There is presumably something said by Achilles (912) in the Phrygians with reference to his fight with the Scamander (Il. 21. 305), and at the trench of the Greek camp (ibid. 18. 215 sqq.). Perhaps if we possessed the play we should find obscurities of phraseology in the context. It is unsatisfactory to suppose that it is merely the warlike talk of great exploits which is considered too 'robustious.'

929. γρυπαίρους. αἰετός is the spelling of Aeschylus (e.g. Cho. 246) and is alone found in Attic inscriptions of the best classical time (Meisterhans², p. 25). A 'griffin-eagle' is an 'eagle of the griffin species'; cf. ἀλκίαιετος, νυκταίετος. In Aesch. P. I'. 829 ὀξύστομοι γὰρ Ζηνοῖ ἀκραγεῖς κύνες | γρύπας φύλαξαι the kinship of eagle and griffin is implied. In the common conception the griffin has a lion's body and an eagle's head and wings.

ἐπ' ὀσπίδων . . χαλκηλάτους. Aeschylus is fond of descriptions of warlike blazons and emblems on shields. See S. c. T. 479, 526.

ἵπποκρημνα: cf. 821 ῥήμαθ' ἵπποβάμονα, 1056, and κρημνοποιός as epithet of Aeschylus (Nub. 1367). There is no need to read ὑψίκρημνα (from e.g. P. V. 437). Compounds in ἵππο- often express size; cf. ἵππαλεκτρύονα 932 n. It is true that these are regularly nouns, but there seems no reason why, if once ἵππο- had acquired the force of μεγαλο- or ὑψηλο-, adjectives should not be similarly constructed. = 'Big beetling phrases.'

931. ἤδη ποτ' ἐν μακρῷ κ.τ.λ., 'in a weary length of (wakeful) night'; from Eur. Hipp. 375 ἤδη ποτ' ἄλλως νυκτὸς ἐν μακρῷ χρόνῳ | θνητῶν ἐφρόντισ' ἢ διέφθαρται βίος, to which (or an equivalent lyric passage) allusion is made also in Eg. 1290 sqq.

932. τὸν ξουθὸν ἵππαλεκτρύονα. [The anapaest in the fourth foot as in Nub. 1427 σκέψαι δέ τοις ἀλεκτρυόνας καὶ τὰλλα βορὰ τοιαυτί and inf. 937. To alter to ἵππαλέκτορας is a most arbitrary proceeding, especially in view of the ease with which υ and ι are slurred as semi-vowels. Cp. γενίῳν, Ἐρνίῳν, etc. in tragic lyrics.] The creature here meant is said by the schol. on Pac. 1177 (q.v.) to have been mentioned in the Μερμηδόνες of Aeschylus, and the compound evidently amused the comedian (cf. Ar. 799), who chooses to regard it as a hybrid of horse and barn-door fowl. For the real sense of ἵππο- cf. 929 and e.g. ἵπποσέλινον, ἵππομίρμηξ, also the English horse-(radish, etc.). In Pac. 181 Aristophanes' own ἵπποκάνθαρος is meant to play upon both senses.

ξουθὸν. It happens curiously that this word possesses two distinct meanings, viz. 'brown' (fulvus) and 'clear-voiced' (perhultus), and it is often impossible to tell which is meant (as in ξουθὴ ἀηδών, ξουθὴ μέλισσα). But in the present connexion, and generally where ἀηδών is in case, the more natural reference is to the voice. The loud call of the giant Chanticleer is more significant than his colour, and in the picture it would be denoted by his attitude.

933. σημεῖον: such emblems (σημεῖα, ἐπίσημα, παράσημα, insignia) are commonly said to have been carved or painted on the prow, while the tutelary gods were placed in effigy at the stern (cf. Verg. Aen. 10. 171 aurato fulgebat Apolline puppis). But this is to make σημεῖον answer to 'figure-head,' which is individual to a given vessel, whereas σημεῖον is the distinguishing sign or badge of a whole contingent (somewhat corresponding to our flag). That this is the notion here is shown by the plural ἐν ταῖς ναυσὶν (presumably the ships of the Myrmidons). We may take it that each vessel bore a picture of a ξοῖθος ἱππαλεκτριῶν at the stern, which is the position of the σημεῖον in Eur. I. A. 255, where the Boeotian ships are σημείοισιν ἐστολισμένοι | τοῖς δὲ Κάδμοι ἦν | χρίσειον δράκοντ' ἔχων | ἀμφὶ ναῶν κόρυμβα, ibid. 275 πρίμνας σῆμα ταιρόποιον . . . Ἀλφειόν.

ἐνεγέγραπτο : i.e. ἐγγεγραμμένος ἦν ὁ ἱππαλεκτριῶν. The tense indicates the previously existing circumstance which led Aeschylus to use the expression : 'it was a painting . . . to serve as a σημεῖον.'

934. Ἐρυξιν : either an ugly bird-like person (as the schol. guesses), or possibly a person with a loud crowing voice.

935. ποιῆσαι, 'to represent in poetry.' In καὶ ἀλεκτρυόνα the particle throws a sarcastic tone upon the noun only : 'to poetise a cock !'

936. ποῖά γ' ἐστίν. The MSS. favour this as against ποῖ' ἄτ', though the latter might easily be corrupted. γε is somewhat difficult, but (1) may belong to the sentence and not to ποῖα, forming (with δέ) a retort (see Neil, Append. i. to Eq., where he also states that most uses of γε are developments of 'well,' e.g. 'Oh, well . . .'). Yet σὺ δέ γ', ὦ . . . would be the natural order ; (2) may throw a peculiar tone upon ποῖα (= 'of what precious sort'). The latter is perhaps preferable ; but see crit. n.

937. τραγελάφους : cf. 929. Though treated as entirely fabulous by Plato (Rep. 488 ἂ ὅλον αἱ γραφῆς τραγελάφους καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα μιν γίνοντες γράφουσι) and Aristotle, the notion of the animal was probably derived from a bearded antelope of SW. Asia (Pliny, II. N. 8. 33. 50).

938. παραπετάσμασιν : hangings or tapestries. With τοῖς Μήδικοις there is some contempt. These monsters are all very well on Persian tapestries, but not in Greek poetry. For this Persian (or Babylonian) work cf. Hipparchus (Com. Frag. iv. 431) ἔχει δαπλίδιον ἐν ἀγαπητῶν ποικίλον | Πέρσας ἔχον καὶ γρύπας ἐξώλεις τινας | τῶν Περσικῶν. γράφουσιν is used of any delineation ; here with the needle (see Mart. 8. 28. 17). (cf. ὑφγράφειν of such embroidery).

939 sqq. ὡς παρέλαβον κ.τ.λ. Euripides 'took over' Tragedy (personified) from Aeschylus and found her dropsical or suffering from excessive corpulence. Acting as her physician he reduces her by exercise and a thinning diet. [Quintilian (2. 10. 6) has the same simile of distention in style.] The words used of the ailment and the cure are all puns or plays upon medical terms. Thus it has been pointed out that περιπάτοις is both 'walking exercise' and 'argumentations' (cf. 953), and ἐπυλλοῖς suggests ἐρπυλλοῖς (Merry). Similarly κομπασμάτων and ρήμάτων glance at words implying indigestible or flatulent diet and its results, ρήμάτων almost certainly standing for ρενμάτων ('humours'). τεντλοῖσι is probably meant to suggest τεντάζειν (of fussy trifles). στομυλμάτων alludes to some pounded herb medicine, and βιβλίων at once recalls τριβλίων.

παρέλαβον . . παρὰ σοῦ: the repetition of the preps. after the compound verb is usual in Aristoph. and becomes regular in prose; cf. 962, 1013.

εὐθύς: with ὡς παρέλαβον. The word which would in the English idiom belong to ισχυάνα is in Greek rather joined to the temporal relat. or participial clause (corresponding to the familiar τοῦ θέρου εὐθύς ἀρχομένου οἱ Πελοποννήσιοι ἐπέβαλον Thuc. 2. 47). Here we might have had παραλαβὼν εὐθύς τὴν τέχνην, 'immediately on taking over.'

941. ισχυάνα. [Not ισχυήνα. For the facts concerning aorists of -αῖνω see Rutherford, New Phryn. pp. 76-78.] The word is medical; cf. Hippocr. 1254 α οἰδήματα . . ισχυαίνει, Plat. Rep. 561c ὕδροποτῶν καὶ κατισχυαινόμενος, Aesch. P. V. 396.

τὸ βάρος: the weight of flesh; though in reality Eur. also reduces the gravitas of the poetry. ἀφείλον: frequent of removing vexations, etc.

942. ἐπυλλοῖς. 'versicles.' The same dimin. is applied to the lines of Euripides in Ach. 398, Poc. 532. They are light and slight things as compared with the packed line of Aeschylus.

περιπάτοις: with allusion to the other sense διατριβαῖς (cf. 953).

τεντλοῖσι λευκοῖς. 'white beets,' which had a mild laxative effect (εὐκοῖλοι Dioscorides). Cf. Plin. H. N. 19. 8 candidia (betis) solvi albas modice, nigra inhiberi, Mart. 3. 47. 9 mirumque ventri non inutilis betas. There is also a play on τεντάζειν, and λευκοῖς in the secondary intention implies 'bloodless' or 'colourless' commonplace.

943. ἀπὸ βιβλίων : of e.g. Anaxagoras (cf. Plat. Ap. 26 E). The expression both denies originality to Euripides (cf. 841) and also mocks at his philosophic originals, which are, after all, but στωμάματα. For the reading of Eur. see his own Alceste 962 sqq., and, for his collection of books, Athen. 3 A. τριβλίων is suggested in βιβλίων (cf. Alexis, Com. Frag. iii. 448).

944. ἀνέτρεφον μονωδίας κ.τ.λ., 'I began to feed her up on monodies, with a blend of Cephisophon.' μονωδίας plays upon some light species of food and Κηφισοφῶντα is pungently substituted for 'vinegar.' That Cephisophon and ἄξος were in some way connected (ἄξος or ἄξις being perhaps his nickname) appears from v. 1445 (=1453). There is a double sting in the name : (1) Cephisophon, an inmate of his house (cf. 1408), was reputed to help Eur. in his plays, particularly in the lyrics (schol.). Cf. 1444 (=1452) and the frag. of Aristoph. in Vit. Eurip. : (2) the character of Cephisophon was said to be in keeping with the 'Cretan' immorality of the monodies (849 n.).

945. ὁ τι τύχοιμ', 'the first thing that came (up).' The dramatic method of Euripides was not to 'rush in (to his subject) and create a muddle,' but to begin in an orderly and lucid manner with an explanatory prologue (at which prosaic proceeding Aristoph. is, of course, mocking); see, for example, the Ion, Hecuba, and Bacchae.

ἐμπεσὼν ἔφυρον : cf. Eq. 545 κοῖκ ἀνοήτως ἐσπηδήσας (on to the stage) ἐφλυάρει, Hdt. 3. 81 ὥθει ἐμπεσὼν τὰ πράγματα ἀνείρου.

946. τὸ γένος . . τοῦ δράματος, 'the pedigree of the play,' i.e. the happenings which had led up to it, or events which engendered it. The word γένος is chosen for the sake of the familiar hit at the birth of Euripides (cf. 840 n.).

948. οὐδέν κ.τ.λ., 'I permitted no idle (element) in the play,' i.e. every character had something to say or do. This might have been expressed by οὐδένα (no person). With οὐδέν no definite word (e.g. πρόσωπον) should be supplied.

949. οὐδέν ἤττον : i.e. as freely as the ἐλεύθερος and δεσπότης. The women and slaves of Eur. are permitted to speak with as much rightness and understanding. This was unusual, and Aristotle (Poet. 18), while requiring that ἡθῆ in tragedy should be χρηστά, also requires that they should fit their several classes, καὶ γὰρ γυνή ἐστὶν χρηστή καὶ δοῦλος, καίτοι γε ἴσως τοιῶν τὸ μὲν (the woman) χεῖρον, τὸ δὲ (the slave) ὀλως φαῦλόν ἐστιν. In the Agamemnon of Aesch. the large part of Clytaemnestra is explained by her possessing ἀνδρόβουλον κέαρ. Origen (c. Cels. p. 356) says that Eur. κωμωδεῖται because he puts into the mouths of βάρβαροι ἢ γυναῖκες ἢ δοῦλοι the language of philosophy (cf. Ach. 400 sq.).

952. δημοκρατικόν: i.e. on the principle of the equality of man.

τοῦτο μὲν = τοῦτό γε, a use frequent with demonstr. and personal pronouns (Kühner-Gerth ii. p. 140).

953. οὐ σοὶ γάρ . . κάλλιστα, 'you are not the man to make the best of a case about that.' The adverb is used (instead of κάλλιστος) with an eye to the sense, which = οὐ σὺ περίπατον ἀν ποιοῖο. περίπατος = discussion of a theme (originally carried on while walking). The reference is to the aristocratic leanings of the Socratic circle, including Plato, Xenophon, Critias, and Euripides. Some suppose an allusion to the withdrawal of Eur. to the court of Archelaus.

954. τουτουσι: always deictic, 'these spectators here.'

956. λεπτῶν τε κανόνων ἐσβολὰς: sc. ἐδίδαξα (αὐτοῖς). Eur. taught the audience new finical and carping methods of mechanical criticism. Among the abilities implied in λαλεῖν was the ability to talk 'literary judgment'; cf. 799.

ἐσβολὰς: not = προσβολὰς ('applications'), but 'invasions' or 'introductions' (= 'new fashions'); cf. Eur. Suppl. 102 καινὰς ἐσβολὰς ὁρῶ λόγων, inf. 1104.

ἐπῶν . . γωνιασμούς, 'tests of the corners of verses,' viz. to see if their angles and edges are true.

957. νοεῖν κ.τ.λ.: the intellectual and moral results of the smartness of διάνοια exhibited in the Euripidean drama.

ἐριν τεχνάζειν: mss. give ἐρᾶν, but all editors feel that the word is out of place. It could only be defended as a deliberate surprise, but even the surprise is clumsy. The comedians do not, in a considerable list of words, insert one and one only which is out of keeping with all the rest. ἐριν τεχνάζειν = 'contrive a disputatious caption'; cf. ἐριστικοί and inf. 1105 διτιπερ οὖν ἔχετον ἐρίζειν λέγετον.

958. κάχ' ὑποτοπεῖσθαι: in all probability Aristoph. is hinting at the suspicious jealousy entertained by the people as to the designs of the oligarchical party.

959. οἰκεία πράγματα κ.τ.λ.: this is not merely a claim to be a realist from the artistic point of view. He claims also that his themes, touching everyday realities, are a useful practical lesson. For the supposed function of a poet as teacher see 1008 sqq. n. The repetition in οἷς χρώμεθ', οἷς ζήνομεν is intended to press home the point. For the ex-

εἰσάγων: the proper word of a theme, as παράγων (1054) is of a πρῶσωπον, brought on the stage.

962. ἀπὸ τοῦ φρονεῖν ἀποσπάσας: for the repeated prepn. cf. 939 n. Editors take ἀποσπάσας transitively, 'having torn them from their reason,' but it is worth while considering the alternative of an intrans. use (as in ἀποσοβεῖν). For this cf. Xen. An. 1. 5. 3 πολὺ γὰρ ἀπέσπα φερίγοισα, Lucian, Icar. 11 ἐπεὶ δὲ κατ' αὐτὴν τὴν σελήνην ἐγενόμην πάμπολυ τῶν νεφελῶν ἀποσπάσας. 'You got off the track' (lit. 'pulled off') is the more probable meaning.

ἐξέπληττον: imperf. of attempt. Aristotle (Poet. 25) desires ἐκπληξίς in tragedy, but that effect must come from the intrinsic power of the situation, not from any trick.

963. Κύνους: Cycnus, son of Poseidon and ally of the Trojans, was defeated by Achilles in battle. The peculiar fight with the invulnerable Cycnus and his transformation into a swan when throttled by Achilles are told by Ovid (Met. 12. 72 sqq.).

Μέμνωνας: Memnon, also on the Trojan side, was son of Eos and Tithonus. Aeschylus wrote a Memnon, in which that hero (who possesses ἡφαιστότεικτον παροπλῖαν) is slain by Achilles, but obtains immortality through the prayer of his mother. The Ψυχαστασία of Aesch. also dealt with these events.

κωδυνοφαλαροπώλους: driving horses with bells on their trappings. Bells, as a means of creating φόβος, appear in Aesch. S. c. T. 373 under the shield of Tydeus, and in [Eur.] Rhes. 306 on the frontlets of the horses of Rhesus (cf. ibid. 383 κόμπους κωδυνοκρότους).

964. τοὺς τούτου τε κάμου γ': the reading is somewhat dubious (κάμου γ' and κάμου with hiatus being the variants). Dobree's κάμους recalls two common idioms: (1) gen. paralleled by possessive adj., e.g. Eur. H. F. 213 πατήρ ἂν εἴη σοὶ τε καὶ τοίτῳ, Bacch. 1277 ἐμῇ τε καὶ πατρὶς κοινῶν; (2) possessive adj. accompanied by gen. of the same person, as in τὰ ἐμὰ κακὰ τοῦ κακοδαίμονος or nostros vidisti flentis ocellos. On the whole it is better to choose the reading for which there is ms. support. γ' belongs to the whole expression, i.e. = γνώσει δὲ τοὺς γε μαθητὰς ἐκατέρου.

μαθητὰς: not in the strict sense, but as representing the respective influences. A poet has 'disciples' in the shape of those who affect him and who mould themselves on his characters.

965. τουτουμενι: a frequent position of the deictic -ε; cf. κερμενι, νινδι, τουτογι. More curious is the position of μεν and γε in ενμεντευθενι, ενεγετευθενι.

Φορμισιος: this proper name is used in Ecl. 97 as a synonym of 'hairy part.' Hence the following reference to επηνη ('moustache'). A Phormisius was one of those who 'came back with the people' after the tyranny of the Thirty (403 B.C.). But this does not prove that our P. was this popular leader.

Μεγαίνετός θ' ο Μανης: we know nothing of Megacetus. A variant is Μάγνης. The schol. (who appears to be guessing) says that he was αυθαδης και των στρατηγιωντων. If Μάγνης is right, there may very well be a reference to the proverbial εβρις of the Magnesians (Ath. 525 c, Theogn. 603 τοιαδε και Μάγνητας απωλεσεν εργα και εβρις), i.e. he is ο εβριστης. [Also there might be a hint at non-Attic parentage.] The alternative Μανης (or μάνης) has been variously explained as (1) a common name for a Phrygian slave (Σίρος η Μανης Dem. 1127); but this is quite unsuited to the context; (2) = 'unlucky gambler' since, according to Pollux (7. 204), μάνης is the name for an unlucky throw. Merry renders this notion by 'Mr. Denceace.' But we may also, and with more probability, suggest that it refers to the game of κότταβος. In this the μάνης is a bronze figure, upon the head of which the πλαστιγέ descends when the λάραξ strikes it fairly. Such a μάνης may have had a conventional appearance, which Megacetus strikingly resembled.

966. σαλπιγγολογχυπηνάδαι: for the patronymic cf. 84 n. The sense is 'sons of trumpet, lance, and moustache' = 'Black Mousquetaires' (Merry). But (since no compliment is intended) the sense is perhaps more exactly 'whiskered to suggest lance and trumpet,' i.e. with hairy faces which look swaggeringly martial, while their owners may be little of the sort. A proverb for a fire-eater was λόγχας εσθίων; cf. 1016 πνέοντας δόρυ και λόγχας. For soldiers and hair, cf. Iuv. 14. 194.

σαρκασμοπιτυοκάμπται: they are πιτυοκάμπται so far as their sneering looks go. The reference is to the legendary brigand of the Isthmus, Sinis (or Sinnis), who tied his victims between the heads of two pines which he had dragged together, and then let the trees fly up and apart. He was himself treated by Theseus in the same manner (Plut. Thes. 8, Ov.

Met. 7. 441). Hence πιτιοκάμπτης = 'merciless bandit,' and the men named put on that appearance. The schol. is probably right in his ὡς σαρκάζοντας μὲν καὶ προσποιουμένους τὰ πολεμικά, οὐκ ἀληθῶς δὲ τοιοῦτους.

967. Κλειτοφῶν: probably the man whose name is given to a dialogue falsely attributed to Plato. He belonged to the Socratic circle (Plat. Rep. 428 B). The schol. apparently possessed more information, since he explains ὡς ἀργὸς ἐκωμωδεῖτο.

969. ἦν κακοῖς πον περιπέσῃ καὶ πλησίον παραστῇ. This is quite sound, and there is no need to attempt τις for πou or to make καὶ = ἤ. περιπέσῃ is not 'incur' (i.e. 'suffer from'), but 'get in the way of' (= ἐντύχῃ). Following a certain path Ther. may 'find himself meeting trouble and get very close to it.'

970. πέπτωκεν: pres. of complete (and also immediate) realisation: 'there he is, (at once), clear outside.' This, as well as the aorist, forms a gnomic tense (Gildersleeve, Gk. Synt. § 257, Goodwin, M. and T. § 154). Cf. Vesp. 492 ἦν μὲν ὠνήται τις ὀρφῶς, μεμβράδας δὲ μὴ θέλῃ, | εὐθέως εἰρηχ' ὁ πωλῶν κ.τ.λ., Eq. 717 τῷ μὲν ὀλίγον ἐντίθῃς, | αὐτὸς δ' ἐκείνου τριπλάσιον κατέπακας, Theogn. 109 etc. The metaphor is from the fall, lucky or otherwise, of dice. Theramenes is always in luck. Cf. Soph. fr. 763 δεῖ γὰρ εὖ πίπτοισιν οἱ Διὸς κύβοι, Aesch. Cho. 967, Shak. Haml. 4. 7. 69 It falls right.

οὐ χίος ἀλλὰ Κεῖος. In dicing with ἀστράγαλοι (marked on four sides) the worst throw was called χίος, the best κῶος (corresponding respectively to the Latin annus and Venus). Aristotle (H. A. 2. 1. 34) gives τὰ κῶα as the inner, τὰ χία as the outer sides of the knuckle-bones, and probably these words had originally nothing to do with the islands of Chios and Cos, although such an association would naturally be imagined. Since Theramenes (Plut. Nic. 2) εἰς δυσγένειαν ὡς ξένος ἐκ Κέω λελοιδόρηται, Aristophanes substitutes the sneering word Κεῖος for κῶος, punning upon the names of the two islands. There seems, however, to have been no real ground for the charge of Cean birth.

979. τίς τούτ' ἔλαβε; Bentley's τὸδ' ἔλαβε is based on the frequent confusion of τὸδε and τούτο, but the metrical objection is not certain. In Nub. 1386-1389 there are three lines of the scansion $\times = | \cup - | \times = | \cup \cup$ against one of the scansion $\times = | \cup - | \times = | \cup \times$, and even in the trimeter dialogue a tribach sometimes stands in the last foot (Introd. p. xxxviii.)

980 sq. Dionysus playfully speaks as if the extremely economical habits just now prevailing at Athens were the outcome of Euripidean teaching. In reality the pinch of the war was being severely felt, and it interfered with the previous conception of behaviour becoming to a gentleman (ἐλευθερός). The word Ἀθηναίων has its point. [There may also be a hit at parsimony and suspicion in public expenditure.]

981. εἰσιῶν; sc. οἶλαδε.

983. ἡ χύτρα; some cheap crockery pot, which nevertheless he misses.

985. μαινίδης, 'sprat': a poor little cheap fish (Mart. 12. 32. 15 inules muenas).

τὸ περυσινόν, 'which I bought (only) last year.' Even an earthenware basin and its date are remembered. τέθνηκε suggests parody.

987. τὸ χθζινόν. 'left over from yesterday.' Cf. Iuv. 14. 129 hesternum, . . . minutal.

990. κειληρότης; a proverbial expression for gullibility. Cf. Eq. 755 (of the δῆμος) and 1263 τῇ Κειληραίων πόλει.

Μαρμάκινθοι. The word is plainly connected with μάμμη (cf. πλαττομάμμη Nub. 1001), and was used proverbially like Μαρμαίτης, Μελιτιδης, Κόρραιβοι etc. for a 'simple Simon' or 'Milk-sop.'

991. Μελιτιδης. Whatever may be the true spelling of the ordinary word, this is to be here accepted, as being an attack upon a Meletus (cf. 1302). Μελιτιδης, the current form, is apparently connected with μέλα (cf. πλαττομάμμη). But the familiar use of ἡδὺς and γλυκύς as 'sweet innocent' (Plat. Rep. 347 b, Hipp. Mu. 288 b) suggests that sense rather than 'Sugar-baby.'

[992 sqq. This chorus is supposed to be antistrophic to 895-904. The assumption involves difficulties (otherwise unfelt) in the metre of both portions, and it appears better to admit a general similarity without pressing exact correspondence.]

992. τάδε μὲν Λεύσσει κ.τ.λ. The Myrmidons of Aeschylus began with this line. We may assume that the passage contains further parody or semi-quotation. Aesch. is identified with his own Achilles, through the same characteristic qualities of anger and sullenness.

995. ἐκτὸς οἴσει τῶν ὀλῶν : a metaphor from chariot-racing. The particular race-course at the end of which 'the olives' were planted is naturally one familiar to Athenians, used especially at the Panathenaea. A driver should round the turn short of these, but an unmanageable team might carry him out beyond them. Cf. Aesch. Cho. 1021, P. V. 909 for the expression ἐξω (δρόμων) φέρειν.

999. συστεῖλας ἄκροισι κ.τ.λ., 'take in reefs, and, using but the edge of your sails, then bring her (round to the wind) gradually.' ἄξιος appears to be a nautical expression. While the gale of his anger is strong he should shorten sail, but, as it settles down, he may come round to the gentle wind of an even temper.

ἄκροισι : i.e. not catching the wind on the full sail, but only on a narrow strip at the top when reefed. Cf. Eur. Med. 523 ὥστε ναὸς κεδνὸν οἰακοστρόφον | ἄκροισι λαίφους κρασπέδοις ὑπεκδραμεῖν.

1001. μᾶλλον μᾶλλον, 'more and more' (= 'gradually'). Cf. Eur. I. T. 1406 μᾶλλον δὲ μᾶλλον πρὸς πέτρας ἤει σκάφοι, Catull. 64. 275 magis magis increbrescent.

1004. ἀλλ' ὧ κ.τ.λ. Before what is technically known as an ἀγών of the following kind, it is regular for the Coryphaeus to speak two lines of exhortation beginning with ἀλλὰ . . and adopting the metre to be employed (Zielinski).

πυργώσας ῥήματα σεμνά : i.e. Aesch. first raised tragic diction to dignity (σεμνά being proleptic). Cf. Hor. A. P. 280 (Aeschylus) docuit magnanimum loqui nitique cothurno and Antipater (quoted in v. 925). For the metaphor cf. Milton's 'build the lofty rhyme,' and Aristophanes' own claim to have done a similar service to comedy, Pac. 749 ἐποίησε τέχνην μεγάλην ἡμῖν ἀπὲρ γῶσ' οἰκοδομήσας | ἔπεισιν μεγάλοις καὶ διανοαῖς κ.τ.λ.

1005. κοσμήσας τραγικὸν λῆρον. It may be suggested that point is given to this expression if there is an allusion to the proverbial Σπάρταν ἔλαχει, ταῦτα κοσμεῖ. Aeschylus had for his province tragic diction, and that he adorned. λῆρον also gains if it is thus a παρὰ προσδοκίαν pun upon κλῆρον ('demesne' or 'province'). The Coryphaeus does not mean that all tragically is λῆρος, but that, 'when λῆρος occurs in tragedy, you knew how to give it a fine air.'

τὸν κρουνὸν ἀφίει, lit. 'set the spout going.' Cf. Eq. 89 κρουνοχυτρολήραιον εἰ, Cratin. fr. 186 δωδεκάκρουνον τὸ στόμα (with allusion to the public fountain 'Ἑνδεάκρουνος).

1008. ἀπόκριναι: turning suddenly and accosting his opponent.

θαυμάζειν, 'pay respect to.'

1009. δεξιότητος κ.τ.λ. As is shown by the use of καὶ . . . τε . . . (which cannot = καὶ . . . καὶ . . .), there are only two grounds given, viz. (1) δεξιότης, (2) νουθεσία ὅτι τε βελτίους κ.τ.λ. The τε-clause is in fact exegetic or amplificatory to νουθεσία. [The slight misplacement of τε is frequent (Kühner-Gerth ii. p. 245). Cf. 1070.]

δεξιότητος: not with any special reference to what Aristotle calls the διάνοια or intellectual power pervading tragedy, but in the sense of technical ability as playwright. Cf. 71 δέομαι ποιητοῦ δεξιού, 762.

νουθεσίας: the moral and intellectual influence upon the audience, through the wise γνώμαι uttered and the high ἡθῆ delineated.

ὅτι βελτίους τε κ.τ.λ. Aristophanes is with those who treat a poet as a teacher (1054 sq.). This was the common Greek view, the notion of the poet as simply an artist being held by a minority. See Butcher, Aristotle's Theory of Poetry and Fine Art, cap. v., and cf. Strab. 1. 3 ποιητὴν γὰρ ἔφη (sc. Eratosthenes) πάντα στοχάζεσθαι ψιχαγωγίας, οὐ διδασκαλίας. τοῖναντίον δ' οἱ παλαιοὶ φιλοσοφίαν τινὰ λέγουσι πρώτην τὴν ποιητικὴν. εἰσάγουσαν εἰς τὸν βίον ἡμᾶς ἐκ νέων καὶ διδάσκουσιν ἡθῆ καὶ πάθη καὶ πράξεις μεθ' ἡδονῆς. See also Hor. A. P. 333 sqq.

φήσεις, 'will you admit' (καταφήσεις), as in e.g. Soph. Ant. 442 φῆς ἢ καταρνή μὴ δεδρακέναι τάδε; τεθνάναι. Dionysus forgets that he is not in the land of the living. For the perf. cf. 970 n. and Thuc. 8. 74 ἴσα, ἢ μὴ ὑπακούωσι, τεθνήκωσι.

1013. παρ' ἐμοῦ παρεδίξατο: cf. 939, 962.

1014. τετραπήχαι, 'sixfooters.' Cf. Vesp. 553 ἄνδρες μεγάλοι καὶ τετραπήχεις, Shak. Rich. III. 1. 4. 156 Spoke like a mill fellow! The πῆχυς was 18½ inches.

διαδρασιπολίτας. The proper translation is 'citizens of Diadrasipolis' or 'men of Shirkton.' According to the classical Greek idiom the said town would be named Διαδράσει πόλις (not Διαδρασίπολις). Thus 'Megapolis' is Μεγάλη πόλις, with ethnic Μεγαλοπολίτης. In Eq. 817 μικροπολίτας = 'citizens of ἰκρά πόλις,' Ach. 635 χαινοπολίτας = 'men of Χαύνη πόλις.' At v. 1114 the schol. has the expression διαδιδράσκοντας τὰς στρατείας, and the allusion here is to that sense. Cf. Ach. 600 ὁρῶν πολιοῦς μὲν ἀνδρας ἐν ταῖς τάξεσι, | νεανίας δ' αἰοῖς σὺ διαδεδρακότας.

[As merely equivalent to 'shirking citizens' the compound would be irregular, though tragedy has such forms as ἀριστόμαντις, προβοιλόπαις, καλλίπαις, in which the first element is equal to an adj. qualifying the second. We cannot, again, understand it as = διαδιδράσκοντας τὴν πόλιν (i.e. its duties). This would be διαδρασιπόλεις (cf. φιλοπόλεις).]

1016. πνέοντας δόρυ κ.τ.λ. Cf. Hom. Il. 24. 364 μέγα πνέοντας Ἀχαιοῖς, [Eur.] Ihes. 786 θυμὸν πνέουσαι, Cic. ad Att. 15. 11 Martem spirare dicere. Λόγχας probably refers to the cavalry, δόρυ to the infantry.

1017. ἑπταβόλους: with a play upon (1) the proverbial shield of Ajax (ἑπταβόειον Il. 7. 219, ἑπτάβοιον ἀρρηκτον σάκος Soph. Aj. 572), and so implying 'courage of an Ajax,' and (2) 'equal to seven oxen,' 'of seven ox-power' (Paley), with an allusion to αὐροῦ θυμὸς.

1018. αἰ δὴ χωρεῖ κ.τ.λ., 'There you are! the trouble is upon us' a current colloquial expression. Cf. Luc. 906 τοῖσι χωρεῖ καὶ δὴ τὸ κακόν, Vesp. 1483. καὶ δὴ lit. = 'e'en in fact'; thence practically = ἤδη.

κρανοποιῶν αὖ, 'hammering away at his helmets' (Merry), referring to τρυφαλείας and πῆληκας. Aeschylus is charged with a particular fondness for introducing helmets and crests (κράνη καὶ λόφους διηγοίμενος schol.). In -ποιῶν there are the two senses 'make' and 'poetise' (helmets). It should also be observed that αὖ is frequent in indignation, though more especially in questions. Cf. Eq. 336, 338.

ἐπιτρίψαι, 'will be the death of me' (with boredom). Cf. ἀπολείς 1245 n.

1019. οὕτως. 'as you say' (cf. 1014).

γενναῖους ἐξιδίδας: without εἶναι. Cf. Eur. El. 376

(πενία) διδάσκει δ' ἄνδρα τῇ χρεὶα λακόν, Met. 295 χρή δ' οὐποθ' . . . παῖδας περισσῶς ἐκδιδάσκεσθαι σοφοῦς.

1021. Ἄρεως μεστόν, 'full of the war-like spirit' (cf. ἀφροδίτη = 'spirit of love'). See Aesch. S. c. T. 53 λεόντων ἀρη δεδορκένων, Plut. Mor. 757 π τοῖς τὸ μαχητικὸν ἐν ἡμῖν καὶ διάφορον καὶ θυμοειδὲς Ἀρην κεκλησθαι νομίζουσιν. According to Plutarch (Mor. 715 E) it was Gorgias who applied this expression to the Seven against Thebes.

τοὺς ἑπτ' ἐπὶ Θήβας: sc. ποήσας. This was the recognised name for the seven champions, and not merely for the play of Aeschylus (cf. Dem. 1390, Ath. 22 A ἐν τῷ ὀρχεῖσθαι τοὺς ἑπτ' ἐπὶ Θήβας). [For Attic two expressions would be normal, viz. οἱ ἑπτὰ οἱ ἐπὶ Θήβας (sc. στρατεῖσαντες) or οἱ ἐπὶ Θήβας στρατεύσαντες ἑπτὰ. Our phrase must, however, have been derived from οἱ ἑπτ' ἐπὶ Θ. (ἐλθόντες) = 'those who came against Thebes to the number of seven,' but ἑπτ' ἐπὶ Θήβας had come to be regarded as virtually a compound.]

1023. τούτῳ μὲν: see 952 n.

κακὸν εἰργασται, 'has been a bad piece of work on your part.' [Not 'has done you damage.'] πεπόηκας κ.τ.λ.: not = ἐποίησας (which would refer to the time of the production of the piece), but 'you have made them the more courageous for the (present, i.e. Peloponnesian) war.' The perf. expresses the result which has been left.

[The schol. and some editors take it as 'you have represented the Thebans as more brave than the Argives in their war.' But this is not true in fact, it would be pointless if true, and the perf. is less good.]

1024. τούτου γ' οὕνεκα, 'so far as that point (or claim) is concerned.' Cf. 1118.

1026. εἰτα διδάξας Πέρσας μετὰ τούτ' κ.τ.λ. According to such authorities as we possess the Persae was produced in 472 B.C., while the Septem belongs to 467 B.C. This information is not necessarily correct, but, if it is so, we may here suppose either (1) that Aristoph. is in error as to the dates (a by no means unlikely circumstance, since the ancients were no more infallible than the moderns in speaking of a literary event of sixty or seventy years ago), or (2) that neither εἰτα nor μετὰ τοῦτο refers to time relative to the Septem, but both are to be taken in another sense. Thus εἰτα may = 'and in the next place' (as opposed to the previous example), while μετὰ τοῦτ' may be joined to ἐπιθυμεῖν 'I taught them to be eager thereafter' ('as a consequence'). Since the expression 'Then again, by producing the Persae, I taught them thereafter to be eager to beat the enemy' contains nothing unnatural, it seems better not to raise here the question of chronological sequence. It is true that in Ar. 809 we have πρῶτον ὄνομα τῇ πόλει | θέσθαι τι μέγα καὶ κλεινόν, εἰτα τοῖς θεοῖς | θῦσαι μετὰ τοῦτο, and that ἔπειτα μετὰ τοῦτο occurs in comedy, but the argumentative use is not disproved by instances of the chronological use.

διδάξας, 'produced'; the regular word applied to the poet, who originally trained his own chorus and ἐδιδάσκε τὸν χορὸν τὸ δρᾶμα. Cf. χοροδιδάσκαλος, διδασκαλία and Hdt. 6. 21 ποιήσαντι Φρυγίῳ δρᾶμα Μιλήτου ἄλωσιν καὶ διδάξαντι.

Πέρσας. The titles of plays (merely as such) are commonly quoted in Greek without article, as throughout Athenaeus and in the brief notices called διδασκαλῖαι. Cf. 1124.

1028. ἐχάρην γοῦν κ.τ.λ. Dionysus was of course present at the production of the Persae. The true reading is perhaps beyond recovery. Most mss. have the unmetrical ἐχάρην γοῦν ἦνικ ἤκουσα περὶ Δαρείου τεθνήκτος, the poorly supported (but old) variant ἦνικ' ἀπηγγέλη περὶ . . being obviously an attempt at emendation. In point of sense the latter is out of the question, since no report is brought of the death of Darius. Unfortunately our texts of the Persae contain no exclamation λαοὶ to show us the reference. [Bloomfield, it is true (from the present passage), suggested that in Pers. 667 we should read βάσκε πάτερ ἄκακε Δαρεῖ, λαοὶ for Δαριάν αἱ, but εὐθὺς indicates that something had just taken place or been said, whereas Bloomfield's emended line comes in the midst of a choric song. We can hardly expect every isolated interjection on the part of a chorus to be preserved in our mss., and the loss of an λαοὶ is little more wonderful than the loss of the hand-clapping.]

Since the ghost of Darius appears in the Persae, it is possible that ἤκουσα contains the gen. εἰκοῦς ('phantom,' cf. Eur. II. F. 1002). If this is governed by the following περὶ we have ἐχάρην γοῦν ἦνικ' ~ - εἰκοῦς περὶ Δ. τεθνήκτος. There exists an idiom of Greek, too little recognised, but not especially rare, of which the readiest example is Eur. I. T. 813 ἤκουσα, χρυσῆς ἀρνὸς ἦνικ'

ἦν περί, 'when it was a matter of the golden lamb' (though most editors wrongly supply ἔρις from the context). Cf. Eq. 87 περί πότου γοῦν ἐστὶ σοι, Lysias 12. 74 οὐ περί πολιτείας ὑμῶν ἔσται, ἀλλὰ περί σωτηρίας, and (so far as ἐστὶ is concerned) Iesp. 210 ἔσται Λάχῃτι νινί. So here we may suggest ἐχάρην γοῦν ἦν (καὶ γ' ἦν) εἰκοῦς περί Δ. τ., i.e. 'when it was a matter of a phantom of Darius, he being dead' (not τοῦ τεθνεώτος). γ' is open to no objection; the special delight of Dionysus was at that. The gen. εἰκοῦς = εἰκόνος occurs in Eur. Hel. 77. So ἀηδοῦς (Soph. Aj. 629), γληχοῦς (Hippocr. 7. 160). Other cases from the -ος- (instead of the -ον-) stem are τὰς εἰκοῖς (Nub. 559), (τῇν) εἰκῶ (Eur. Med. 1162).

1032 sq. Ὀρφεὺς κ.τ.λ. The association of the Thracians Orpheus and Musaeus is frequent (cf. Plat. Rep. 364 κ, Prod. 316 ν, Ion 536 ν, [Eur.] Rhes. 943). Both are poets and minstrels, both agents of civilisation. To Orpheus belonged the Orphic τελεταί, or purificatory rites of initiation, which were a sacramental preparation for a happy future life of the immortal soul; to Musaeus the oracles (χρησμοί), which were extant and registered (cf. Her. 7. 6, 9. 34). Plato (Rep. 364 κ) has βιβλῶν δὲ δμαδὸν παρέχονται Μοισαίου καὶ Ὀρφῆως . . καθ' ὃς θρηπολοῦσιν, πείθοντες ὡς ἀρα λίσσεις τε καὶ καθαρμοὶ ἀδικημάτων διὰ θινσιῶν καὶ παιδιᾶς ἡδονῶν εἰσι μὲν ἔτι ζῶσιν, εἰσι δὲ καὶ τελευτήσασιν, ὃς δὴ τελετὰς καλοῦσιν. See Harrison, Proleg. cap. ix for Orpheus and Orphism. With the vegetarianism of φόνων τ' ἀπέχεσθαι cf. Hor. A. P. 391 silvestres homines sacer interpretaque decurum | caedibus ac victu fœdo deterruit Orpheus, Eur. Hipp. 952.

Along with the founding of mysteries and oracles of advice there went musical 'magic.' That Musaeus joins χρησμοί with ἐξακείσεις νόσων is in keeping with the profession of the ancient ιατρομαρτίς, the more refined outcome of the savage 'medicine-man.' Certain writings on herbal Ἀκείσεις Νόσων actually went under the name of Musaeus.

1036. Παντακλία: called Παντακλῆς σκαιός by Eupolia (schol.).

1038. τὸ κράνος πρῶτον κ.τ.λ.: i.e. instead of sitting the crest into its socket and fixing it from inside the helmet, he put the helmet on first and then tried to fasten the plume on top. In περιδησάμενος the middle is necessary and also περι-, since he fastens the helmet 'on himself round (his head),' cf. περιθέσθαι κυνῆν, διάδημα, etc. (the use of ἐπι- being late Greek); but for fastening a crest above a helmet both the active and ἐπι- are alone correct. The helmet is 'bound round' the head by its chin-strap.

1039. Λάμαχος ἦρως. Lamachus had somehow acquired the sobriquet or standing title of ἦρως. During his lifetime it is mocked at in Ach. 575, 578 ὦ Λάμαχ' ἦρως (425 B.C.), but here Aristoph. is evidently speaking with respect. Lamachus was one of the three generals sent in charge of the Sicilian expedition of 415 B.C. and was slain in a sally of the Syracusans in the next year (Thuc. 6. 101). From Plutarch and Plato we learn of his great physical courage, and we may assume that some feat of prowess, or perhaps of strength, had won him a name fit for Herakles or Theseus. The title is the more apt here, since a ἦρως was generally understood as one of the semi-deified dead.

1040. ἔθεν = ἀφ' οὗ (sc. 'Ομήρου): strictly 'from which source.' So unde frequently = a quo (of persons). According to Ath. 347 F. Aeschylus said τὰς αὐτοῦ τραγωδίας τεμάχη εἶναι τῶν 'Ομήρου μεγάλων δειπνῶν.

ἀπομαζαμένη, 'taking impressions' (or 'copies'). Cf. Thesm. 514 αἰτέκμαγμα σόν ('your very image'). The metaphor is from wax modelling: cf. κήριον ἐκμαγεῖον Plat. Theaet. 191 c.

πολλὰς ἀρετὰς ἐποίησεν, 'represented (in poetry) many types of excellence.'

1041. Πατρόκλων: in the Mymidons. Τεύκρων: probably in the Salaminine. θυμολέοντων: a word of Homer (cf. Cœur-de-Lion).

1043. Φαίδρας: as Euripides did in the Hippolytus. Aristoph. elsewhere objects to such characters in tragedy (Thesm. 153, 546). Aristotle (Poet. 15) similarly insists that the characters should be χρηστά, but he would have seen that the Phaedra of the extant Hippolytus is not simply vicious. Doubtless the allusion is rather to the 'earlier Hippolytus' (Ἰππόλυτος καλυπτόμενος), in which female passion was much more fiercely dealt with.

Σθενεβοῖας. Sthenoboea, wife of Proetus king of Argos, had calumniated Bellerophon as Potiphar's wife did Joseph. Euripides portrayed this woman in his Bellerophon and his Sthenoboea.

1044. έρῶσαν. Positive passion in a woman was repulsive to Greek sentiment. It is the motive of the piece in the Euripidean plays above mentioned, but nowhere in Aeschylus. His Clytaemnestra in the Agamemnon is represented as moved chiefly by injured pride and a desire for revenge; her passion for Aegisthus is kept quite in the background. Plato (Rep. 395 D) forbids his poets to represent a woman έρῶσαν.

1045. οὐ γὰρ ἐπὶ τῆς 'Αφροδίτης κ.τ.λ., 'you bore no stamp (or gilt) of the Goddess of Love,' i.e. 'you had nothing charming about you.' 'Αφροδίτη is here first the divinity, and next 'charm' (1021 n. and cf. τῆς). Lucian (Scyth. 11) has τοσαύτην Ἀφροδίτην ἐπὶ τῇ γλώττῃ ὁ νεανίσκος ἔχει. For ἐπὶ cf. Νυθ. 1025 ὡς ἡδὲ σοι τοῖσι λόγοις σῶφρον ἔπεισιν ἄνθρωποι, and e.g. ἔπειτ' ἐν αἰδῶι, χάρις, etc. [κ. has οὐδὲ γὰρ ἦν with a difference of meaning, viz. 'you never enjoyed such a thing as love.']

πολλή πολλοῦ ἐπικαθῆτο, 'she sat right heavily upon you.' Cf. Εἰρ. 822 πολλοῦ δὲ πολὺν με χρόνον καὶ νῦν ἐλελήθης, Νυθ. 915 θρασύς ἐστι πολλοῦ. In its origin the adverb πολλοῦ was a gen. of price ('at great cost' or 'worth much.'). With πολλή cf. Εὐρ. Hipp. 443 Κύπρις γὰρ οὐ φορητός, ἦν πολλή ρυή, Thuc. 4. 22 πολὺς ἐνέκειτο.

ἐπικαθῆτο: cf. Theogn. 619 ἀ δειλὴ πενίη, τί ἐμοῖσι καθημένη ὤμοις κ.τ.λ. Well-known expressions of an overwhelming and crushing power are ἐμπίπτειν, ἐμβαλεῖν, ἐνδύλλεσθαι. To these ἐπικαθῆσθαι ensues. Cf. Propert. 2. 30. 7 instat super Amor super caput, instat amanti, [cf. gravis ipse super libera colla sedet].

1047. κατ' οὖν ἔβαλεν. So-called tmesis is not very rare in Aristoph. (e.g. Ach. 295, Vesp. 137, Plut. 65), though usually only a particle intervenes. It should be observed that, when only οὖν (the familiar Herodotean ὥν) is interposed, the verb is always aorist, whether preterite or gnomic.

τοῦτό γέ τοι δὴ: sc. εποίησεν ἡ Ἀφροδίτη; 'that she did, indeed.' Cf. Νυθ. 372 νῆ τὸν Ἀπόλλω τοῦτό γέ τοι δὴ τῷ νῦν λόγῳ εὖ προσέφισας.

1050 sq. ἀλόχους: a poetical word, allowable in anapaests, and suited to the dignity of the remonstrance. There may be an allusion to some actual case of suicide which had gained notoriety. That any number of women should have drunk hemlock because their sex had been shamed through the Bellerophons 'whom you are always talking about' (τοὺς σοῦς), is of course highly unlikely, but it is quite possible that such plays of Euripides had created unjust suspicions in certain households, and that some Athenian Desdemona had felt her Othello's behaviour so keenly as to commit suicide. [We are not obliged here to discuss the question of the attendance of women at the theatre, beyond remarking that they were almost certainly present at the tragedies.]

1051. κῶνα: the plural refers to the several instances ('doses of poison').

1052 κ. πότερον δ' οὐκ ὄντα λόγον τοῦτον κ.τ.λ.: not τὸν λόγον τοῦτον, but lit. 'was it as an unreal story that I put this (one) together concerning Phaedra?' Cf. Soph. El. 584 σκῆψιν οὐκ οἶσαν. ξυνέθηκα combines the senses componere and finire (of falseness, cf. ξινθετος). Euripides, adopting a familiar argument of the realist, disclaims responsibility: 'the thing was so, and I described it.' The answer is that the choice of subject lies with the artist, and that, if an ugly thing exists, its existence is enough (and too much) without our obtruding it in art. ἀποκρίνταιν χρή τὸ πονηρὸν agrees with Aristotle (Poet. 15), who objects to such a παράδειγμα πονηρίας ἡθοῦς μὴ ἀναγκαίου as the Menelaus of the Orestes. In τὸν γε ποιητὴν the particle implies that, whatever others may do, at least that artist who is a moral teacher should beware of familiarising us with such examples.

διδάσκειν: either (1) teach the chorus as χοροδιδάσκαλος (1026), or (2) teach the audience. The latter agrees with what follows, while the former gives both a comparatively unimportant point and also a wrong chronological order to παράγειν and διδάσκειν.

τοῖς μὲν γὰρ παιδαρίοισιν κ.τ.λ. It appears to have been easy to slip into the error of rendering 'for children have (ἐστι) a teacher, who (i.e. δς, not δστις) tells them.' [Blaydes even makes the curious blunder of suggesting δστις φράζη = qui dicat, for which the Greek is, of course, δστις φράσει.] The correct translation is 'for to little children whoever tells them (a thing) is their teacher, but . . .' See 1009 n.

1056. πάνυ δὲ κ.τ.λ. : the particle sums up with emphasis ; 'yes, plainly . . .'

1057. Παρνασσών. The conjecture Παρνήθων (Bentley and Porson) is plausible, but not convincing, since the much higher Parnassus was visible in Attica. [The -σσ- is supported by Attic epigraphy (Meisterhans², p. 75).]

1059. μεγαλὸν γνῶμῶν . . τίκτειν, lit. 'of great maxims and thoughts one must bring forth the expressions also with the same greatness.' For γνῶμαι expected of a poet cf. 877 n. διάνοια is one of Aristotle's six elements of a tragedy (the others being μῦθος, ἦθος, λέξις, ὄψις, μελοποιία).

1061 sq. τοῖς ἱματίοις κ.τ.λ. To Aeschylus is attributed the introduction of the long and padded tragic robe, the high ἐμβάτης, and the imposing mask. Cf. Hor. A. P. 278 misit hunc (sc. Theopis) personae pallaeque terrior honestae | Aeschylus et malicis inscavit pulchra tignis | et docuit magnaeque loqui nitique cothurno. See Haigh, Trag. Drama of the Greeks, p. 68, where he quotes Philostr. vit. Apoll. p. 220 σκαιοποιίας ἡψατο ἐκασμένης τοῖς τῶν ἡρώων εἰδεσιν . . ἐσθήμασι τε πρῶτος ἐκόσμησεν, ἃ πρόσφορον ἡρωσὶ τε καὶ ἡρώεσσιν ἡσθήσθαι.

1065. οὐκ οὖν ἔθελαι γε κ.τ.λ. The real reply would be concerned with artistic principle, but it is time that the comedian returned to levity, although the humorous answer doubtless contains a political truth.

οἴκουν . . γε: regularly with an intervening word (Neil Append. to Eq. p. 195).

τριηραρχεῖν. Among the λειτουργίαι imposed upon the rich the τριηραρχία would be the most frequent during the critical times of the Peloponnesian war. The ship and tackling were supplied by the state, their material upkeep by the τριηραρχοί. With the reduction of wealth during the war it became necessary to associate two persons in the duty (συντριηραρχοί). The first recorded instance of this practice dates from the year of this play (Gilbert, Greek Constitutional Antiquities, p. 370, Eng. tr.). In Antiphanes (fr. 204) the εἰσφορά, χορηγία, and τριηραρχία are complained of, and it is said χορηγὸς αἰρεθεὶς | ἰμάτια χρυσᾶ παρασχὼν τῷ χορῷ βάκος φορεῖ.

1066. περιλλόμενος. The pres. particip. is generic or frequentative, and should not be altered to περιλάμενος (with Cobet). The mss. vary in their spelling (e.g. περιελλ-, περιελ-). It is at least certain that -ειλέω is late and out of the question. The choice lies between -ειλω and -ίλλω, the latter being (so far as ms. evidence goes) preferable in the sense 'roll.' In Nub. 762 the best ms. has ἔλλε, the rest εἔλλε. [For discussion see Kühner-Blass ii. p. 412, Rutherford, Actio Phryn. xxii., Jebb on Soph. Ant. 340 (Appendix).]

1068. παρὰ τοῖς ἰχθύσις ἀνέκνυσεν: gnomic; 'he pops (bobs) up alongside the fish' = 'at the fish-market.' The part of the market in which an article was sold commonly went by the name of that commodity, e.g. τὰ ἄλφιστα, ὁ χλωρὸς τυρὸς, αἱ χύτραι, ὁ οἶνος (see Pollux 9. 47). Cp. Vesp. 789 δραχμὴν . . διεκερματίζειτ' ἐν τοῖς ἰχθύσις, Eupol. fr. 301 περιῆλθον εἰς τὰ σκόροδα καὶ τὰ κρόμμια | καὶ τὸν λιβανωτὸν κ.τ.λ. Fish was the favourite luxury (ὄψον) of Athens, and to purchase fish freely was a mark of the ὀψοφάγος τριφῶν. There is a special humour in ἀνέκνυσεν, which is itself used of fishes (Plat. Phaed. 109 E). At Athens marketing was done by the men themselves, a slave being usually in attendance to carry home the purchases.

1070. ἐξεκένωσεν τὰς τε παλαίστρας. Logically τε is situated as if some other 'emptied' place was to follow, e.g. καὶ τὰ γυμνάσια. The result is a real 'trajection' of the particle. Cp. 1009 n.

1071. τοὺς παράλους: the crew of the state galley called the Πάραλοι, of which both the oarsmen (ἐρέται) and the marines (ἐπιβάται) were necessarily freeborn Athenians. These were the pick of the navy and received somewhat higher pay.

The Paralus, like the Salaminia, served either as warship or on special missions (e.g. with dispatches, the φόρος, etc.). The crew were always strongly democratic (Thuc. 8. 73). We do not know the circumstances to which Aristoph. is alluding, but there may be some reference to Arginusae, where, according to Diodor. Sicul. (13. 100), the men did ἀντιλέγειν πρὸς τὴν ἀναίρεσιν τῶν νεκρῶν.

1073. μᾶζαν καλέσαι, 'call for barley cake,' the staple article of diet, composed of ἀλφίτα mixed with oil and wine (Thuc. 3. 49 and Hesych.). So τὰ ἀλφίτα = 'our daily bread.' This use of καλεῖν τι is comparatively rare, but cf. Aesch. (ho. 651 ἐκπέραμα δωμάτων καλῶ, and a similar use of βοᾶν τι (Ar. 60, Pind. P. 6. 36, Soph. Trach. 772). It was probably derived, not from the frequent καλεῖν τινα (of a person), but from a brachylogy καλέσαι 'μᾶζαν (δοτε).' Cf. Vesp. 103 κέκραγεν 'ἐμβάδας,' Xenarch. fr. 7. 13 βοᾷ δέ τις 'ἕδωρ ἕδωρ.'

1079. προαγωγός. In the extant plays of Euripides the name might be applied to the nurse of Phaedra in the Hippolytus. Handling such matters was considered so characteristic of the poet that in Thesm. 1172 κῆρ. he is himself made to act the part of a γραῦς προαγωγός.

1080. τικτούσας κ.τ.λ.: like Auge in the lost play of that name. Such an occurrence was prohibited (Lys. 742).

1082. φασκούσας οὐ ζῆν τὸ ζῆν. In his Polyidus and Phrynia respectively Eur. had such sentences as τίς δ' οἶδεν εἰ τὸ ζῆν μὲν ἐστὶ κατθανεῖν, | τὸ κατθανεῖν δὲ ζῆν κάτω νομίζεται; (quoted by Plat. Gorg. 492 E) and τίς δ' οἶδεν εἰ ζῆν τοῖθ' ὁ κέκληται θανεῖν, | τὸ ζῆν δὲ θνήσκειν ἐστί; We do not know what female characters may have used these or the like expressions. A humorous recoil is made on the author infr. 1477.

1084. ὑπογραμματίων. The word is elsewhere also used with contempt (Dem. 415, Lys. 186). The schol. is probably right in his comment τῶν γραμματεῦν βουλομένων καὶ μὴ στρατεῖσθαι. Certain civil servants naturally escaped military service. While a γραμματεὺς of the higher sort was an officer elected by lot or by χειροτονία for a certain period, the ὑπο-γραμματεὺς was either a slave or a citizen of inferior standing, who served as paid under-clerk, doing the actual amanuensis work. They, of course, acquired a special expert ability which made them in demand, and, though they could not serve in the same clerkship twice, they could probably find similar employment continuously. Demosthenes (de Cor. 314) taunts Aeschines with having been a γραμματεὺς (i.e. a ὑπογραμματεὺς) of this kind.

1085. δημοπιθήκων: see 707 n., and, for the compound, δημοκόλαξ, διονυσιοκόλαξ, δημεραστής. They 'play monkey to the people.' Perhaps also there is a play upon πείθειν τὸν δῆμον.

1089-1097. Part of the humour of this passage would lie in the fact of Dionysus singing in the metre and tune of Aeschylus, while dropping into a trivial anecdote.

1089. ἐπαφηνάμην . . γελῶν: i.e. 'I laughed at it till I cried all the moisture out of me.' Cf. Xen. Symp. 3. 24 διψῶμεν ἐπὶ σοὶ γελῶντες.

1092. λευκὸς πίων: cf. Sosicr. (Com. Frag. iv. 591) λευκὸς ἄνθρωπος παχὺς, Hor. Sat. 2. 2. 21 pinguis vitilis albusque.

οἱ Κεραμεῖς: the people of Cerameicus. For the topography cf. 129 n.

1094. ἐν ταῖσι πύλαις: the Δίπυλον or Κεραμικαὶ πύλαι (also called Θριάσαι). It appears from the schol. that the young men of Cerameicus stood at the gate and slapped the hindmost runners with the flat of their hands. Hence came a proverb Κεραμικαὶ πληγαί. From the same source we learn that in the first edition of the Plutus there occurred the words τῶν λαμπαδηφόρων τε πλεῖστον αἰτίαν τοῖς ὑστάτοις πλατειῶν,

τορῶς: cf. Plat. Theaet. 175 E τορῶς τε καὶ ὀξέως διακονεῖν.

ἀνὰ δὲ δέρετον. See crit. n. For the tmesis cf. 1047. The common emendation is ἀνὰ δ' ἔρεσθον (from ἀνέρεσθαι, 'cross-question'), but this is flat and does not account for the corruption. If ἀνὰ . . . δέρετον is correct, there is a colloquial metaphor, 'take the skin off your (devices) new and old' = 'furbish up' your skill. There is, of course, a zengina, since ἀναδέρπειν strictly suits only τὰ παλαιά, while with τὰ καινὰ we must supply e.g. προφέρετον.

1110. ὥς . . . μὴ γνῶναι. Aristophanes would not use ὥς for ὥστε in ordinary dialogue. It occurs once in Thucydides, seldom in Plato, but is common in Xenophon, as in poetry. See Goodwin, M. and T. §§ 608 sq. In reality Aristophanes is perhaps a little doubtful as to the appreciation by the audience of the coming discussion. He hopes it will live up to this compliment. Cf. Eg. 233 τὸ γὰρ θέατρον δεξιόν. τὰ λεπτὰ, 'your subtleties.'

Λεγόντων: gen. absol., 'when you say them.' This and similar passages, e.g. Nub. 810 σὺ δ' ἀνδρὶς ἐκπεπληγμένου . . . γνοῖς ἀπολάψεις, should not be quoted as examples of a gen. after a verb of knowing.

1112. οὐκ ἔθ' οὕτω ταύτ' ἔχει. It is commonly supposed that there is an allusion to the failure of the Clouds in 423 B.C. But this was surely too long ago, and the words are sufficiently explained in what follows.

1113. ἑστρατευμένοι γάρ εἰσι, 'they have seen service' (and therefore can judge of tactics). [The expression was perhaps also proverbial of one who has seen the world and learned 'what's what,' in the same way as the ἀνὴρ πολλὰ περὶ πεπλευκῶς of 535 n.]

1114. βιβλίον τ' ἔχων. Perhaps we may guess that some small book of military exercises and tactics had recently been issued (a sort of soldier's guide) and that Aristoph. has been leading up to an allusion thereto. [The idea that at a second performance of the Frogs the piece was already (with marginal references) in the hands of the audience, and that the present passage belongs to the second edition, seems highly improbable.]

1119. ἐπ' αὐτοὺς τοὺς προλόγους σου, 'your very prologues,' i.e. to begin at the very beginning. In the later technical phraseology the πρόλογος is defined (Arist. Poet. 12) as μέρος δλον τραγωδίας τὸ πρὸ χοροῦ παρόδου, but the word is here used in the very natural sense of the 'speech setting forth the circumstances' (ἡ φράσις τῶν πραγμάτων 1122).

This line is addressed to Aeschylus; at the next line Eur. turns to Dionysus and explains his procedure. Hence αὐτοῦ in place of σου.

1120 sq. ὅπως . . βασανιῶ. It is an idiom almost peculiar to Aristophanes (in Attic) to use ὅπως with fut. indic. in a purely final clause, when no verb of striving, precaution, or command has preceded or been implied. It is, of course, possible to supply mentally after τρέφομαι such a participle as σκοπῶν, σπουδάζων, or πράττων, but this is to strain the rule. Cf. Uesp. 529 δεῖ τι λέγειν καινόν, ὅπως φανήσεται κ.τ.λ.: Pac. 131 ὑπεχε τὴν φιάλην, ὅπως ἐργῶ φιαλοῦμεν: Ecc. 783, etc. There are a few instances in the tragedians of the neg. ὅπως μή similarly used (Kühner-Gerth ii. p. 384. 4).

1124. τὸν ἐξ Ὀρεστίδας, 'the prologue from the Orestes.' For the omission of the article cf. 1026 n. The lines actually quoted are some of those lost in our MSS. from the beginning of the Choephori (see appendix to the present editor's edition of that play). There is no doubt whatever as to their proper place.

Strictly Ὀρεστίαι (sc. διδασκαλία or ποιήσις, cf. Λυκοῖργεια, Οἰδιπόδεια) was the name given to the set of plays dealing with the Oresteian story, viz. the trilogy of the Agamemnon, Choephori, and Eumenides. But since Orestes only becomes the principal character in the two latter, and makes no appearance in the first, it was natural that the Orestes proper should be regarded as beginning with the Choephori. Hence Eur. means 'the prologue from your story of Orestes.'

1126. Ἑρμῇ χθόνι κ.τ.λ., lit. 'Thou Nether Hermes, in stewarding powers (or commands) that are thy sire's, be my preserver and my ally, at my prayer. For I am come to this land and am seeking my return (from exile).'

At the opening of the Choephoroi Orestes, who has come into Argos secretly from his (virtual) exile, is standing upon the mound which serves as the tomb of his father Agamemnon. Upon or beside the τύμβος (or χῶμα) stands an emblem of Hermes. As ψυχοπομπός, and intermediary between the two worlds (ἀἰρεῖ τῶν ἄνω τε καὶ κάτω Cho. 123, Hermes is naturally addressed by Orestes in his Chthonian or underworld capacity. As agent of Ζεὺς Σωτήρ he is implored to aid Orestes by using in his favour the powers of that Σωτήρ.

The words are, doubtless, open to certain other interpretations, mostly captious, and it is on this score that Eur. charges Aeschylus with ἀσάφεια. Thus κράτη might also mean 'deeds of strength' (cf. 1141-13), ἑποπτεύων might also mean 'witnessing,' πατρώα might refer either to (a) Zeus or (b) Agamemnon, and, in reference to the latter the adj. in πατρώα κράτη might represent either the subjective or the objective gen. (power exerted 'by' or 'over'). But the whole discussion is intended to lead up to certain jests, and the criticisms are strained for that purpose.

[It is common to punctuate Ἑρμῇ χθόνι. πατρώῃ ἑποπτεύων κράτη, | σωτήρ κ.τ.λ., making the participle vocative. It seems more pointed and compact to join it with the predicate, as in the rendering.]

1130. ἀλλ' οὐδὲ πάντα γ' ἐστὶ ταῦτ' ἀλλ' ἡ τρία, 'but the whole number of them is only three.' The line (like the first part of 1129) should be given (as by Bergk) to Aeschylus, as 1132 appears strongly to show. The exact reading is uncertain (see crit. n.). There has obviously been some displacement, and the arrangement in the text is here given on the ground that ταῦτα bears no stress, while οὐδὲ πάντα γ' gives precisely the emphasis required. For ἀλλ' ἡ cf. 227 n.

1133. πρὸς τρισὶν λαμβέοισι κ.τ.λ., lit. 'you will not only owe three iambic lines, but will be in debt besides.' If each line contains twenty faults, the lines have more faults than words. If each fault is to be regarded as something to be paid off (cf. τὸ βλάβος 1151 n.), then Aeschylus must pay away every word in the lines and still owe for faults. His assets become a minus quantity, and he is left with liabilities.

1134. ἐγὼ σιωπῶ τῷδ' ; 'am I to be silent to please him ?'

'or 'at his bidding'; cf. 1229, Lys. 530, Livy 3. 41 negant se privato relicere.

1136 sq. ὁρᾷς ὅτι ληρεῖς; κ.τ.λ. Aeschylus retorts 'Don't you know you are talking rubbish' - However, little I care! - How do you mean, etc.' It is hard to see any objection to this arrangement, whereas the distribution of the words between various speakers, with ὀλίγον γὰρ μοι μέλει given to either Eur. or Dionysus, results in inanity. [The emphasis is, of course, on ὀλίγον μέλει, not on μοι.]

1138. Ἑρμῇ χθόνι κ.τ.λ. It is an error to place a stop after these words. The sense is not completed. Euripides is waiting to pounce upon details, and he descends on the first possible ambiguity.

1138 sqq. Euripides chooses (1140-1143) to make πατρώα, in Orestes' mouth, mean 'my father's' (Agamemnon's), and κρᾶτη = 'deeds of strength,' whereupon his criticism amounts to this: 'Doesn't Orestes say this at the tomb of his father, the father being dead?' (The Greek is not τοῦ πατρὸς τοῦ τεθνεώτος.) Aeschylus replies 'I'm not denying it.' 'Then,' asks Eur., 'was it how his own father perished violently 'By stealthy guile e'en at a woman's hand' - I ask, was that what he said Hermes stewarded?': i.e. Eur. urges that, since Orestes is speaking at his own father's tomb, πατρώα should naturally refer to that father, and the πατρώα κρᾶτη are 'deeds of strength done upon his father' (by Clytaemnestra).

1142. αὐτοῦ: ipsius, in the emphatic place. This line and the next are tragic in metre and diction (as in ἐκ for ἐπὶ), and at least ἐκ γυναικείας χειρὸς δόλοις λαθραίοις has the appearance of a verbatim quotation, probably from Aeschylus himself (and possibly from the lost lines of the Choephori). We must suppose the words to be mouthed tauntingly.

1144 sq. οὐ δῆρ' ἑκαίνοσ, 'not he, indeed,' i.e. Orestes meant nothing of the kind; cf. 788 n. τὸν ἐπιούριον: i.e. not τὸν δόλιον, but 'the luck-bringer.' The word is probably derived from ἐμ-φορ-ν-ιο-ς ('bringing much profit'; cf. ὤπιος = φωσ-ν-ος) and in that case is akin in sense to ἐμπολαῖος, κερδῶσι Ἑρμῆς. [If late grammarians sometimes explain by καταχθόνιος, ὑποχθόνιος, such a notion could only arise after the etymology had been lost and the meaning merely guessed at in connexion with Ἑρμῆς χθόνιος or πομπαῖος. It simply shows that ἐριοῦνιος came somehow to be specially applied to Hermes in his Chthonian character.]

Render, 'but it was the Luck-bringing Hermes Chthonius whom he addressed, and he went on to show it, by saying that he possessed the function as a prerogative from his sire,' i.e. 'in addressing Hermes Chthonius as holding a function from his sire (the Olympian Zeus) he is necessarily appealing to him in his benign character of ἐριοῦνιος, for that is the only trait in which the Chthonian Hermes can be said to represent his father.' [It is much inferior to construe 'he called the Eriounian Hermes "Chthonius."'] 1146. ὅτι πατρῶν κ.τ.λ. : not τοῦτο τὸ γέρας, but πατρῶν γέρας is predicate.

1148 sq. εἰ γὰρ πατρῶν κ.τ.λ., 'for if he possesses his underground function from his father —.' Euripides was about to add 'then his father must be Chthonian, and you are making Hermes the son of Ζεὺς καταχθόνιος or Pluto.' But Dionysus breaks in with a specimen of his own literary and logical acumen, 'then he must be a grave-robber on his father's side,' i.e. 'if Hermes got from his father his business of going underground on errands of gain (ἐριοῦνιος), then his father must have been a grave-robber.'

1149. τυμβωρύχος : here = ὁ τοῖς τύμβοις διορίττων ; cf. ταχωρύχος. The usual meaning is 'grave-digger' (ὁ τ. τ. διορίττων); but cp. Sext. Emp. adv. Math. 7. 45 τυμβωρύχος λέγεται καὶ ὁ ἐπὶ τοῖς νεκροῖς τοῦτο πράττων (sc. digging).

1150. πίνει οἶνον οὐκ ἀνθοσμῖαν. Aeschylus turns upon Dionysus and tells him in one phrase that his judgment is that of a drunkard and his breath unpleasant, for which reason he had better not give the company too much of it. ἀνθοσμίας was wine with a bouquet (εὐώδης); cf. Xen. Hell. 6. 2. 6 ἔφασαν τοῖς στρατιώταις εἰς τοῦτο τριφῆς ἐλθεῖν ὥστ' οἱκ' ἐθέλειν πίνειν, εἰ μὴ ἀνθοσμίας εἴη, Verg. G. 4. 279 adorato Baccho. See Athen. 32 A.

1151. λέγ' ἕτερον : sc. ἔπος. τὸ βλάβος : not 'the fault' (which is too weak for the word), but figuratively, 'the damages' to be paid ; cf. 1133.

1155. τὸ ῥήμ', 'the expression' ; cf. 821 n.

ἐγὼ δέ σοι φράσω: i.e. Aeschylus need not repeat it, 'I will quote it' (and of course he does so with sarcastic emphasis). [Not 'I will explain,' which misses the force of ἐγώ.]

1157. "ἦκειν" δὲ ταῦτόν ἐστι τῷ "κατέρχομαι." 'is the same as your κατέρχομαι.' To this Aesch. makes the obvious reply. The distinction is quite familiar. Why then does Eur. cavil at the words? Simply in order to lead the comedian up to the retort (1167 q.v.). The completed action in ἦκε is also to be distinguished from the incomplete in κατέρχομαι. Orestes has arrived, but is only 'trying to get back (i.e. restored) from exile.' Even had there been an accumulation of practically synonymous words Eur. should not be the man to object; cf. his own ἐπιστάμεσθα καὶ γινώσκομεν (I. T. 190. Hipp. 380).

1159. χρήσον σὺ μάκτραν . . κάρδοπον. The two words being synonymous, we must understand this to be a current form of Attic cheap witticism (as if one said 'Lend me a sovereign, or, if you prefer it, a pound will do as well'); cf. Pherecr. Περ. 7 πρόσαιρε τὸ κανοῦν, εἰ δὲ βοῦλει, πρόσφιμ.

ἀλλ' ἀριστ' ἐπῶν ἔχον: either (1) 'but the most excellent of verses,' i.e. ἔχον ἀριστα ἐπῶν (πάντων) = ἀριστον δὲ ἐπῶν, after the pattern of e.g. ἀθλιώτατα ἀνθρώπων ἔχω = ἀθλιώτατος εἰμι ἀνθρώπων; or (2) 'excellent in respect of phrasing'; cf. εὖ φρενῶν ἔχειν. The latter narrows ἐπῶν to the sense which is non-comic. See 1181 n. For ἔστ' . . ἔχον; cf. Ros. 334 ἔστ' ἀναγκαίως ἔχον, Πηλ. 371 ἐστὶν . . ἐτέρως ἔχον, and so frequently.

1163. εἰσεῖν μὲν κ.τ.λ., '(simply) to come into a country is possible for the man who has a share in a fatherland.' The language and metre are tragic in the mouth of the tragedian: hence the use of εἴτω μετῇ for εἴτω ἀν μετῇ and the poetical πάτρας for πατρίδος.

1164. χωρὶς . . ἄλλης συμφορᾶς, 'without any misfortune.' συμφορά (cf. calamitas) is frequent for loss of status (ἀτιμία, exile, etc.). The idiom of the redundant ἄλλος is well known. In its origin it = 'else,' 'over and above' the matter in hand. 'otherwise to be considered.' Cf. Eur. Med. 298 χωρὶς γὰρ ἄλλης ἢ ἔχουσιν ἀργίας | φθόρον πρὸς ἀστῶν ἀλφάνοιτι δυσμενῇ.

1167 sq. οὐ φημι κ.τ.λ. To treat this as a genuine critical objection is to misconceive the manner of comedy. There is beyond doubt a political allusion to some contemporary, who has 'come back' to Athens without formal allowance by 'the authorities.' This was not precisely what had happened in the case of Alcibiades, who in 407 B.C. had been elected στρατηγός though considered an exile (Xen. Hell. 4. 8). He had come back with considerable apprehension (ibid. § 18), but not λάθρα. Nevertheless there may be an allusion to this unconstitutional proceeding. When Dionysus joins in (1169) with 'Capital, I faith! but I don't understand what you mean,' it is to be understood that he understands perfectly. At the same time the answer is intended to satirise popular applause, 'Excellent! not that I presume to understand it.'

1168. οὐ πιθὼν τοὺς κυρίους: an old legal formula, otherwise πείσας is the current Attic aorist.

1170. πέραινε: a word frequently used of saying out one's say, whether in narrating or quoting; cf. Plut. 648 πέραινε τοῖσιν ὅ τι λέγεις ἀνίστας ποτέ, Aesch. Pers. 700 μὴ τι μακιστήρα μῖθον ἀλλὰ σύντομον λέγων | εἰπὲ καὶ πέραινε πάντα, S. c. T. 1042.

1172. τύμβου δ' ἐπ' ὄχθῳ κ.τ.λ. We cannot be sure that these are the very next words in the Chorophori. Euripides only quotes such lines as suit his (i.e. the comedian's) purpose. Orestes stands on the tomb, as a κῆρυξ regularly stands on a βῆμα or on rising ground (cf. Verg. Aen. 5. 44 tumultique ex arboribus fatui). The full meaning is 'upon this for my mound, the mound of a tomb, I proclaim--'t is to my father-- to hearken and give ear.' The synonyms form no mere tautology, but add solemnity or insistence; cf. Thesm. 381 σίγα σιώπα, Eur. Tro. 1303 κλῖετε μᾶθετε. But the difference in tense should also be noted, and ἀκούσαι (cf. ὑπακούειν) suggests the notion of responding. From e.g. Aesch. P. V. 464 κλῖοντες οὐκ ἤκουον, Eur. Phoen. 919 οὐκ ἔαλιον οὐκ ἤκουσα it might perhaps seem that when the words are juxtaposed κλῖεν refers to the ear and ἀκούειν to the mind. But our own 'hearing, they heard not' will show that the distinction is rather drawn from the tone and the oxymoron than from the actual words. This is borne out by e.g. Sappho, fr. 1. 5 εἰ ποτα κἀτέρωτα | τὰς ἑμας αἰδώς ἀλοῖσα πῆλυ | ἔα λυες, Aesch. Ag. 685 τοσαῦτ' ἀκούσας ἰσθὲ τάληθη κλύων.

1175 sq. τεθνηκόσιν. Dionysus again represents the naive popular understanding of a literary point, and is highly pleased with his own perverse perspicacity. οἷς follows λέγοντες, since ἐξικνούμεθα in this sense would require the genitive. For the notion (of addressing the dead ἐν τριτοῖς προσφθέγμασιν or the conclamation) cf. Hom. Od. 9. 65 πρὶν τινα τῶν δειλῶν ἐτάρων τρίς ἑκαστον αὔσαι, Verg. Aen. 6. 506 magna Mentes hic voce vocari.

1181. τῶν σῶν προλόγων κ.τ.λ., lit. 'the verse-correctness of your prologues.' Such double genitives, one defining or descriptive and one possessive, are frequent; cf. Aesch. Cho. 182 καρδίας αλυδώνιον | χολῆς, Soph. El. 681 Ἑλλάδος πρόσχημ' ἀγῶνος. [An accumulation of genitives occurs in Thuc. 4. 10 φόβῳ νεῶν δεινότητος κατάπλου.]

τῆς ὀρθότητος τῶν ἐπῶν. There may be a direct allusion to the ὀρθόπεια cultivated by Protagoras and referred to in Plat. Phaedr. 267 c. The exact use of the term in connexion with that sophist is disputed (see Thompson, ad loc.), but Dionys. Hal. (Dem. p. 1035) calls Plato himself καλῶν ὀρθοπειίας in respect of his 'pure style,' and the word naturally suggests the sense 'correct expression.' Here also, of course, it is 'correct expression' which Aesch. is testing, but (so far as exact rendering of the Greek word goes) ἐπη cannot in comedy simply mean 'expressions.' The sing. ἔπος in occasional phrases retains its old sense (e.g. in ὡς ἔπος εἰπὼν, οἶδεν πρὸς ἔπος, etc.), and a compound like ὀρθόπεια, εὐεπής, is legitimate as = τὸ ὀρθῶς εἰπεῖν, εὖ εἰπεῖν διδάμενος. But in current Attic ἐπη = 'verses,' though here, it is true, they are looked at primarily from the standpoint of their language, as in Λυβ. 638 πότερα περὶ μέτρων ἢ ρυθμῶν ἢ περὶ ἐπῶν; The best comment is the passage in Plat. Prot. 338 κ ἡγοῦμαι . . ἀνδρὶ παιδείας μέγιστον μέρος εἶναι περὶ ἐπῶν δεινὸν εἶναι· ἔστι δὲ τοῦτο τὰ ὑπὸ τῶν ποιητῶν λεγόμενα οἷον τ' εἶναι ξινιέναι ἃ τε ὀρθῶς πεποιήται καὶ ἃ μή· Protagoras' contemporary Prodicus of Ceos also devoted himself particularly to correctness of diction and expression.

1182. ἦν Οἰδίπους κ.τ.λ. The beginning of Euripides' (lost) Antigone. In τὸ πρῶτον and εὐδαίμων is meant the 'first prosperity' as Theban king before the dreadful revelation. Aesch. presses the words in a rigidly literal sense, 'at the first,' and 'with a good genius.'

πρὶν φῦναι . . . πρὶν καὶ γεγονέναι : a deliberate and effective repetition ; 'before he was born . . . before (I say) he so much as existed.' Aesch. appears to be glancing at Euripides' own words in Iphig. 1595 ὦ μοῖρ', ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ὥς μ' ἐφύσας ἄθλιον | . . . | ὃν καὶ πρὶν ἐς φῶς μητρὸς ἐκ γονῆς μολεῖν | ἄγονον Ἀπόλλων Λαῶν μ' ἐθέσπισε | φονέα γενέσθαι πατρός.

φῦναι μὲν . . . There is no sudden interruption by Eur. to explain the absence of the δέ-clause. Aesch. finishes his criticism (1186). But, except for such interruptions, μέν solitarium is restricted to pronouns and a few recognised phrases, e.g. οἶμαι μὲν or οὕτως μὲν ἀκοῖσαι (Kühner-Gerth ii. p. 272). Blaydes therefore is probably right in suggesting πρὶν πεφυκέν' (for the elision see Introd. p. xli). If φῦναι μὲν is, after all, correct, we must suppose that Aesch. interrupts his own thought (which he resumes at 1189 sqq.) with the insistent πρὶν καὶ γεγονέναι ; i.e. he was about to say e.g. πρὶν φῦναι μὲν . . . εἰτα δὲ ἐξετέθη ἐν ὀστράκῳ κ.τ.λ., but the temptation to repeat the notion of πρὶν φῦναι has diverted him from his course.

1188. οὐ δῆτ' : sc. ἐγένετο ἀθλιώτατος. 'No, he did not become most miserable ; rather say he didn't stop (being most miserable).'

πρῶτον : with γενόμενον (= εὐθὺς γενόμενον). [Not πρῶτον μὲν 'in the first place,' which leaves γενόμενον extremely flat.]

1190. ἐξέθισαν ἐν ὀστράκῳ : the exposed child was commonly placed in an earthenware χίτρα, for which ὀστράκον is here a contemptuous substitution. In Hdt. 1. 113 we have simply ἄγγος. Aesch. (fr. 122) used χιτρίδιον in his Ionia. Cf. Vesp. 289 ἐγχιτρίαις and commentators there.

1192. ἤρρησεν, 'went with a mischief upon him.' The mischief in ἔρρειν may be either one which we inflict on others (e.g. Eg. 4 ἐξ οὗ γὰρ εἰσήρρησεν εἰς τὴν αἰκίαν | πληγὰς αἰὲν προστρίβεται τοῖς οἰκέταις) or one which we are ourselves doomed to incur. But to the Greek mind the latter involves the former, and the unlucky man is requested ἀπο-φθεῖρασθαι and not to 'wipe off' (ἐξομώργνισθαι) his ill-luck on his neighbour. Cf. φθεῖρασθαι, ἐκφθεῖρασθαι ποι οὐ πρὸς τινα. Ar. 916 κατὰ τί δειρ' ἀνεφθάρης ; Eur. Andr. 708 εἰ μὴ φθερῇ τῆσδ' ὡς τάχιστ' ἀπὸ στέγης.

οἰδῶν τὰ πόδε. The story attempted to etymologise his name ('Swell-foot'). Cf. Eur. Phoen. 28 σφυρῶν σιδηρὰ κέντρα διακείρας μέσον, ἔθεν τιν' Ἑλλας ὠρύμαζεν Οἰδίποιν. It should be remembered that ποῖς can be used of the whole leg, just as χεῖρ can be used of the whole arm. [The oracle went that Laius, king of Thebes, should be slain by his son, if he had one. Oedipus was born, and, to prevent the fulfilment, he was exposed upon Mt. Cithaeron, with his ankles riveted together. But he was taken up by a herdsman, carried to Corinth, and brought up by King Polybus. Having journeyed to Delphi to inquire as to his parentage, he accidentally met Laius, whom he slew in a quarrel. Proceeding to Thebes he solved the riddle of the Sphinx, married the wife of Laius (his own mother), and became a 'prosperous' king. When the truth was discovered he blinded himself.]

1195 sq. εἰδαίμων ἄρ' ἦν κ.τ.λ., lit. '(if he was εἰδαίμων in that case) then he was εἰδαίμων (also) if he was one of the colleagues of Erasinides.' There is no equivalence here of ἦν with ἦν ἄν. The particle γὰρ throws stress on the unhappy notion of τὸ στρατηγεῖν μετ' Ἐρ. The allusion is once more to Arginusae. Erasinides was the first of the στρατηγοὶ to be attacked (by Archidamus, sup. 418). Six of the ten were put to death (Xen. Hell. 1. 7).

τοῖς προλόγοις καλοῖς ποιῶ, 'I compose my prologues in good style.'

1198. κατ' ἔπος, 'verse by verse.' κνίσω, 'nag at.'

1199. σὺν τοῖσιν θεοῖς : either this or σὺν θεοῖς (the old, and therefore anarthrous, phrase) may be used, but the fuller and more solemn expression is juxtaposed for humorous purposes to the following trivial notion of a ληκέθιον. In the sing. the art. is regularly omitted when no special deity is meant; yet Soph. Aj. 383 σὺν τῷ θεῷ (Lebh, n.).

1200 sq. ἀπὸ ληκυθίου . . διαφθερῶ, 'I will ruin your prologues with (nothing but) one little oil-flask (to work with).' For ἀπὸ of the stock-in-trade cf. 121 ἀπὸ κάλω καὶ θραύιον, Thuc. 2. 77 ἀπὸ τῶν παρίστων δεινῶν ἐλεῖν τὴν πόλιν, 7. 67. Kühner-Gerth i. p. 458.

1202 sqq. ποιῆς γὰρ οὕτως κ.τ.λ. The full humour of the following dialogue is lost to us through our ignorance of contemptuous colloquialisms, and also, we may believe, of certain pastimes. Editors have been for the most part content to state: (1) that there is an attack upon the sameness of manner, both in metre and syntactical structure, with which

Eur. opens his prologues. This uniformity was such that at a certain point of an early line both grammar and metre might be completed by the addition of such words as ληκίθιον ἀπώλεσεν: (2) that Aristoph. intends to ridicule Eur. by the very triviality of the words used, as if such words were not out of keeping with the style of the poet (cf. 959). There is, however, nothing trivial in the real sentences of Eur. subsequently quoted, and the comedian can hardly mean that ληκίθιον ἀπώλεσεν would be an ending suitable to the style of the beginning. We may, therefore, leave this second suggestion out of the account. Undoubtedly the words chosen are meant to form a farcical conclusion to a sentence, but Aristoph. is only showing how easy it is to 'fill in' always with the same absurd formula.

Then why does he choose this particular class of diminutive? In the first place, it is to be feared, because the words ληκίθιον, κωδάριον, θυλάκιον possessed a vulgar application, with which he is playing to the gallery, in order to relieve what might have been a tedious piece of criticism for a great part of the audience (see 1109 sqq.). In the second place one may guess with some confidence that the Athenians had a forfeit-game, in which it was 'one to me' if I could fit on (προσάπτειν) a certain tag to something being said. In such a case the winner cried 'forfeit!' in some such expression as '(you have) lost this or that' (whatever might be at stake). If, on the other hand, the tag could not be affixed, the payment was the other way. If Eur. could get through one prologue without incurring the ληκίθιον he would 'get it back.' With such an assumption we are at least in a position to give a rational meaning to προσάψαι (1216, 1231, 1231), ἀποπρίω 'buy back' (1227), ἀπόδος 'give back' (1235). Meanwhile some of the remarks of Dionysus refer to other, and occasionally unedifying, uses of ληκίθιον. Natural articles to stake or forfeit would be the ληκίθιον 'little oil-flask,' θυλάκιον 'little bag' (wallet or purse, Lucr. 314), κωδάριον 'little rug': but particularly the ληκίθιον, which was carried for a variety of purposes. A ληκίθος was a small narrow-necked vessel in which were carried oil for the bath or for gymnastic exercises, perfumes, and sometimes wine. They were commonly of earthenware and of little value (cf. 1236). Aeschylus is prepared to start with a stock of only a single ληκίθιον (ένος μόνου 1201) and win. [It is apparently from this passage that the later grammarians gave the name ληκίθιον or μέτρον Εὐκπίδειον to the part of a verse corresponding in χρόνοι to — √ √ √ — √ —.]

κωδάριον or ληκίθιον or θελάκιον.' The sense of ἄπαν is defined or limited by what follows, and καὶ . . . καὶ . . . = 'whether it be . . . or . . .'. [It must be admitted that there is some awkwardness in this, and it is possible that for the first καὶ we should read κατὰ (a frequent corruption; cf. 1393), 'anything after the style of κωδάριον, etc.' Cf. Hdt. 1.98 ἄλλοι ποταμοὶ οὐ κατὰ τὸν Νεῖλον ἔοντες μεγάλα, Plat. Apol. 17. 13 ὁμολογοῖεν ἂν οὐ κατὰ τοῦτοις εἶναι ῥήτωρ.]

1206. Αἰγνπτος κ.τ.λ.: from his Archelaus.

1208. Ἄργος κατασχών, 'having put in to Argos,' poetical accus. of destination; cf. Eur. Hcl. 1206 πόθεν κατέσχε γῆν; Soph. Phil. 270 κατέσχον δεῦρο ναυβάτη στόλῳ.

1209. τουτὶ τί ἦν κ.τ.λ.: cf. 1206, and, for ἦν, 39 n. [There is no improvement through punctuating τουτὶ τί ἦν; τὸ ληκίθιον οὐ κλαύσεται;]

οὐ κλαύσεται; a form of threat or imprecation; cf. 178 οὐκ αἰμώζεται: Dionysus humorously identifies himself with the cause of Eur. here and in 1214, 1220, 1228.

1210. ἵνα καὶ γνῶ, 'so that I may get an idea.' The function of καὶ is to throw a tone upon the verb, and the whole is practically equivalent to our 'let me see.' πάλιν is best joined with λέγ' ἔτιρον πρόλογον. [Others read γνῶ, 'so that he may be taught a lesson.'] θύρσοις: wands tipped with a pine-cone and wreathed in ivy. The word is joined to καθαπτός ('decked in') by a slight zeugma, the whole θύρσοις καὶ νεβρῶν δοραῖς being regarded as the dress or σκευή (cf. [Eur.] Rhes. 202 σκευὴν πρεπόντως σῶμ' ἐμὸν καθάψομαι). For this σκευή of the Bacchanals cf. Eur. Bacch. 176 θύρσοις ἀνάπτειν καὶ νεβρῶν δορὰς εἶχειν.

1214. εἶμοι πεπλήγμεθ' αὖθις: apparently an echo of tragedy:

cf. Aesch. Ag. 1311 ὦμοι μάλ' αἰθις δευτέραν πεπληγμένοι. In that case ὑπὸ τῆς Ληκύθου is probably a παρά προσδοκίαν for some tragic expression (e.g. τῆς ξιμφορᾶς): 'Ah me! again they smite us with the flask.' It is in the comic vein for Dionysus to bewail his own loss of a Ληκύθιον as described in what happened to Διώνυσος κ.τ.λ. Here, if anywhere, he must make common cause with his poet.

1215. οὐδὲν ἔσται πρᾶγμα, 'it won't matter' (we shall make up for it yet); cf. πρᾶγματα ἔχειν, παρέχειν and Eur. Med. 451 κάμοι μὲν οἰδὲν πρᾶγμα.

1217 sqq. οὐκ ἔστιν κ.τ.λ.: from the Stichenekke (schol.). The third line was completed with πλουσίαν ἀροῖ πλάκα.

1218. πεφυκῶς ἑσθλός: if this means 'of good birth,' in the aristocratic sense of ἑσθλός, bonus, we have a violation of the rule that γέγονα, πέφυκα ἑσθλῶς is used of birth and rank (cf. 'well-born'), but γέγονα, πέφυκα ἑσθλός of character or form. The rule is upheld by Collet, I. L. pp. 157 sqq., with great cogency, although (as too often) he is compelled to defy MSS. in at least one instance of γεγονέναι (Lysias 19. 12). In reality the rule, if good for γέγονα, will not hold for πέφυκα with the adverb. Even if Soph. El. 989 τοῖς καλῶς πεφυκόσιν, Antiphon 115 καλῶς πεφυκότες, be considered ambiguous or comprehensive, in Isoc. 190 οὕτω γὰρ τινες δισκόλως πεφύκασιν is decisive enough. It is hardly to be assumed therefore that, on the other hand, the rule with the adj. was absolutely inviolable. Nevertheless it is probable that in the present instance the rule is observed, and that the proper rendering is 'of good type.' It is hardly in the spirit of Euripides to prize social rank as against character, and assuming that the sentiment is his own) ἑσθλός to him would mean 'good' in the moral sense (found in εὐγενής), while δισγενής also is moral.

1220. ὑφέσθαι μοι δοκεῖ, 'we had better lower sail' (submittere, contrahere vela); cf. 999 n., Soph. El. 335 νῦν δ' ἐν λαοῖς μοι πλεῖν ὑφειμένη δοκεῖ. Plut. Lucull. 3 μεθ' ἡμέραν μὲν ὑφειμένοις πλέων τοῖς ιστίοις καὶ ταπεινοῖς, νύκτωρ δὲ ἐκαιρομένοις. [The MSS. reading δοκεῖς could only mean 'you seem to me to have shortened sail.']

1221. τὸ Ληκύθιον κ.τ.λ.: the comparison of the Ληκύθιον to a gale (which has prompted ὑφέσθαι) must be induced by some lost trick of phraseology or pun (e.g. upon some wind) familiar to sailors). πνεύσεται πολύ as in ἀνεμος πνεῖ μέγας, πολὺς, λαμπρὸς, etc. [The mss. agree in πνευσείται, as they do in πλευσίσθαι in Thuc. 8. 1. These 'Doric' forms are, however, very doubtful in Attic of the best period. φευξοῦμαι as well as φείζομαι is warranted by the metre in Euripides and Aristophanes, but the evidence for πνευσοῦμαι, πλευσοῦμαι, κλαισοῦμαι, ρενσείται is very weak. See Rutherford, New Phryn. xxiii. It can scarcely be an accident that the letter υ occurs in the root syllable of all the verbs affected. We can but suppose that it exerted some assimilative influence.]

1225 μη. Σιδώνιον ποτ' κ.τ.λ.: from the Phrynia. The concluding words were ἔκετ' ἐς Θήβης πέδον, or, in a second version of the same play (as reported by Tzetzes circ. A.D. 1150), ἦλθε Θηβαίαν χθόνα | Φοῖνιξ πεφυκώς. The 'son of Agenor' is Cadmus.

ἀποπρίω, 'buy back the (forfeited) flask.' See Introd. note to 1202 σημ. and cf. 1235. Euripides has lost it to Aeschylus. ἀπο- has the same sense as in ἀποδιδόναι, ἀπολαμβάνειν.

1228. ἡμῶν: Dionysus more or less ironically identifies himself (cf. 1209) with the cause of Euripides.

1229. ἐγὼ πρίωμαι τῷδ': 'What, I buy it from (= to please) him!' For the dat. cf. 1134, Ραι. 1261 τοῦτω τὰ δόρατα ταῦτ' ὠνήσομαι, Ach. 812 πόσου πρίωμαι σοι τὰ χοιρίδια: He will not buy it, but will simply get it back, by defeating Aeschylus with a prologue which he cannot fit with the ληκίθιον.

1232. Πῶς κ.τ.λ.: from the Iphigenia in Tauris. The completion was Οἰνομάδον γαμῖ κόρην.

1235. ὦ γὰρ: to Aeschylus. ἔτι καὶ νῦν: sc. though you have won it and held it so long. ἀπόδος, 'give it back.' The slightly supported variant ἀπόδου ('sell it'), which originated in conjecture, spoils the sense.

1238-41. Οἰνέει ποτ' κ.τ.λ.: from the Melager. The schol. tells us that this was not the actual beginning of the play, but came 'after a number of lines' commencing with Καλεῶν μὲν ἦδ' ἐγὰρ Δελφίας χθονός. But Fritzsche is probably right in supposing that such an exordium was a later addition of (perhaps) the younger Euripides. A late schol. quotes for the ending of the second line οὐκ ἔθισεν Ἀρτέμιδι, but this is, of course, unmetrical, and can only represent the general sense. [Many editors show some favour to a conjecture of Fritzsche, οὐκ ἔτισεν (better ἔτισεν) Ἀρτεμιν; but unhappily Attic cannot use ἔτισα in the sense of ἐτίμησα.] It seems idle to guess at the exact words.

1244. Ζεὺς, ὡς λέλεκται κ.τ.λ.: generally supposed to be from the play called Μελανίπη ἡ σοφὴ (the other being Μελανίπη ἡ δεσμώτις). There is a difficulty here, since, according to Plutarch (Mor. 756c), the play originally began with Ζεὺς, ὅστις ὁ Ζεὺς, οὐ γὰρ οἶδα πλὴν λόγῳ, but in consequence of the displeasure which met this παρησία (Luc. Jur. Trag. 11) it was altered to Ζεὺς, ὡς λέλεκται τῆς ἀληθείας (πα. According to Gregory Cor. p. 1312 the second verse of the latter began with Ἐλλήν' ἔτικτεν. But to this the Ληκίθιος could not be attached. Gregory, indeed, tells us that the same verse occurs in the Perithous; but in the fragment preserved (N. 591) it stands as the fourth line, and where the Ληκίθιος is equally impossible. We are forced to suppose that the second line of the Melanippe contained not Ἐλλήν' ἔτικτεν, but Ἐλλήνα τίτων. This Dionysus foresees, and it ought further to be assumed that Aristoph. shrinks from flatly finishing his usual sentence in the case of Zeus. Hence the interruption of Dionysus.

1245. ἀπολεῖς: mss. are divided between this and ἀπολεῖ σ'. The latter = 'he will undo you,' viz. with his Ληκίθιος. The former is either (1) 'you will be the death of us' or 'weary us to death,' viz. by always trying and always failing; cf. Vesp. 1201 ΦΙΛ. τὰς χάρακας ὑφειλόμην. | BΔΕ. ἀπολεῖς με. ποῖας χάρακας; Eccl. 775 ἀπολεῖς ἀπιστῶν πάντα. In the same sense the comedians use ἀποκναίειν, ἀποκνίγειν, ἐπιτρίθειν (cf. enecare); or (2) 'you will be the death of us (by making him actually say this of Zeus).' The former is more natural, is supported by analogies, and is suitable to the winding up of the subject.

ἴφθι: gnomie (Kühner-Gerth i. pp. 160 sq.). Though an aor. ἴφθι came to be used in tragedy as a simple present (— 'I am'), it does not belong to the language of comic trimeters: still less could it be so used when there is no adjective.

1248. τὰ μᾶλ', 'his (lyrics and their) tunes.' (cf. 1329 n.). It is not the language but the music which Eur. is about to attack. All educated Athenians studied μουσική in the narrower sense, including non-professional performance on the lyre and comprehension of the modes. The dramatist was his own composer of tunes or melodies. The matter was much more simple than in modern times, inasmuch as the Greek ἀρμυρία included none of our 'harmonies,' but represented only the 'fitting sequence' of notes according to keys which could be almost mathematically studied. In the following scene the criticisms can hardly be fully apprehended without hearing the tunes, but it is clear that Aeschylus is blamed for making his melodies too monotonously dactylic and simple. Given one line, or set of bars, you could (says Eur.) always follow on with a certain sequence which fitted into the system as readily as the ληκέθιον into the iambs of Euripides. You could, for instance, after a verse like 1265 sing on with ἡ κόπον οὐ πελάθεις ἐπ' ἀρωγάν (i.e. tē-tūm-tē tē-tūm-tē tē-tūm-tē tē-tūm-tūm), and that set of notes would do equally well in all sorts of places in his lyrics. Or, when the songs were accompanied by the harp, you could strum on, after each line, with τοφλαττο-θραττοφλαττοθράτ (1286) (= ticingle ticingle ticingle ticingle).

The criticism has been much misunderstood. It is not meant that Aesch. uses a meaningless refrain, e.g. ἡ κόπον κ.τ.λ. There would be no truth in such a statement. The carping is purely musical, as if we said that his tunes were all 'common metre.' According to Euripides his great sentiments or phrases are followed by absurdly simple and monotonous hanjo-notes. Meanwhile the objection made to Euripides by Aeschylus, from the musical point of view, is that he picks up all sorts of airs—from catches and dirges and (to give a modern equivalent) music-halls—and mixes them incongruously, adding plenty of 'shakes.' He has series of rapid notes which take from the dignity of tragic lyric. With these faults there also go faults of language, e.g. repetitions and the blending of trivialities with higher poetic diction.

1249. καὶ μὲν ἔχω γ' ὥς . . ἐπιδείξω. There is little to choose between ἐπιδείξω of R (cf. Dem. 1020, etc.) and ἀποδείξω of the other mss., but since ἐπιδείκνυμι more clearly conveys the idea of offering specimens in proof, while ἀποδείκνυμι rather suggests argumentation, the former is to be preferred. Editors

(after Dobree) mostly read ὥς for ὡς on the ground that ὡς could not stand for ὅπως ('I have the means to . . .'). But (1) since ἔχω κακῶς, καλῶς, οὕτως, etc., are good Greek, it may be that ἔχω ὡς ἐπιδείξω is also colloquially good in the sense 'I am so situated that . . .'; lit. 'I am placed how (- in the way in which) I shall'; (2) that ὡς, though less frequent, can be used in a formula of this kind for ὅπως appears from Soph. Ant. 750 ταύτην ποτ' οὐκ ἔσθ' ὡς ἔτι ζῶσαν γαμεῖς, Phil. 196 οὐκ ἔσθ' ὡς οὐ θεῶν του μελέτη (πορεῖ).

1252. φροντίζειν γὰρ ἔγωγ' ἔχω. As there appears to be no parallel to ἔχω φροντίζειν in any other sense than 'I am able to be anxious' (which is an absurd expression), it seems probable that we should read φροντίζων . . . ἔχω, 'I keep troubling my mind.' It is true that ἔχω is not commonly joined with other participial tenses than the aorist, but the perfect occurs two or three times (e.g. Soph. O. T. 701, Phil. 600), and the present is found in Eur. Tru. 317 πατρίδα φίλαν καταστένοισ' ἔχεις. Nor is there anything a priori remarkable in this application of the intrans. ἔχω. As ποιήσον ἀνίσας and ἀνίσσον ποιήσας, φθάνω ποιῶν and ποιῶ φθάνων are quite interchangeable, so ληρεῖς ἔχων, τί ἔστηκ' ἔχων; (cf. 202, 512) are theoretically interchangeable with ληρῶν ἔχω, τί ἔστως ἔχω: The instance from Euripides shows this to be more than theory, and the verse here is lyric and parodied from some higher style.

1256. τῶν μέχρι νυν. The mss. give the unmetrical τῶν ἔτι νῦν ὄντων, with variant τῶν νῦν ἔτ' ὄντων. The reading in the text is borrowed from the explanation in the schol. τῶν μέχρι νῦν ὄντων ποιητῶν. But it is not good to press such merely necessary words in an exegesis. Bentley regarded ὄντων as an adscript, and read τῶν ἔτι νυνέ. Yet, judging from the two positions in mss., it is νῦν which is the adscript, incorporated in different positions by different texts. Possibly, therefore, we should read τῶν ἐπιόντων, 'his successors.' The idiom by which a person is said to be κάλλιστος τῶν ἐπιόντων is too familiar to need more than the reminder of ἀξιολογώτατον τῶν προγεγενημένων.

1259 sq. τὸν βακχεῖον ἀνακτα: implying (1) 'the inspired lord (of song),' (2) 'king of the Bacchic stage.' The words strongly indicate parody. In the Orphic Hymn 30 the expression is applied to Dionysus himself. ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ: sc. Euripides, for his daring and probable defeat. [Many editors suspect the last four lines, partly because they repeat the notion of 1252-1256, and partly because they separate μέλη (1255) rather widely from the retort of Euripides (1261).

Possibly, of course, there is a blending of the two editions of the play (Introd. p. xxvi), but the arguments are not strong, particularly when we remember that the whole passage is probably an adapted semi-quotation.]

1261. δείξει: impersonally. Cf. Vesp. 993 ΦΙΛ. πῶς γὰρ ἠγωνίσμεθα; BΔΕ. δείξειν εἴκεν, Dem. 24. 1 δοκεῖ δ' εἰμαγεῖν δείξειν οὐκ εἰς μακρὰν. More usually a subject is expressed in the shape of αὐτό or τοῦργον αὐτό, e.g. Eur. Phoen. 624 αὐτὸ σημαίνει.

1262. ἀς ἐν . . ξυντεμῶ, 'I will cut them all down to one (pattern).' See introductory note to 1248. [In μῶλη there may also be a play upon the sense 'limbs' - 'I will make mincemeat of him.' Cf. καταχορδαίνειν, μυττωτρίζειν.]

1263. τῶν ψήφων, 'some of the counters (which are here).' The art. in such cases is really demonstrative.

1264. Preceding this line there is in the MSS. a stage-direction διαύλιον προσελθεῖ τις, i.e. there is a passage of music on the flute serving as interval. Such παρεπιγραφαί are rare in MSS., but a well-known instance is that of μυγμός and ὠγμός as stage-directions in Aesch. Eum. 117 sqq.

1264 sq. Φθιώτ' Ἀχιλλεύ κ.τ.λ. The envoys (πράξεις) thus address Achilles in the Myrmidons. 'Achilles, hero of Phthia, why, when thou hearest the blows of slaughter (befalling the Greek army through thy absence), dost thou not come to the rescue?' Euripides of course chants this to the flute in exaggerated mimicry of the actual tune of Aeschylus.

1266. Ἑρμῶν μὲν κ.τ.λ.: from the Psychagogoi, where it is sung by the Arcadians about Lake Stymphalus, who claimed to be descended from the Hermes so closely identified with Mt. Cyllene.

1267. ἰὴ κόπον κ.τ.λ. The words are simply repeated from 1265 to show that, musically, the same bars will do. There is no notion of ridiculing a meaningless refrain (see note to 1248). Such epiphormia as Aeschylus uses are in no way irrelevant, nor are they of characteristic frequency.

1268. δύο σοι κόποι κ.τ.λ. Dionysus joins in, sarcastically chanting in the same dactylic tune. He takes two of his counters (1263), and says 'that's two κόποι to you, Aeschylus.' κόποι not only refers to ἰὴ κόπον, but means that Euripides has succeeded in getting in two 'blows.' So 1272.

1273. εὐφραμίτε κ.τ.λ. : from the Ἱέρεια. The construction is πέλας (εἰσιν, ὥστε) οἶγεν κ.τ.λ. The μελισσονόμοι are priestesses of Artemis, one of whose titles was Μέλισσα. Priestesses themselves, both of Artemis and of other divinities (Cybele, Demeter, etc.), were also called μέλισσαι. Cf. Pind. P. 1. 60 Δελφίδος μελίσσας. No satisfactory explanation of the word is yet forthcoming. It is very probably a Gracized form of some foreign term.

1276. κύριός εἰμι θροεῖν κ.τ.λ. : from the Agamemnon (101). 'I have warrant to tell of the favourable omen of victory (seen) upon the going forth of the brave (to Troy).' The next words are the dactylic ἐκτελέων ἔτι γὰρ θεόθεν καταπνέει . . . The omen was that of two eagles rending a hare.

1278. τὸ χρῆμα τῶν κόπων ὅσον. 'what a lot of κόποι!' (lit. 'what a business of the λόποι'). Cf. Lucr. 2 ὦ Ζεὺ βασιλεῦ, τὸ χρῆμα τῶν νεκρῶν ὅσον.

1279. ἐς τὸ βαλανεῖον βούλομαι. 'I want to go to the bath.' He professes to be suffering so much from κόποι (in the other sense of 'exhaustion') that he must seek the orthodox remedy. Cf. Arist. Problem. 1. 39 τοῖς μὲν θερινοῖς λόποις λουτρῷ ἰᾶσθαι δεῖ, τοῖς δὲ χειμερινοῖς ἀλείμματι. The idiom (ellipsis or brachylogy) by which the verb of going is omitted is readily paralleled (though Apollonides, Comm. Frag. ii. 850 ἐπὶ τὴν τράπεζαν βούλομαι is not in point). Cf. Theoc. 15. 117 ὦρα ὅμως κῆς οἴκου, Xen. Hell. 2. 3. 20 κελύσαντες ἐπὶ τὰ ὄπλα, Cic. ad Att. 6. 7 Rhodum volo puerorum causa, Milton. Sam. Agon. 1250 He will directly to the lords. The omission of other verbs is less frequent, but sometimes occurs where the sense is obvious. Cf. Herod. 1. 3 τίς τὴν θύρην ; (sc. ἐκοψε).

1281. στάσιν μελῶν, 'set of lyrics.' It is natural to compare this with the technical word στάσιμον (μέλος) used of a lyric passage sung by a chorus when in position (i.e. not marching : but στασις may simply = σίστημα (Kock).

1284. ὅπως Ἀχαιῶν κ.τ.λ. : from Agon. 110. The passage runs (after θροεῖν sup. 1275) ὅπως Ἀχαιῶν δῖθρονον κράτος.

Ἑλλάδος ἦβας (ἦβαν mss. of Aesch.) | ξύμφρονα ταγάν, | πέμπει ξὺν δορὶ καὶ χερὶ (δίκας mss. of Aesch. in place of καὶ χερὶ, evidently from an adscript to the next word) πράκτορι | θούριος ὄρνις Τερκρίδ' ἐπ' αἶαν. [The present place lends much help to the correction of the Aeschylean mss.] Aristoph. makes Eur.
 jumble these and other lines together for comic purposes, but their intention is not to attribute any such incoherence to Aeschylus, but to illustrate the point that musically 'it is all the same.'

δίδρονον κράτος: Agamemnon and Menelaus, the joint commanders.

Ἑλλάδος. If ἦβας is right, this = Ἑλληνικῆς or Ἑλληνίδος.
 Cf. Soph. Phil. 223 σχῆμα . . Ἑλλάδος στολῆς.

ἦβας: cf. ἡλικία, iuventus, pubes. [For a probable ἦβαν see crit. n.]

1285. φλαττόθρατ: an imitation of one species of harp accompaniment (κροῦσις), as θρεττανερό is of another (Phil. 290).
 In Thesm. 48 βομβηλοβομβάξ represents one sound of a trumpet, as Ennius' tarulatura does another.

1286. Σφίγγα κ.τ.λ.: from the Sphinx, the satyric drama which went with the Aeschylean (Oedipodea or trilogy of Laïus, Oedipus and Siren against Thebes).

δυσამεριᾶν πρότανιν, 'who presides over (dispenses) misfortunes' (to Thebes). Cf. Pind. P. 6. 24 στεροπᾶν κεραύνων τε πρότανιν.

κύων: of a dogging agent, sent by some malevolent power.
 Cf. 472 n., Soph. O. T. 391 ὅθ' ἡ ραψφῶδες ἐνθάδ' ἦν κύων.

1289. σὺν δορὶ κ.τ.λ.: Agam. 113.

πράκτορι, 'avenging.' The masc. form of adjectives of the agent in -τηρ -τωρ is frequent in verse with fem. nouns. Cf.
 Aesch. S. c. T. 713 παιδολέτωρ Ἐρις, Syrph. 1050 θέλκτορι Ηπειθῶ, Soph. El. 850 ἰστωρ (of a woman). In Aesch. Enn. 320 the Erinyes call themselves πράκτορες αἵματος.

 κράτος of 1275).

1291. κυρεῖν παρὰσχῶν κ.τ.λ.: from an unknown source.
 Lit. 'having given (it, or them) to the reckless hounds that range the air, to light upon (and treat as they will).' For κυρεῖν, here apparently of vultures, cf. 1287; in Aesch. Ag. 141, P. I.
 1053 of eagles. The meaning is defined from the oxymoron, as in κύμα χερσαῖον (Aesch. S. c. T. 64), πτανοῖσιν κισὶ (Ag. 141), ἀπτεροι Ηελέιαδες, etc. With κυρεῖν cf. Hom. Il. 17. 272 κισὶ κῆρμα γενέσθαι, Od. 3. 271 κάλλιπεν οἰωνοῖσιν ἔλωρ καὶ κῆρμα γενέσθαι.

1293. τὸ συγκλινίς κ.τ.λ. : from the Θρήσσαι. The meaning appears to be 'the combination (or league) against Ajax.'

1296 sq. ἐκ Μαραθῶνος κ.τ.λ. The most natural interpretation of this passage is that in the swampy plain at Marathon there grew a species of rush (φλέως schol.) which was used for making ropes (like σχοῖνος), and that the rope-twisters (ἰμοιοστρόφοι) at their work in the rope-walk, sang a monotonous 'chanty.' Most Greek occupations had their special form of beguiling ditty. Thus Athenæus (618 D) speaks of the ἐπιμήλιος of millers, the αἶλιος of ἱστοργοί (weavers), the ἰούλος of ταλασιουργοί (spinners), the λιτιέρσης of harvesters, and alludes to different ᾠδαί of agricultural labourers, bathmen, etc. There was, it is true, an ἱμαῖος, which is described variously as a song of millers (Ath. 619 B), or, as used by Callimachus (quoted by schol. here), of water-drawers (ἀεῖδει καὶ ποῦ τις ἀνὴρ ὕδατηγός ἱμαῖον). The schol. is therefore led to explain ἰμοιοστρόφον here as referring to the latter. But (1) there seems no reason for connecting this occupation specially with Marathon, (2) the similarly formed σχοινοστρόφος (Pollux) or σχαινοστρόφος (Plut. Mor. 473 C) σχοινοπλόκος, 'rope-twister.' [Possibly there may be included an allusion to the interminableness as well as the monotony, with a glance at the use of σχαινοτετής (cf. Pind. fr. 47 σχαινοτένεια ἀοιδά), but there is no need to press this.]

1299 sq. ἵνα μὴ τὸν αὐτὸν κ.τ.λ. The expression is rather condensed and = 'and I chose to adopt these simple melodies which you dislike) in order that I might not trespass on the preserves of Phrynichus,' i.e. Aesch. deliberately avoided similarity to the proverbially 'honeyed' lyrics of that poet, preferring to go back to the plain and regular νόμοι of Terpander (1282 n.).

Φρυνίχῳ. The chief characteristic of the melodies of Ph. was their sweetness. The Elizabethans would have called them 'sugared,' as the Greeks called them 'honey.' Cf. Pers. 220 ἀρχαιομελισιδωνοφρυνιχήρατα, Ar. 750 ἔρθεν ὥσπερ ἐλ μέλιτα Φρύνιχος ἀνδρῶσι μὲν ἀπὸ τῆς καρπύης ἀλ' ἐφ' ὧν γλυκυσίαν ᾠδάν. Hence the following metaphor of the 'meadow.'

Lucian (Pier. 7) varies this figure with τὸν Λευῶνα ἐκείνον (of Plato's writings) ἀναπετάσαντες οἱ κελώσαντες δρέπεσθαι κ.τ.λ. The metaphor from the bee occurs also in Plat. Ion 534 α ἐκ Μουσῶν κήπων . δρεπόμενοι τὰ μέλη ἡμῖν φέρονσιν ὥσπερ αἱ μέλιτται.

1301. οὗτος . . παροινίων, 'but this fellow gets (his) honey from all sorts of drinking-songs.' μέλι is A. Palmer's perfect emendation of the meaningless μὲν of MSS. (MEN - MEAN). μέλι keeps up the metaphor, supplies an obj. to φέρει, and its sarcasm is obvious. παροινίων (Kock) is by no means a certain emendation of the MSS., but it is at least convenient. παροῖρια (ῥήματα) are songs sung παρ' οἴνῳ.

1302. σκόλιον. The σκόλιον was a convivial catch sung to the lyre at a banquet. Among the Athenians 'its prevailing characteristic is, in a simple form, to reproduce or twist the thought of some famous poem, to amplify some well-known sententious utterance, or to picture some scene from a popular story' (Smyth Greek Melic Poets, p. ciii). How the word was derived from some sense of the adj. σκολιός is a problem much discussed (ibid. pp. xcv sqq.). It had probably nothing to do with a succession of singers zigzagging round the symposium; but it may very well have been deduced from the very 'twisting' mentioned above.

Μελήτριου. This man, an indifferent tragic poet who also composed amatory pieces (Ath. 605 ε), is often assumed to be the same as the accuser of Socrates (Plat. Ap. 23 ε Μέλητρος μὲν ἐπέθετο ὑπὲρ τῶν ποιητῶν ἀχθόμενος). There is, however, a great difficulty in the fact that Plato speaks of Meletus as young and unknown at the date of the trial of Socrates (399 B.C.). Moreover, a poet Meletus was referred to in the Georgy of Aristophanes as early (apparently) as 425 B.C.; and it is out of the question that a man who was young and unknown in 399 B.C. should have composed σκόλια which were in vogue during the activity of Euripides. Different persons of the same name occur too often in Athenian history for us to identify the bearer of the name Μέλητρος in this facile manner. The Meletus here may have been the father (or even the grandfather) of the accuser of Socrates, and the defence of the poets on the part of the latter may have been taken up either for his father's sake or because he was walking in his father's steps.

1303. χοροῶν. 'dances,' i.e. dance-music (cf. 247 n., and a fragment of Pratinas ἀκούε τὰν ἐμὴν Δωρίαν χορείαν). With the accentuation χορείων the sense is 'dancing-places.' But χορείων appears to be a late word and is out of keeping with the other nouns in the list.

1304. τὸ λύριον, 'the (usual) lyre (for accompaniments).'

1305. ἐπὶ τούτου. The common reading is ἐπὶ τούτου 'to attack him with,' but this can hardly be the sense, which is rather given by the variant ἐπὶ τούτων, 'in the case of tunes like these.' [ἐπιτούτου of R. plainly points to ἐπὶ τούτου with -τον superscribed in supposed correction.] For the gen. is quoted Plat. Rep. 399 Α ταύταις ἐπὶ πολεμικῶν ἀνδρῶν ἔσθ' ὅτε χρήσει; add Isoc. 6. 41 ἐπὶ μὲν τῆς ἡμετέρας πόλεως οὐδὲν ἔχω τοιοῦτον εἰπεῖν.

τοῖς ὀστράκοις, 'with the castanets' (of earthenware). The tunes of Euripides are fit to be accompanied, not by the lyre, but by the 'bones.' Aeschylus looks round for a female figure (a παραχορήγημα) who has been brought on the scene, and who is using the castanets. He calls her forward ('where is that woman who is rattling with the bones?') and says, 'come here, you Muse of Euripides (i.e. who are good enough for his Muse).' The said Muse is, of course, of slovenly appearance, and she has a remarkable pair of feet (1323 n.).

1308. οὐκ ἐλεσβίαζεν, 'did not act the Lesbian,' with a play upon two senses, (1) 'practised no true music learned from the Lesbians' (Terpander, Sappho and other lyrists). (2) 'had not charms enough to play the part of the Lesbian women' (who, though of loose character, exercised fascinations). The imperf. and ποτέ refer to the time when Euripides was writing. [We must not render 'never used to practise the Lesbian.' This in comedy would be οὐδέποτε ἐλεσβίαζεν. Aristoph. would not use οὔποτε, still less ποθ' . . . οἶ. Lit. 'in days gone by she was not one to practise Lesbian arts.']

1309 sqq. Aeschylus sings illustrations of the lyric melodies of Euripides. The 'Muse of Euripides' preludes with the 'bones' and, after each few bars, rattles a set of notes in keeping with the Euripidean style of music. These κροίσαι, which are not marked in the mss., are to be assumed, as corresponding to the φλαττόθραξ of the harp-accompaniment of Aeschylus (1286, etc.). The following jumble of passages is to be considered as punctuated by the castanets at least after vv. 1312, 1316, 1318, 1319, 1321. While it is true that the absurd medley is intended to be amusing as such, the immediate object is not to ridicule any alleged incoherence of Euripides himself. Aesch. is concerned with the peculiarities of the music, which he considers to be wretchedly irregular and undignified (χαρακτηρίζει τὰ Εὐριπίδου μέλη ὡς ἐκλελυμένα schol.). We do not possess any precise understanding of the principles involved, but it is clear that the arrangements of the χρόνοι (the manner in which the short and long syllables were arranged) and the introduction of 'shakes' (1311) were regarded as unworthy departures from the orthodox manner of tragedy. They were better suited to σκόλια, θρηναί and the like (1301 sq.). The audience would, of course, recognise the tunes. The lines are necessarily almost verbatim quotations (except for such a word as στωμάλλετε 1310), but their sources are only partially known to us. 1317 sq. are from Elect. 435 sq.; 1322 from the Herakleides, but for the remainder we can find only slight suggestions of resemblance. Thus in I. T. 1089 occurs a reference to the haleyon, but there all likeness to v. 1309 ends.

1311. νοτίους πτερῶν ῥανίσαι, 'with showers of spray from your plumage.' The combination of νότιος or ὕγρος with ῥανίς and the like is used to limit the noun, which alone would not be definite in meaning.

φάλαγγες, 'long-legged spiders,' are substitutes for e.g. γυναῖκες, as is shown by the following words concerning the loom and the singing shuttle. In such an original ὑπωρόφιοι would mean 'indoors,' but Aristoph. converts it into 'under the ceiling.'

1316. κερκίδος αἰδοῦ μελίτας, lit. 'the exercises (= studied productions) of the musical shuttle,' in appos. to πρῆσιματα. For the humming of the kerkis cf. Verg. Aen. 7. 14 arguto percurrentes pectine telus, l. 1. 293.

1317 sq. ἔν' ὁ φλαυλος . . κυανεμβόλοις: verbatim from El. 435. The fondness of the dolphin for music was proverbial (cf. the story of Arion). He would be attracted by the flute of the τραηραύλης (sup. 205); cf. Plin. H. N. 9. 8 Delphinus mulcetur symphoniae cantu et praecepit hydrauli sono.

πρόραις: not local, but dat. commoii. They dance 'to the prows,' as if in their honour: cf. χορεύειν, ὀρχεῖσθαι, χορὸν ἱστάναι τινί and 145 n.

κυανεμβόλοις; cf. El. 554 κυανέμβολοι . . τρήραις and the Homeric κυανόπρωροι. Aeschylus (Pers. 562, Suppl. 751) has κυανώπιδες. The word is restricted to ships of war, and may have been derived from a facing of blue steel.

1319. μαντεία καὶ σταδίων: a new quotation without reference to the preceding clause. Doubtless we might make the words depend on ἔπαλλε as a contained accus., 'it leaped in (—so as to give) omens and (so as to perform) races.' But the preceding lines are quoted directly, and there is nothing in the context to correspond to this. Aesch. is simply singing an odd bar or two, well known to the audience, to illustrate the musical and metrical point. The same may be said of the next two lines.

1323. ὄρεῖ τὸν πόδα τοῦτον; This may be a quotation from the Telephus or the Philoctetes, where a maimed leg was in question. There is, of course, a reference to the peculiar metrical feet of Euripides, and, in illustrating, the actor would display first the one foot of the 'Muse' and then the other (1321). The two feet would be a comically shapeless and ill-matched pair.

1330. μονοδιῶν: see 849 n. The monody which follows is one of the 'Cretan' kind, as is shown by Κρήτες (1356) and Δίκτυννα (1359). We must suppose that Aesch. sings and dances this in caricature of some Euripidean ἐπὶ ὄρχημα familiar to the audience, and that his purpose is to ridicule the whole style of composition and performance, from a musical, literary and scenic point of view. Hence the characteristic repetitions of words and the lapses into utterly prosaic diction and trivial matter. The whole is an excellent burlesque, containing enough reminiscences of the original Euripides to impart verisimilitude, while affording opportunities for the gentle 'art of sinking in poetry'.

1334. ψυχὰν ἀψυχον: cf. Hec. 610 νόμφην τ' ἀνομφον παρθένον τ' ἀπαρθρονον. Such expressions are no special mark of Euripides; they belong to tragic language in general, and are sufficiently frequent in Aesch. himself (e.g. Pers. 682 νᾶες ἀναες, Choi. 42 χάριν ἀχαριν).

1336. μελανονικνείμενα, 'clad in the black garb of the dead, i.e. a ghost-hogey. The denizens of the underworld appear in black; cf. (of the Furies) Aesch. Eum. 372 ἡμετέραις ἐφύδοις μελανείμοσιν, and (of ordinary ghosts) Lucian Philops. 32 καί τινες τῶν νεανίσκων, ἐρεσχηλεῖν βουλόμενοι αὐτὸν (sc. Democritus) καὶ δειματοῦν, στείλαμενοι νεκρικῶς ἐσθῆτι μελαίνῃ κ.τ.λ.

1338. ἀλλά μοι ἀμφίπολοι κ.τ.λ.: from the Trojanidae (schol.).

1339 seq. ἐκ ποταμῶν . . ἀποκλύσω. After an evil dream it was customary to perform a purificatory ceremony with either running water or water from the sea; cf. Aesch. Pers. 203 καὶ ταῦτα μὲν δὴ νυκτὸς εἰσιδεῖν λέγω | ἐπεὶ δ' ἀνέστην καὶ χερσὶν καλινρόου | ἔψαισα πηγῆς κ.τ.λ., Apoll. Rhod. 4. 660, Pers. 2. 16 ποτὸν πημίνε πημίνε. Technically this was called ἀποδοιομπείσθαι.

ἀποκλύσω: of washing away from one's self the middle would be more usual (cf. ἀπονίζομαι, ἀποκαθαίρεσθαι, ἀποέμπομαι, etc.). Nevertheless there is nothing to prevent a Greek writer from treating the action objectively, simply as it affects the thing removed.

1341. πόντι δαίμον : Poseidon. Whatever may have been the motive of the invocation in the original, it is here brought into sharp and sudden contrast with the prosaic τοῦτ' ἐκείνο. 'O God of the Sea! —so that's it!' (i.e. 'I see what the dream meant; it is that my neighbour Glycer has stolen my rooster').

1342. τάδε τέρα. 'these portents (and their meaning).' The usual plur. is τέρατα, but the present form answers to γέρα, κρέα, etc. It is supported also by a declension (found in Herodotus) of τέρας τέρεος alternative to τέρας τέρατος (Kühner-Blass i. pp. 431 sq.). It is also just the form which a comedian would burlesque. [The reading τάδ' ἔτερα ruins all the sense.]

1350. κνίφαῖος : in the dark before dawn; cf. Verg. G. 3. 102 sub lucem exortans calathis adit oppido pastor. The adj. expressing the time of the action is a common idiom even in current language; cf. Expr. 124 ὁ δ' ἀνιφάνη κνίφαῖος ἐπὶ τῇ λεγαλίδι, ibid. 774 μεσημβρινός, Xen. An. 4. 1. 10 κατέβαινον ἤδη σκοραῖοι. So in Latin verse Verg. G. 3. 538 nocturnus obambulat.

1358. τὴν οἰκίαν : an unpoetical word, deliberately substituted for something in higher style.

1362. ὀξύτατας, 'at their brightest,' 'with keenest light' (as required for the search).

1363. φωράσω : the regular word for searching for stolen goods. Cf. Nub. 499 ἀλλ' οὐχὶ φωράσω ἔγωγ' εἰσέρχομαι, Plat. Leg. 954 A.

1367. τὸ γὰρ βάρος νῦν κ.τ.λ., 'for the weight of our phrases will test us.' The specific gravity of a ῥῆμα depends on the weight and dignity of the matter pressed into it.

comma at με, to supply ποιῆσαι, and to treat the next line as exegetic of τοῦτο (ποιῆσαι). Cf. Plat. Gorg. 491 D ἢ τοῦτο μὲν οἶδεν δεῖ, αὐτὸν ἑαυτοῦ ἀρχειν; Dem. de Cor. 139 διοῖν αὐτὸν ἀνάγκη θάτερον, ἢ μηδὲν ἐγκαλεῖν κ.τ.λ., Soph. Phil. 310 ἐκεῖνο δ' οἶδεῖς, ἥνικ' ἂν μνησθῶ, θέλει, | σῶσαι μ' ἐς οἴκοις. [It is, however, quite possible to construe εἰ δεῖ με τοῦτο τυροπωλῆσαι τέχνην 'if I am to do this cheese-selling of poetry,' τοῦτο being adverbial (contained) accus., as in τοῦτό σε λυπῶ, πείθω, ποιῶ, etc. (cf. 13 15 n.).] τυροπωλῆσαι is treated as a trans. verb, 'treat after the manner of cheese-selling' = τυροπωλιῶς διαθεῖναι. Cf. Poc. 747 ἰδενδροτόμησε τὸ νῦτον, and sup. 798 μειαγωγῆσουσι τὴν τραγωδίαν.

Since v. 1369 is mock-tragic, this might account for the absence of the article with τέχνην, but that absence is more naturally to be explained by the sense 'to weigh out art' (i.e. quantities of it).

1370. ἐπίπονοι, 'strenuous.' They do not give up a difficulty.

[1373. After this verse editors commonly mark a lacuna, on the assumption that 1370-1377 should answer to 1482-1490. But there is no indication of hiatus in the sense here, and the supposed antistrophic correspondence is by no means certain.]

1374. μὰ τόν. For the omission of the name of a deity cf. Plat. Gorg. 486 E φημι μὲν οἶν ἔγωγε. ΣΩ. μὰ τόν, οὐ σύ γε. So μὰ τὴν (Plut. Clcom. 4). Considering the freedom with which the names of the deities were used it is hardly likely that this suppression came of reverence. It more probably originated in indecision or indifference as to which god should be sworn by. It may also be suspected that a name was sometimes deliberately withheld, when an oath was not taken seriously. The consequences of even accidental ἐπιπορκία were thus avoided. The schol. here explains that the ellipse is εὐλαβείας χάριν, and, whatever he may have intended to convey, the expression is more true than if he had said εἰσερκείας χάριν.

1375. τῶν ἐπιτυχόντων: after οὐδέ this is a humorous παρά προσδοκίαν; 'not even if I had been told it by a—man in the street,' lit. 'man I met with' (cf. ὁ τεχών, ὁ ἐπιών). We should have expected e.g. τῶν σαφῶς εἰδόντων, αὐτοπτῶν, παρεστηκότων or the like, but Aristoph. satirises our common credulity, which so readily takes the word of the first gossip.

ii. 156 κοκαύζειν τὸν ἀλεκτριών· οὐκ ἀνέχονται. Aesch. Bekk. 21. 24 ᾄδειν ἀλεκτριόνας Ἀττικῶς· τὸ δὲ κοκαύζειν κωμικοὶ λέγουσιν (i.e. they use that word also). [The 'cuckoo-cuck' originally represented Chanticleer.]

1384. καὶ πολὺ γε. 'very much more . . .' καὶ (etiam) goes closely with the adverb.

καὶ τὸ τοῦδέ γ' αὖ ῥέπει, 'and (lo and behold!) once more his scale descends.' καὶ must (with γε) be used in a tone of sarcastic impatience '(well, you have let go), and, of course . . .' It obviously does not emphasise τὸ τοῦδε, and its position prevents us from joining it to αὖ ('once more').

1395. ἔπος ἄριστ' εἰρημένον, 'an excellently expressed verse.' Cf. 1161.

1400. βέβληκ' Ἀχιλλεύς κ.τ.λ., 'Achilles has thrown two aces and a four.' This is from the Telephus, in which the Greek chiefs are playing dice. It is true that metaphorical allusions to dice are not rare in serious poetry (e.g. Aesch. Ig. 32 τρίς ἐξ βαλοίσσης τῆσδ' μοι φρεκτωπίας, (ho. 967), but the introduction of an actual scene in which the characters are dicing, and also of a line so hopelessly prosaic and trivial, was left for Euripides to venture. Three dice were used, and the highest throw was τρίς ἑξ. Besides its commoner sense κύβος (properly the 'pip' on the dice) has the special meaning of μονάς ('ace'). The throw is, therefore, a poor one and the 'weight' of the line would be small. Dionysus is doubly sarcastic.

Greek often dispenses with the word for 'only,' an emphasis being assumed upon the word to which it would belong. See the editor's note on Plat. Eupr. 333 E εἰ πρὸς τὰ ἀχρηστά (sc. μόνον) χρήσιμον ὃν τρυχάνει.

1402. σιδηροβριθὲς κ.τ.λ. : from the Melampus. The adj. suggests βάρος enough, but the line is easily beaten.

1403. ἐφ' ἑρματος κ.τ.λ. : from the Glaucon Potnicus. The schol. on Eur. Phoen. 1194 quotes the next line as ἵπποι δ' ἐφ' ἵπποις ἦσαν ἐμπεφυρμένοι. This may account for the dat. νεκρῷ, which can anticipate ἐπὶ . . . Cf. Pind. I. 1. 29 ρείθροισι τε Δίρκας ἔφαρεν καὶ παρ' Εὐρώτῃ, Soph. Ant. 366 ποτὲ μὲν κακόν, ἄλλοτ' ἐπ' ἰσθλὸν ἔρπει, and, in comedy, Eg. 610 μήτε γῇ μήτ' ἐν θαλάττῃ, Ar. 740 νάπαισί τε καὶ κορυφαῖς ἐν ὄρεϊσιν. [Otherwise it is easy to read κἄν νεκρῷ, nor is it improbable that the sentence should here be complete.]

1406. οὐδ' οὐκ ἂν ἄραιντ' κ.τ.λ. There is probably only an accidental similarity between this and Eur. Or. 2 συμφορὰ θεήλατος, | ἥς οὐκ ἂν ἄραιτ' ἀχθος ἀνθρώπου φίσις. The Egyptians were proverbially ἀχθοφόροι (schol. here and at Ar. 1133 Αἰγύπτιος πλινθοφόρος).

1407. καὶ μηκέτ' : sc. βασάνιζε τὴν ποίησιν ἡμῶν, or ἔστω ἡ στάσις. The force of καὶ is 'yes (i.e. no doubt he is outweighed as you say), and (we may go further) . . .'

1408 sq. αὐτόν, τὰ παιδὶ' . . . καθήσθω : for both construction and thought cf. 587 ; for Cephisophon as collaborateur see 944 ; for τὰ βιβλία 913.

1410. It is not very clear why some editors assume a lacuna after this line. Dionysus has already said (1401) that the weighing would stop with the next quotations. After Eur. is again beaten, Aesch. boasts that he would be prepared to meet any olds. But, since his test is but a 'sporting offer' which manifestly cannot be adopted, Di. ignores it and proceeds.

1413. τὸν μὲν γὰρ ἡγοῦμαι κ.τ.λ. Dionysus still represents the popular opinion, but beginning to doubt itself. He cannot but realise now that Aeschylus (τὸν μὲν) as poet is σοφός (doctus, cf. 1154 n.), but he also knows that he finds pleasure rather in Euripides (τῷ δ'). [Others reverse the application of the demonstratives, but this misses the above point and itself contains none.]

1419. ἐν' ἣ πόλις σωθεῖσα κ.τ.λ., i.e. 'So that the country, being saved (by the poet's wisdom), may (continue to) hold the proper choric festivals (which belong to me, and which I naturally desire to see maintained).' The function of the poet as teacher of wisdom (1909 sq.) is here put at its highest. In the theatre he can influence the largest Athenian gathering (678) under privilege (686 sq.) more effectively than any ρήτωρ in the assembly. Dionysus therefore proceeds to test their σοφία in the way of political παρανοήσεις. [There is no special allusion to the next Great Dionysia which are to follow in a few weeks. The tragic poet could not 'save the country' in that interval. The reference is general.] The feeling of danger at Athens is clear from this and other places. See Introd. p. xxiii.

ἄξιόν μοι δοκῶ. 'I am minded to take' (= δοκεῖ μοι ἀγαγεῖν): lit. 'I seem (to myself) that I will take.' [From this use of the future there came a (rarer) use of the present infin. in a less decided sense: e.g. Trag. 177 τὸν θεὸν ἐξάγειν δοκῶ (which editors should not change to ἐξάξειν). Aesch. Ag. 16 ὅταν δ' αὖτις ἂν μινύσθαι δοκῶ. 'I seem to myself to be doing this or that' is surely a tolerable idiom of the anticipatory or panoramic present used for the future (Kühner-Gerth i. p. 138.)]

1422. περὶ Ἀλκιβιάδου. See Introd. p. xxiv. Alcibiades was at this time in the Thracian Chersonese. It can hardly be doubted that this discussion is a 'feeler.' The audience would signify its approval or disapproval of the sentiments expressed, and the supporters of Alcibiades would derive hints for their course of action.

1424. τίνα; The general rule is that when an interrog. pronoun, or pronominal adj. or adverb, is repeated by the person questioned, he puts it in the indirect form; i.e. we should expect ἤντινα: (= ἐρωτᾷς ἤντινα γνῶμην ἔχει). But a general habit does not preclude other uses. Blaydes quotes Tr. 1234, Eccl. 761, Luc. 847, etc. in illustration of the direct form. [Doubtless we might here save the rule-- if it were worth while—by giving this τίνα also to Euripides ; but the question is then too eager and the answer less vivacious.]

1427. μισῶ πολίτην κ.τ.λ. : apparently quoted (with more or less modification) from one of his own plays, since πάτραν is tragic, as in 1163. This may account for the variant πέφυκε for φανείται. The rather difficult future is not likely to have been wrongly substituted here for an easy perfect. Probably, therefore, in the original context the word was πέφυκε (or πέφηνε), but here Eur. is making no explicit statement as to what is or has been the case with Alcibiades. He only hates a man 'if he shall (ὅστις = εἰ τις) prove to be' of this character, at the same time broadly hinting that he probably will so prove.

1429. καὶ πόριμον αὐτῷ : made to agree with πολίτην, as if the relative clause had taken the shape of φανοῖμενον βραδὺν κ.τ.λ. [Changes from a relat. clause to an equivalent of another form (or vice versa) are not very common. Yet cf. Simonid. 5. 7 πράξας γὰρ εἴ πᾶς ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός, | κακὸς δ', εἰ κακῶς, Xen. Hell. 1. 4. 4 ταῦτ' οὖν ἀκοίοντες . . καὶ ἐπειδὴ Κῶρον εἶδον, Aesch. Cho. 569 sq. n.]

ἀμήχανον probably combines the active and passive meanings (1) 'resourceless' for his country, (2) a 'helpless' person for it to deal with. For the former (which is rarer) cf. Eur. Med. 408 γυναῖκες ἐς μὲν ἔσθλ' ἀμηχανώταται, | καλῶν δὲ πάντων τέκτορες σοφώταται.

1431 sq. οὐ χρὴ λέοντος κ.τ.λ. It is out of the question that both these lines should stand together. Either we have a combination of the two editions of the Frogs, or (more likely) 1431 was the original line, which Aeschylus somewhere wrote, but which he is here quoting in an altered shape in 1432. Some early reader probably noted the original words in the margin or between the verses. In favour of this view it should be observed (1) that the line with μάλιστα μὲν has the less tragic appearance, (2) that Plutarch (Life. 16), quoting from Aristophanes, gives that line but not the other. [Some mss., it is true, omit 1432, but their authority is not so ancient as that of Plutarch.] The notion of nurturing a dangerous lion's whelp was apparently used by Aesch. in other places besides the well-known Aq. 718 sqq.

1432. ἐκτραφῇ τις : sc. λέων. [The mss. of Plutarch have ἐκτρέφῃ, but the likelihood of ms. corruption was from ἐκτραφῇ, not to it.] It would have been better not to have permitted such a dominating and wayward character as Alc. to be developed in Athens, but, since it has been done, it is best to 'put up with his ways.'

1434. ὁ μὲν σοφῶς . . . σαφῶς: so the mss., but commentators have naturally been at a loss to decide which has spoken σαφῶς, or rather which has not. Each has been allusive, but the opinion of each is clear. Not only is the perplexity removed, but a capital point is made by reading (with Meineke) σοφῶς for σαφῶς: 'the one has spoken wisely, and the other . . . wisely.' Dionysus hesitates and seems to be thinking over a word, and then confesses (probably after glancing round the theatre) that there is nothing to choose. Aristophanes in fact leaves the matter of Alcibiades to the audience. [The appearance of σαφῶς is not difficult to explain. Some early reader or copyist would expect a contrast between ὁ μὲν . . . and ὁ δὲ . . . but finding none, and missing the point, would 'emend' with σαφῶς.]

1437-1442. ἐγὼ μὲν οἶδα κ.τ.λ. In the distribution here offered of this much confused passage it has been assumed that eight lines of the first edition of the play were removed in favour of eight new lines. In some old copy or copies the text of one edition was accommodated in the margin of the other, where it could best find room, part being written high on the page and part lower down. Hence the first five lines of edition a precede the eight lines of edition b (which are written correctly together), while the last three lines follow them. We have, of course, no means of deciding with certainty which of the two editions was the earlier, but, since the troubles of Athens must have been rapidly increasing, it is perhaps to be guessed that the earlier edition would contain the lighter passage. Lines 1437-1441 were declared spurious by the ancient critics Aristarchus (200 B.C.) and Apollonius (A.D. 10).

1438 (1437) sqq. The apparent fooling of the following lines is to be explained (1) as burlesquing some of the far-fetched devices for victory suggested in desperation (cf. Ach. 915), (2) as parody of certain passages of the Palamedes of Euripides (see 1443-1451). That play is the subject of burlesque also in Thesm. 770 sqq., where οἶδ' ἐγὼ καὶ ὅη πέποις ἔα τοῦ Παλαμήδους has a suggestive resemblance to the present place. Ibid. 847 it is said of Euripides οὐκ ἔσθ' ὅπως ! οὐ τὸν

Παλαμῆδην ψυχρὸν δὲτ' αἰσχίνεται. In fr. 578 (from the Palaemides) occur the words πορτίας ἐπὶ πλάσας. Much of the humour is necessarily lost in the absence of the parodied original. At the same time Aristoph. makes an attack upon peculiarities of Cleocritus, Cinesias and Cephisophon.

1438 (=1437). εἰ τις πτερώσας κ.τ.λ. A nom. pendens is anything but rare (cf. Aesch. Eum. 95, 100, 480, Suppl. 455, Eur. I. T. 917, Hec. 970, Hom. Il. 5. 135, etc.). An instance (and there are many) as striking as the present is Eur. fr. 411 πρὸς ἀνδρ' εἰπὼν ἔνα, | πόθουντ' ἄν ἄστοι πάντες. [Except for so many parallels it might be tempting to suggest εἰ τις πτερώσας . . . ἀέριον ἄραι, 'were to lift him into the air.' The form ἄραι for ἀρεῖ is quite admissible in a mock-tragic passage which includes πλάκα, and the resemblance of ἀέριον and αἶραιεν, and of ἄραι and αἶραι, is very close.]

Κλειόκριτον Κινησίῳ. Cleocritus (cf. Ar. 878 στρουθέ, μήτερ Κλειόκριτον) was a large and ungainly person with some fancied resemblance to an ostrich (τὴν δψιν στρουθώδης schol. l.c.). To enable such a bird to fly he must be provided with wings in the shape of Cinesias (see 153 n.), who was very tall and thin. In the Geryllades of Aristoph. (Ath. 551 c) the latter is reckoned among the unsubstantial ἀδοφοῦται. The jest went that he was obliged to wear a board at his waist to prevent him from doubling up with his length and slenderness.

1440 (=1439). νοῦν δ' ἔχει τίνα; 'But what is the idea (or purpose) of it?'

1443 (=1451). εὖ γ', ὦ Παλάμηδες: evidently quoted from that play; 'an excellent device!' φύσις = 'genius.' [In the ordinary position of this line it is entirely pointless.] The inventive genius of Palamedes (of whom Odysseus was jealous, and whose death he compassed) was proverbial. Cf. Eupol. (Com. Frag. ii. 517) Παλαμηδικὸν γε τοῖς ἐν ῥήματι καὶ σοφόν.

τὰ νῦν ἀπιστα κ.τ.λ., 'when we regard as trustworthy that in which we now put no trust, and regard as untrustworthy that in which we do put trust.' It is little wonder that Di. finds this perplexing. ἄπιστα commonly means 'untrustworthy' or 'disloyal,' and τὰ δ' ὄντα πιστά, 'what is really loyal.' But Eur. means by the former 'what is now distrusted' and by the latter 'that in which we trust.' Doubtless also the combinations of sound τὰ νῦν ἀπισταπισθ and τὰ δ' ὄντα πισταπιστά, if not most carefully pronounced (cf. 301 n.), would lead to a fine 'derangement of epitaphs.' The former might become τὰ νῦν ἀπιστ' ἀπισθ and the latter either τὰ δ' ὄντ' ἀπιστ' ἀπιστα or τὰ δ' ὄντα πιστά πιστά. It is most probable that Aristoph. intends to satirise advice capable of such indefiniteness. [In point of fact it is only the subsequent explanation which tells us how to read and interpret the words.]

1448 (=1445). ἁμαθίστερον, 'less learnedly.' The Greek comparative is very often used where we should expect ἥττον with the opposite adjective or adverb (e.g. σκαϊότερος ἐκείνου = ἥττον δεξιός).

1451 (=1448). ὥς σωθῆμεν ἄν. The reading of R . . . χρησαίμεσθα σωθῆμεν ἄν is due to accidental omission through the similarity of -ως and σωθ-, and an attempt to remedy the consequent defect of metre. Not only is the sense too positive, but the form σωθῆμεν is un-Attic. (Rutherford, New Phryn. p. 454 sq.)

1459. ἢ μήτε χλαῖνα κ.τ.λ.: evidently a proverbial expression. We may perhaps render 'if neither soft cloak nor rough cloak agrees with it.' χλαῖνα and σισίρα are opposed also in Resp. 739, 1132-1138. With the Greeks the terms for body clothes and bed-clothes are not always distinguished, and each of these words is applied in both meanings. Thus in Ar. 122. Λυδ. 10 the σισίρα is a bed-blanket, a sense in which χλαῖνα is also frequent. We can hardly decide which application is intended here. Both χλαῖνα and σισίρα are thick and warm for winter, the difference being that the χλαῖνα was commonly made of wool and might be beautified, while the σισίρα was a rug made of skins (sheep or goat) with the hair inwards. Cf. χλαῖνα ἱμάτιον χειμερινόν (Hesych.), and ἡ σισίρα περίβλημα ἄν εἴη ἐκ διφθέρας (Poll. 7. 70). By the χλαῖνα Aesch. means the more refined public men: the σισίρα is the rougher sort.

1461 sq. ἐκεῖ φράσαιμ' ἄν: the surface meaning is 'in the other world' (cf. 82). But we may perhaps guess that the actor makes a sign towards the Pnyx, and signifies that he prefers to give his political views in what the politicians call 'another place.' This would also suit ἄντα in the next line, since the theatre lay below the level of the place of assembly, in which the people were said καθῆσθαι ἄνω (Dem. 285). Good advice may find its way up to that hill. Meanwhile ἀνίημι, ἀναπέμπω are the regular words for sending up influences by the nether powers. With μὴ δῆτα supply τοῦτο ποιήσης or εἴπης.

1463 sqq. τὴν γῆν δταν κ.τ.λ. With δταν cf. 1446 (=1443). The utterance is intentionally rather cryptic. The meaning commonly found (after the schol.) is that the best policy is to leave the enemy to invade Attica, and meanwhile to attack his country with the fleet, making a special point of keeping up the navy as the true resource (πόρος) of the country, the present revenue (πόρος in a somewhat different sense) being in reality ἀπορία, a cause of helplessness, inasmuch as it simply creates an idle state-fed class. Pericles (Thuc. 1. 143) had urged ἢ ἐπὶ τὴν χώραν ἡμῶν περὶ ἡμῶν, ἡμεῖς ἐπὶ τὴν ἐκείνων πλεισόμεθα. But this is scarcely the attitude of Aristophanes, who belongs to the party of peace. It is probable that the words rather mean 'when we (stop the war and can) treat the enemy's country as ours and ours as theirs (i.e. so far as intercourse and trade are concerned), and when we treat our ships as our resource (i.e. spend our money upon them with a view to recuperation and a stronger future revenue), and regard the present (way of dealing with the) revenue as (the cause of) helplessness.'

To this Di. replies 'Capital! only the jurymen swallow it up all by themselves.' The sense of ἀντὰ is derived from the context (=τὰ χρήματα implied in the πόρος): cf. 1025. We might have expected the fut. κατακτεται, but the sense is 'but, no matter what revenue we have, the jury-courts always get it for themselves (and will continue to do so).' Dionysus is naturally interested in the θεωρικόν, and he hints that there would be more of this if less were paid to juries. Aristoph. himself would have been glad of any reduction in the payment of the assembly or courts, since its existence was all in favour of the power of the δῆμος. Cf. in general Eq. 1350 εἰ σοι δύο λεγούτην ῥήτορες, ὁ μὲν ποιῆσθαι ταῦς μακράς, ὁ δ' ἕτερος αὐτὰ καταμισθοφορῆσαι τοῦθ', ὁ τὸν μισθὸν λέγων τὸν τὰς τριῆρεις παραδραμῶν ἂν ὥχετο.

1468. αἰρήσομαι κ.τ.λ. The line (which is parenthetical and is lingered over in order to prolong the suspense of Euripides) is tragic in metre and expression (in the use of ἡ ψυχὴ and of θέλει = βούλεται). With θέλει supply αἰρεῖσθαι.

1469. οὗς ἄμοσας. Though Di. came down intending to fetch Euripides, the statement that he has 'sworn' is but hyperbolic assertion of the eager poet, and meets with a crushing answer from his own Hippolytus. Cf. 101 n.

1472. ὦ μιαιφόντατ' ἀνθρώπων: an abusive combination so frequent that Eur. uses it in forgetfulness of the divinity of Dionysus—not that (in Aristophanes' view) he would care much for divinity. Cf. Av. 1637 (Herakles to Poseidon) ὦ δαιμόνι' ἀνθρώπων Ἠόσειδον.

1475. τί δ' αἰσχρόν κ.τ.λ. Once more Eur. is hoist with his own petard. In the Aeolus he has the line τί δ' αἰσχρόν, ἦν μὴ τοῖσι χρωμένοις δοκῇ: It adds to the humour if the previous line is also an echo of the Aeolus. Plutarch relates that, when Antisthenes (others say Plato) heard in the theatre this questionable doctrine that it is 'only thinking makes it so,' he retorted αἰσχρόν τό γ' αἰσχρόν, κὰν δοκῇ κὰν μὴ δοκῇ. In humorously substituting τοῖς θεωμένοις the actor looks for the ἐπισημασία which will show how the audience takes this verdict in favour of Aeschylus.

1478. τὸ πνεῖν δὲ δειπνεῖν. The jingle and alliteration point the sarcasm. He means that such talk is λῆρος. It gives no practical satisfaction. 'You might as well say that "breathing's breakfast and lying down is eider-down."' "

1480. ἵνα ξενίσω. They are to be wished bon voyage with a 'send-off' dinner. But Aristoph. is also alluding to the banquet to which he assumes that he will be invited as successful with his play (207 n.).

1481. οὐ γὰρ ἀχθεμαι τῷ πράγματι, lit. 'it is a business (or trouble) I don't object to'; a colloquial expression corresponding to the English 'I don't mind if I do.' So the schol. τῷ ἐστιᾶσαι (rather ἐστιᾶσθαι).

1491 sq. χάριεν, 'a proper thing.'

μη Σωκράτει κ.τ.λ. Euripides is regarded as one of the circle of Socrates and as possessing the same taste for sophistical discussion and scepticism. Aulus Gellius (15. 20) says of him auditor fuit physici Anaxagorae et rhetoris Prodicī, in morali autem philosophia Socratis, but the last statement cannot be true in the sense that he was a 'pupil' of Socrates, who was twelve years his junior. Also Soc. had no 'pupils,' but only fellow-seekers, and of these Eur. was one. For Aristophanes' conception of Socrates see the Clouds (423 B.C.).

παρακαθήμενον. The Socratic group regularly seated itself round him. (cf. Plat. Theaet. 169 B οὐ ῥάδιον, ὦ Σώκρατες, σοὶ παρακαθήμενον μὴ διδόναι λόγον.

1500 sq. The interval occupied by . . . I to have filled in the comes on with Aeschylus . . . quiet. Presumably Pluto and Xanthias, who are to make the return journey. it is Xanthias who has played Euripides.] The measure implies a kind of procession (1525), with day ends.

1501. τὴν ἡμετέραν. . . is naturally to be considered the favourite city of the gods (ἱερωτάτης Eq. 582), including Pluto. The Athenians ἀγούσιν ἑορτὰς διπλάσιους ἢ οἱ ἄλλοι ([Xen.] Rep. Ath. 3. 8). But, as the schol. points out, Attica is the special country of Kore (= Persephone, wife of Pluto).

1504. ὅς τ' οὐτὶ κ.τ.λ. For the three ways of death see 121 n. They are here indicated by appropriate presents, which Pluto is sending to certain of Aristophanes' pet aversions.

They are nice little gifts which Di. brings home from abroad. We cannot tell which particular favour Cleophon (678) is to receive in τοῦτ᾽, or Archenomus in τόδε. In regard to the second gift the reading is uncertain. If τοῦτ᾽ is right, it would naturally be the κῶνειον, since it has to be divided. Bergk's τουτουσὶ cures the paroemiac verse (which comes in rather strangely) and, if we understand τοῦς βρόχους, the presentation of a number of halters would make an effective little picture on the stage.

1506. Μύρμηκι κ.τ.λ.: these are not the πορίται, otherwise ὁμοῦ would not have been added. Nicomachus is apparently the subject of Lysias' Orat. xxx. Myrmex and Archenomus are unknown.

1511. στίζας: as if runaway slaves (δραπέται), who were usually so punished (Ar. 750 δραπέτης ἐστιγμένος). It is thus hinted that at least some of them are not genuine citizens; cf. 678 sqq. n.

1513. μετ' Ἀδεϊμάντου κ.τ.λ.: Adeimantus commanded with Alcibiades against Andros (407 B.C.), was a general during the present year, and took part in the battle of Aegospotami, where he in all probability behaved as a traitor. The proper name of his father was Leucolophides (Xen. Hell. 1. 4. 21). The anapaestic metre would not, it is true, admit of Λευκολοφίδου, as it will not of Σοφοκλείου (1516), but, since it was not essential to introduce the father's name, we may assume that Λευκολόφου is a humorous substitution. 'Adeimantus of the white crest' is Ad. the general, who makes a display of his λόφος (cf. 1016, with 925).

1517. ἢν ἄρ' . . ἀφίκωμαι, 'in case I ever come back.' In ἀφικνεῖσθαι the sense is often 'come home' (cf. ἀποδιδόναι, ἀπολαμβάνειν, etc.).

1523. μηδ' ἄκων, 'not even by accident'; cf. Aeschin. 2. 153 ἀνθρώποις τῶν ἁπλῶν, οἳ οἶδ' ἂν ἄκων ἀληθὲς οὐδὲν εἶποι.

1524 sq. φαίνετε . . λαμπάδας: the mystae have their torches (313, 310), and are now to form a procession escorting the departing Aeschylus. To 'show a light' is good Greek; whence also (omitting the noun) φαίνειν = 'give a light'; cf. Theoc. 2. 11 ἀλλά, Σελάνη, φαῖνε καλόν.

1526. τοῖσιν τούτου τούτον: the repeated pronoun is emphatic, lit. 'honour him with the tunes of him (and no one else).' 'For Aeschylus the tunes of Aeschylus,' i.e. the old dactylic measures (1261 sqq., 1285 sqq.), such as the following hexameters. Even the actual words are probably a close adaptation of Aeschylean lines, possibly (as the schol. suggests) from the Glaukos Pothnia. The language is of epic quality (e.g. πάγχε, ἐς φάος ὀρνυμένω).

1530. ἀγαθὰς ἐπινοίας: i.e. through the advice of Aeschylus (1419 sq.). There is a reminiscence of Aesch. Eum. 1013 εἴη δ' ἀγαθῶν | ἀγαθὴ διάνοια πολίταις. There is, indeed, here a general suggestion of the close of that play, with its προπομποὶ and their torches (ibid. 1006).

Κλεοφῶν δὲ μαχίσθω κ.τ.λ.: i.e. we shall make peace; and, if Cleophon (with other opponents) wants to keep on fighting, let him go and do it in his own country (678 sqq.). According to Aeschines (2. 80) Cleophon went about after Arginusae threatening ἀποκόψειν μαχαίρᾳ τὸν τράχηλον εἰ τις εἰρήνης μενησθήσεται.

τούτων: not 'of these spectators,' which would rather require τούτων (cf. 954), but 'of that set,' 'those fellows' contemptuously.
